'WAR ENDED!' SENATE VOTES

U. S. INDICTS 110 BUILDERS IN GRAFT WAR

Material Men and Union Chiefs Hit.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Charging conspiracies which have doubled the price of certain building materials in Chicago, the federal grand jury yesterday returned indictments against 110 individuals and firms in the sheet metal, plumbing, and steamfitting lines.

In three blanket bills by groups they are charged with conspiring to restrain trade in violation of the Sherman act. The result, the bills set up, has been the stifling of competition and the loading down of the building industry by oppressive practices—all of it being eventually shouldered upon the public in the shape of rent.

Prominent Firms Named.

The bills include manufacturers, wholesalers, agents, and union officials. Among them are houses like the L. Wolff Manufacturing company, J. B. Clow & Sons, and the Illinois Malleable Iron company. Four officials of the amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' union are in the grist, while officials of the indicted companies who are indicted as individuals include William H. Clow Jr., vice president of J. B. Clow & Sons, and Clarence V. Kellogg and Forgeff. Hinds of the Kellogg-Mackay company.

Prices Boosted by Boycotts.

Boycotts of outside material by "illegal combinations" under attack were held by the government authorities to have increased the prices of specified building materials as follows:

HEATING APPARATUS—Boosted 50 per cent in price during the last three years.

PLUMBING SUPPLIES—Inflated 40 per cent through combinations.

SHEET METAL—Advanced at least 40 per cent by eliminating competition.

Of the 110, the April grand jury returned indictments against 71 corporations and individuals, while an indictment by the March jury against the remaining thirty-nine was released, added to the sixty-eight indictments in January in the millwork lines, yesterday rolled up the total to 178 men and firms now under indictment in connection with the investigation of the building conditions. The inquiry was inaugurated by District Attorney Wayne four months ago.

Specific Charges.

By groups yesterday's batch was as follows:

SHEET METAL—An indictment in 14 count charges sheet metal contractors and representatives of the Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' alliance, a labor organization composed of sheet metal workers, with conspiring to restrain trade. It is alleged that these men entered into an agreement, which has been in existence for the last three years, to keep all sheet metal products made outside of Chicago from coming into this market.

It is set up that this combination has worked so smoothly and effectively that during the last three years all sheet metal used in erecting houses and other buildings in Chicago had been manufactured within the city under a condition by which competition has been entirely eliminated. It is charged this condition has cut out actual competitive bidding and has resulted in the pooling of large contracts. The net result has been to enhance the prices of sheet metal work at least 100 per cent.

Counts Against Steam Fitters.

STEAM FITTING—An indictment in the count runs against the Master Steamfitters' association and eighteen corporations, twenty-three individuals who are members of the corporations, and one official of the Steamfitters' Protective Association of Chicago, a labor union. It charges restraint of trade through conspiracy between the master steamfitters and the union representatives.

It applies to the trade in steam and hot water apparatus, and it is charged that its effect has been to restrict trade with manufacturers whose plants are outside Illinois. It is alleged that the Master Steam Fitters of Chicago have combined among themselves and with the union's business agent to refuse to trade with any manufacturer selling his products to any other than members of the Steamfitters' association. It is set forth that the union representatives abetted this by refusing to furnish workers to any contractors or master steam fitters who are not members of the Master Steamfitters' association.

This combination against independent contractors and against the build-

MONON BOASTS PRETTIEST GIRL IN HOOSIERDOM

Flora Mae Hackett Is Tribune Prize Winner

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Monon, White county, Ind., boasts a railroad named after it. It boasts its name as an Indian word meaning "swift running." It boasts any number of pretty homes. Added to that, making quite a bit more, it now boasts the home of the prettiest girl in Indiana, Miss Flora Mae Hackett, who was awarded the first prize of $1,000 in THE TRIBUNE'S $20,200 prize beauty contest. Her photograph, by Phillips of Lafayette, Ind., appears on the first page of today's rotogravure section.

The three celebrated judges, Pauline Palmer, Albin Polasek, and J. Wellington Reynolds, found the prize winning appeal in her youth, charm, and temperament, and in her unusual good looks.

Ask any one in the town of Monon if there are any pretty girls there. "Yes, the town's full of them," the jovial station agent speaks for them. "And then there's Flora Hackett. She's a beauty!"

Of Best Seller Standard.

She is. Her hair is like the raven's wing of best seller standard. A whole "mop" of it she has (only the best sellers would say a "crown"). It has the kind of large loose wave M. Marcel began a movement some time ago to imitate with a curling iron. And black eyes with long black lashes. Skin like old ivory, fine and clear, flashing white teeth, a cameo cut to her features, a slender neck and figure. An unusual looking girl altogether. And an unusual girl, too.

Miss Flora Mae's mother died when she was 8, leaving besides Flora two little boys, 6 and 4. Three years before her death Flora's father lost both his legs in a railroad accident. So the business of mothering the home fell to Flora early, and until a year ago she remained her father's housekeeper. After two years in high school Flora felt the need to help the family financially, so she took a business training. And to herself goes the credit for that training.

She rented an old typewriter and spent evenings after the dishes were done picking out the letters and the numerals, and kept at it until she "could come to the aid of their party" with speed and alacrity. Then she got hold of a bookkeeping manual and worked out the fundamental principles by herself and, in her words, went to Lafayette, thirty miles beyond, applied for a job, and "bluffed it through." She is working in the same place, which would prove Flora made good on her bluff all right.

American 'Way Back.

Miss Flora was born in Monon. Her father's father was a civil war veteran, and on her mother's side, too, she claims American descent.

She was home in Monon to receive me and the prize I was intrusted to deliver her. Was she happy?

"O, daddy, daddy," she called out. "Come here! It's a thousand dollars! O, it can't be true! I never thought I would have got a $50 prize even. But isn't it the grandest thing ever happened us, daddy? Aren't we glad to get it, though?"

Turning to me, she said with a naïve grace and sincerity, which made her appear that much more adorable: "I don't think I am pretty at all. I don't see how I got the prize. I look in glass and see so many things I would like different. They must have felt sorry for me and given me the prize."

Just Being Nice.

"Didn't any one ever tell you you were pretty?" I asked her.

"Yes, but then I've heard people telling other girls they were pretty when I didn't think they were, and so I supposed they were just being nice to me, too."

"There's not much danger of spoiling Flora," her father interjected. "She gets many compliments, but she has too good a head to let them turn it. But I am awfully glad for her sake she won. It is a great honor. And she deserves it because she has been a good girl. If it hadn't been for her our little family would have been broken up after their mother died."

No, Flora is not engaged. Doesn't care about the boys, she says. But I fear they couldn't return the compliment. Not if they fell in the way of a shaft from her alluring black eyes.

Lowdens at White House on Wedding Anniversary

Washington, D. C., April 30.—[Special.]—Former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, who might have been the host instead of the guest if things at the Chicago convention had turned out differently last summer, lunched at the White House today. The former governor and Mrs. Lowden were the guests of President and Mrs. Harding for several hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowden were celebrating today their silver wedding anniversary. On their wedding trip twenty-five years ago they came to Washington.

ALLIES DECIDE ON OCCUPATION OF RUHR BASIN

Entente Embraces Briand Plan.

BULLETIN.

PARIS, April 30.—(By the Associated Press.)—A semi-official note issued in Berlin states that Dr. Simons, the foreign minister, tendered his resignation to President Ebert, but the latter refused it, says a dispatch from the German capital today.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, April 30.—Premier Briand of France this afternoon won the support of the allied supreme council—representing Great Britain, Italy, Japan and Belgium—to the French plans for military occupation of the Ruhr basin as the penalty for Germany's failure to execute the reparations, disarmament and punishment of war culprits clauses of the Versailles treaty.

Following up his success at Lympne last week when the French premier enlisted the aid of Prime Minister Lloyd George in Marshal Foch's plans for extension of military guarantees east of the Rhine, M. Briand gained today the approval of Count Sforza of Italy, Baron Hayashi of Japan, and Delegate Jasper of Belgium during a four hour session at 10 Downing street this evening.

Nullify Paris Accord.

The powers representing the supreme council adopted the allied reparations commission's reparations estimates of 132,000,000,000 gold marks—amounting to 270,000,000,000 over a long term of years—as the allies' new reparations demands, thus nullifying the Paris accord which amounted only to 226,000,000,000 gold marks.

Premier Briand clinched his case so conclusively that no dissenting voice was raised when he declared the German government wilfully had refused to execute the three major points of the treaty by maintaining arms and an army above the amount the military clauses permit; by failing to punish those guilty of criminal offenses during the war, and by refusing to carry out the reparations terms for which the treaty provides sanctions may be taken.

Experts in Night Session.

When the council adjourned for dinner at 7:30 o'clock this evening it was decided that the financial and economic experts would meet tonight to draft an indemnity bill based upon the reparations commission's findings establishing the number of years within which the reparations annuities must be paid and determining the means and method of payment.

It is expected that these modalities will be completed tonight and will be presented to the supreme council tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Despite persistent rumors all day long that Mr. Lloyd George intended to propose sending Germany an ultimatum giving one week to accept or reject the terms of the Paris accord, Briand having stated that such a thing was entirely unacceptable to France, it was not suggested before the council.

Marshal Foch, Gen. Weygand, and Field Marshal Sir Henry Wilson spent the afternoon together at Hampton court, where the French generalissimo acquainted the British chief of staff with his plans for military operations.

Plan Goes to Council Today.

These plans are expected to be submitted to the supreme council formally tomorrow afternoon if time is lacking in the morning session to examine them.

Several days will elapse before French troops begin marching forward as certain details for maintaining operations of industry in the Ruhr valley have not yet been worked out.

Premier Briand insisted on the point that the Ruhr mines and factories would not be operated for France's benefit alone during the occupation, but for the benefit of the whole world including Germany, but "she must pay the world market prices for the Ruhr's output of coal and manufactured goods."

Allies to Feed Ruhr Workers.

The French also are preparing to be enabled to provide foodstuffs for the bulk of the Rhur region workers as it is expected that a military and customs barrier will be picketed around the occupied zone which will result in cutting off German food products from the district. Dutch, Belgian, French, and other foreign food supplies will be distributed among the population.

It is not planned to interfere with the existing civil government or the

TONS OF GOLD DISAPPEAR ON WAY TO PARIS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, April 30.—[By Wireless.]—All Paris is wondering what has become of the $10,000,000 in gold shipped to France from Russia. The arrival of the shipment was confirmed yesterday by the station officials at Boulogne, but at the Gare du Nord in Paris today all knowledge of its arrival is denied.

Railway officials say it was lost between Boulogne and Paris.

News of the vanishing of the treasure came soon after it had been reported the gold had reached Paris at noon yesterday. The Bank of France declares it knows nothing of the shipment, and the foreign office denies all knowledge of it.

Five tons, divided into eighty-three cases, comprised the shipment. It was guarded by troops from the moment it was unloaded from the Esthonian ship Grenun until placed aboard the train for Paris.

Little doubt is felt in Paris, despite the denial of officials, that the shipment was in payment for materials bought by Russians from French wholesalers.

PEGGY LEAVES AS WRIT MEN WAIL

Willing Slaves Aid Her; Heaped with Gifts.

Pretty "Peggy" Hopkins Joyce hopped lightly off to New York yesterday afternoon on the Twentieth Century Limited, her drawing room filled with flowers, boxes of candy, books, magazines, and other little mementos from her Chicago friends.

The former "Follies" girl who has captured three husbands, the last one a multi-millionaire, and lost them took hosts of captives in Chicago—and saved herself from being captured by the summons servers.

The latter wished to serve her with papers compelling her to appear before a master in chancery and tell all about the $1,000,000 worth of jewels and other things her third husband, James Stanley Joyce, gave her.

Peggy Fools 'Em All.

The summons servers were all around—they were even in the south side hotel that sheltered her. They might have found her had not the bellboys noticed her blue eyes, her curly bobbed hair, her long eyelashes.

So Peggy had her visit in peace. She consulted with her Chicago attorney, Weymouth Kirkland, and signed papers making counter charges to her husband's bill for annulment and asking for separate maintenance with copious alimony.

This done, she motored to her hotel. The clerks, stenographers, bellboys, porters, the folks at the cigar stand and the news stand, and the doormen all knew she was about to leave. But the men who stood about waiting to serve the papers didn't learn the fact.

Smiles, Gifts, Slaves.

Presently the bouquets began to arrive at Peggy's room, and the candy, books, magazines, and other things. The bellboys tossed up to see who should carry her bags to the taxi. The lucky boy had a job carrying those three suitcases, but would permit no one to help him.

Peggy and her woman companion caught the train with time to spare. Six porters looked after her. Peggy rewarded them with a smile.

As her train pulled out a man stood on the track waving a summons.

New York, April 30.—The sailing of approximately 10,000 people bound for Europe from this port today marked the beginning of the summer tourist season and the establishment of a sailing record.

"DIP" TRAILED TO SHERIDAN ROAD FLAT; 5 NABBED

A chance recognition of a well known pickpocket by two detective sergeants last night led to the arrest of five ex-convicts in the Fernwood, an exclusive apartment house at 4054 Sheridan road, and the probable solution of numerous cases of pocket picking recently reported on Irving Park boulevard and Broadway.

Last night Detective Sergeants Mathew Barden and Fred Able recognized a well known pickpocket on the street. Instead of arresting him, they followed him to the Fernwood apartments. A search revealed him in one of the apartments with four other men, all of whom the police claim have police records. The lease of the apartment is in the name of Arthur West. The other four men under arrest are Fred Davis, George Downs, Harry Gunther, and Frank Newman.

CASH FOR BABIES IS FRENCH PLAN TO LURE STORK

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, April 30.—[By Wireless.]—The French government today announced that after May 1 a premium will be paid on all babies born in France. Both legitimate and natural children will draw awards.

In the provinces 300 francs [normally about $60] will be paid for the third infant of each mother, the scale being gradually increased to 650 francs up to the tenth child. In Paris these premiums will be increased 50 per cent, due to the higher cost of living.

A first payment of 150 francs will be made thirty days after the birth of the child. French mothers only are to secure the awards.

Slacker List Out; 17,000 Face Arrest

The first official list of draft evaders in the 6th Army Corps area, embracing Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin, was received yesterday by Col. Eli Helmick, chief of staff at Fort Sheridan. With it the War Department sent Col. Helmick instructions on how to round up the 17,000 slackers in his territory.

The list will not be made public for four or five days, Col. Helmick said. It was sent to the military printing office at Camp Grant where 200 copies will be struck off. These lists will then be sent to the newspapers, post offices, draft boards, state adjutant general's office, county sheriffs, United States marshals, and chiefs of police.

Reward of $50 for Captures.

A reward of $50 is offered for the capture of each man named on the list, and every citizen is authorized to make an arrest, according to one of the articles of war.

The American Legion has also been asked to aid.

The first list contains a relatively small number of names. Similar lists will be sent each day. It is purposed to publish them in small installments so police, soldiers, marshals, and sheriffs will have ample time to investigate a certain number per day.

Repair the Old Guard House.

The old guard house at Fort Sheridan is being repaired for the reception of the slackers. Other places to which they will be taken are Fort Brady at Sault St. Marie, Fort Snelling at St. Paul, Camp Grant, Jefferson Barracks, Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill., Rock Island Arsenal, Fort Wayne at Detroit, and Camp Custer at Battle Creek.

The war department has compiled a list of 160,000 slackers throughout the United States. The 17,000 in this area is said to be a small percentage, in comparison to the population.

I'M OFF TO WARS, PRINCE CRIES, AND FLEES TO DESERT

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Omar Farouk, son of Prince Abdul Medjid Effendi, heir presumptive to the Turkish throne, escaped Thursday and fled to Angora. He left a letter to his father explaining his flight from Constantinople.

"I am unable," he continued, "to witness idly the invasion of the home land by an imperialist enemy. I am going to fight."

Omar received military training in Austria and holds a commission as a captain of cavalry. He is 23 and is the only imperial Turkish prince with the nationalists. It is expected the Angora government may renew its threat to supplant the sultan.

BOY CARRYING $125,000 BONDS IS GONE IN GOTHAM

New York, April 30.—[Special.]—Another Wall street bond messenger disappeared today. Although the loss at first was reported as $880,000, announcement by H. C. Duval & Co. of 74 Broadway is that the total was not more than $125,000, fully covered by insurance. No arrests have been made.

H. C. Duval, one of the four partners, said that on Friday they were in a hurry to pay a loan of $100,000 and get back about $125,000 securities from Kuhn, Loeb & Co. A messenger boy was sent for and he went to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., but did not come back.

There was an hour between the time he left the bank and Duval & Co.'s inquiry that established that fact.

PASSES KNOX RESOLUTION; GOES TO HOUSE

Formal Treaty with Germany Likely.

Washington, D. C., April 30.—The senate tonight, by a vote of 49 to 23, adopted the Knox resolution declaring the war with Germany and Austria formally at an end.

The measure now goes to the house, where favorable action is expected promptly. President Harding has already indicated that he will sign the resolution without delay.

In the senate vote tonight the Republicans presented a solid front in support of the resolution. The only Republican who declared himself in opposition to the measure—Senator Nelson of Minnesota—was "paired," so that his name doesn't appear in the official roll call.

Reserves U. S. Rights Under Treaty.

An amendment by Senator Townsend of Michigan, amending the language of the resolution, was defeated, 4 to 26. Senator Sterling of South Dakota was persuaded by Republican leaders not to offer his amendment declaring the support of the United States for the allied position in the reparations controversy.

The Knox resolution repeals the declarations of war against Germany and Austria and declares the war formally ended. It reserves all the rights obtained by the United States under the terms of the Versailles treaty.

Senator Lodge, the Republican leader, announced that the adoption of the resolution undoubtedly would be followed by a treaty with Germany. At the same time he pictured the difficulties of ratifying the Versailles treaty without the league of nations, as suggested by President Harding in his annual address in congress, as well nigh insuperable.

Senator Borah of Idaho, followed this with a statement that it would be infinitely worse to ratify the Versailles treaty proper than the league covenant.

Lodge Predicts New Treaty.

Senator Lodge's prediction of a new treaty came out in the debate when Senator Shields of Tennessee, Democrat, had declared it impossible to separate the league covenant from the treaty.

"Is it to be supposed," asked Senator Lodge, "that we are to go on in a condition of technical war?

"The allies did not ask our leave to make their peace. They cannot expect us to remain at war while they are all at peace.

"And if we choose to make peace by this resolution and by a treaty with Germany, which probably will follow, we surely are not deserting them."

One Way to Kill League.

"The authority of the league of nations so permeates and so honeycombs the Versailles treaty that it is impossible to have it exist without the league," said Senator Shields. "Thus the infirmities involved in the covenant of the league of nations affected the treaty to such an extent as to make the document—the treaty proper—incurably bad, and the only possible thing to do is to scrap the entire document. As to the resolution having that effect I have been of the opinion that that was the object of it. That is why I am going to vote for it."

"The covenant is so intertwined and involved," Senator Lodge agreed, "that it will require on the best calculation that I have been able to make at least seventy-two amendments to the treaty of Versailles to get the league out of it, and when we have got it out nothing but the shell remains."

Trying to Save Loose Parts.

After Senator Lodge had said that separation of the covenant of the league of nations from the treaty of Versailles would be difficult if not impossible Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, Republican, interrogated him at some length in a attempt to establish that the covenant was only a small part of the treaty and could be eliminated to leave the much more important economic parts.

"That would not be very difficult, would it?" the Wisconsin senator asked.

"Perhaps not," replied Senator Lodge. "I once tried to disentangle the treaty from the league of nations, and I found it a pretty difficult undertaking. But if, of course, the treaty of Versailles is to be made over that is only a small part of what is to be done. There is part 13. There is the Shantung provision, and taking us out of all the commissions in which we are included and in which we do not want to be and in which nobody wants us to be. I think the senator would find when he got through that there would not be very much left."

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democrat, charged that the effect of the Knox resolution was "to encourage our former enemies and to discourage our allies in their efforts to enforce their reparations claims."

"The difficulty on the Democratic side of the chamber," retorted Senator Lodge, "is that they won't recognize that the war is over, and that their treaty and their league has been beaten and beaten badly by the people."

Bring Up Campaign Actions.

Senator Lodge's remark led to the senate's fighting the presidential campaign all over again. It was an animated review of views, issues and events. Senator Harrison of Mississippi, Democrat, who was one of the Cox managers, declared that Mr. Harding during the campaign so constantly changed position that "no one ever knew where he stood."

The senator read the statement signed by thirty-one prominent pro-league Republicans headed by William Howard Taft, Charles Evans Hughes, Elihu Root, Herbert Hoover and others, on Oct. 15, appealing for votes for Harding as votes for the league.

Senator Robinson also read speeches and statements by Mr. Hoover "highly favorable" to the league.

"O, that was before the election," interjected Senator Johnson of California. "Hoover has had opportunity to change his mind many times since then."

"Yes, there have been many changes of mind since then," Senator Robinson rejoined, "except by the senator from California and the senator from Idaho."

"And they were the Republicans to attract the greatest crowd and do the most good for the Republican party," Senator Harrison said.

King Charges "Pro-Germanism."

The charges of pro-German sympathy made against Senator Knox on several occasions since his condemnation of the economic clauses of the treaty, soon after its presentation to the senate in 1919, was renewed by Senator King of Utah, Democrat.

"Some subtle, sinister design is back of this resolution," Mr. King said. "The resolution was born of a spirit of helpfulness to Germany. It seeks to relieve her of a part of the just penalty for her conduct."

Senator King then assailed Senator Knox's conduct throughout the discussion of the treaty, saying the Pennsylvanian wanted to "mitigate the penalties on Germany when they were written into the treaty."

McCormick Discusses Reparations.

Senator McCormick of Illinois, discussing the reparations issue, said:

"The reparations must be measured, not by the damage wrought by Germany in the war, but by the ability of Germany to pay.

"It is difficult to establish an exact comparison between present values or future values and those which obtained before the war, but let us, for argument's sake, assume that in the near future the aggregate annual value of German exports may amount to four billion dollars. In 1920, British exports, exclusive of re-exports, were worth approximately six billion five hundred millions, while the aggregate of American exports for the year was eight billions.

"In the simplest terms, the fixed indemnity proposed by the Paris conference to be paid by Germany, was: Five hundred million a year for two years; an average of a billion a year for nine years; an average of a billion and a half a year for thirty-one years.

"In short, German exports, competitive with those of America throughout the world, must exceed German imports by that amount annually. If the aggregate of German exports amounts to four billions annually at current value, as against imports of three billion, Germany will be able, during the first eleven years, to make the fixed payments proposed, but under the terms of the London proposals she is required to pay an additional twelve and a half per cent tax upon the aggregate value of her exports—that is, an additional half a billion a year, which again must be found in the aggregate of German exports."

Lively Crossfire.

Senator Jones of New Mexico described the resolution as "an abject apology for having entered the war." The same contention was made by Senator Williams.

Senator La Follette said he supported it because it would end the war status. He said it was not a treaty, and gave notice of full freedom of action in the settlement to be made with Germany.

Senator Wolcott asserted that the resolution was "shocking and bordered on national disgrace."

Explaining his support for the resolution, Senator Myers said he had stood stanchly for entering the league, but that his hopes were extinguished by the last election.

"I consider the verdict of the people was against ratification," he said, "and it appeared to me it is this course [by resolution] or nothing."

Senator Williams replied that "the disciples gave up when Christ was crucified." He added that the fight for the league would go on until the issue was won.

CITY HALL GANG OUT TO 'GET' HIM, SCANLAN ADMITS

Judge May Take Matter to Bar Association.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Circuit Judge Kickham Scanlan yesterday corroborated charges that the city hall machine had directly threatened him with political slaughter because of his decision in the school boar dcontempt cases.

Further than that, Judge Scanlan disclosed that the resentment of the machine was aroused solely because of its interest in William A. Bither, Thompson ward committeeman and attorney for the school board, whom the court sentenced to five days in the county jail.

But other details were refused, and it is believed a complete statement is withheld because of a possibility that the evidence may be submitted to the grievance committee of the Chicago Bar association. The city hall man who carried the machine's threat to the judge is said to be an attorney, and his disbarment may be sought because of this action.

C. R. Francis Close to Bither.

Charles R. Francis, commissioner of public works, is—or was—a member of the same law firm as Attorney Bither. He was elected chairman of the "new county committee" last year, and is one of the larger cogs in the Lundin-Thompson organization. Judge Scanlan was asked whether Commissioner Francis was the city hall message bearer, but he declined to confirm the conjecture.

But the judge did say that the message was delivered to him directly and orally by one of the "big men" of the city hall group, and that it was made, not immediately after he had sentenced Mr. Bither to jail last July, as had been reported, but several months later. This latter fact is taken to indicate the threat was not the result of a flash of temper, but the product of cool deliberation.

The text of the threat message was approximately this:

"You might as well rent a law office and consider yourself off the bench at the end of your present term."

Warns of City Hall Propaganda.

Sheriff Charles W. Peters, secretary of the campaign for the coalition ticket, on which Judge Scanlan and thirteen other sitting judges have been nominated in opposition to the city hall, issued a warning to the voters to disregard the flood of Lundin-Thompson propaganda with which the mails will be flooded soon.

"There is no party issue in the June election," Mr. Peters said, "and any attempt to create one is a deliberate attempt to deceive the voters. Men of all parties who are interested only in seeing that the judiciary of Cook county shall remain independent of political machines, have joined in support of the coalition ticket.

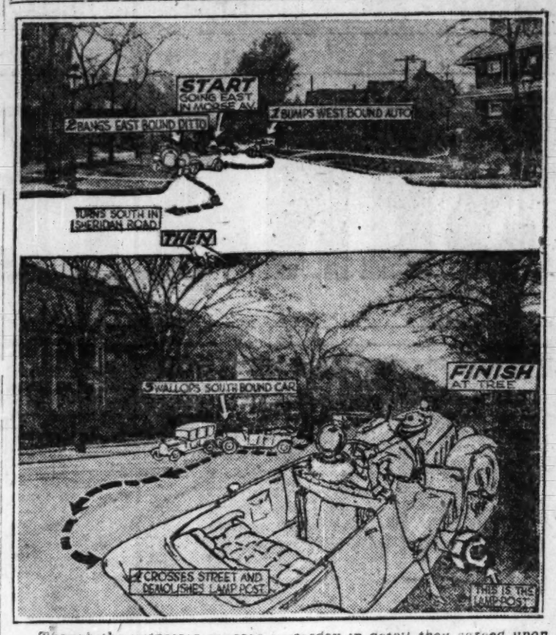
"Republican leaders of prominence, including state and county officials, are supporting these candidates, and no Republican should hesitate to do so. His duty to his party at this time is to prevent its being misused for ignoble purposes."

SPANISH PAPER SEES MENACE IN UNITED STATES

MADRID, April 30.—The charge that current opinion in America is dangerous to the peace of the world is made in an editorial printed by La Libertad today on Spanish-American relations. The newspaper says:

"No one reading American news can deny the existence there of current opinion dangerous for the peace of the world. Publicists and champions of the new imperialism there are fostering this tendency of the North American mind to proclaim itself the mandatory and executor of all kinds of provincial designs. They are making the superiority of their race over all the other races of the earth into a dogma and are preaching the necessity of organizing a military and naval power which shall become an arm for performing tasks confided to them by God."

TEMPERAMENTAL AUTO



Though the witnesses differed yesterday in detail they agreed upon the major premise that Mrs. Richard R. Brown had an exciting ride Friday evening near Sheridan road and Morse avenue. Her motor car is in the repair shop, where it will be examined psychopathically as well as mechanically. Mrs. Brown and a woman companion escaped injury when something went wrong with the car's controls.

"NOW what's a little automobile accident?" asked Mrs. Richard R. Brown, 1645 Greenleaf avenue, last night, when questioned regarding the Friday evening crash that sent her rakish motor car to the shops for repairs.

In the tabloid manner used in the Rogers Park police station to describe such incidents, "a motor car owned and driven by Mrs. Richard R. Brown had collided with another automobile and a lamp post near the corner of Sheridan road and Morse avenue."

The other machine, according to the police records, was owned by Mrs. E. G. Westlake, 1446 Chase avenue. That was as far as the incomplete police record went.

Friends of Mrs. Westlake and Mrs. Chase—who are, by the way, well acquainted—as well as witnesses of the crash asserted that Mrs. Brown was accompanied by a fashionably dressed woman who hurried away in a taxicab.

Other reports asserted that Mrs. Brown also struck a small electric automobile with her machine as the electric stood near the curb on Sheridan road and that she then turned off on Morse avenue and struck two other automobiles before colliding with a lamp post.

"Why, it was nothing at all," said Mrs. Brown. "My car struck a small electric, then after traveling down the street a bit, I had to swerve sharply to avoid two other machines and my car ran over the curb and struck a lamp post. There was nothing to become excited about."

FATHER TESTIFIES AGAINST DAUGHTER IN DIVORCE SUIT

Protracted "music lessons," during which, it was alleged, she took more air than arias, landed Mrs. Pearl Cottay in court yesterday. George J. Cottay, 3635 South Michigan avenue, wants a divorce. He testified that while his wife was supposed to be studying music, she was usually taking the air on long auto rides along the boulevards with Ernest M. Cross, formerly alderman of the Eighth ward, now president of the East Side Trust and Savings bank.

MRS. PEARL COTTAY.

The husband charged that improper relations resulted from the motoring. He brought Mrs. Cottay's father, Herman Wilkening, into court to substantiate the charge. The father drew a rebuke from the court for testifying against his daughter.

"I never heard of a father testifying against his child in this manner," the judge said.

Judge Sabath indicated he would grant Cottay a divorce and the custody of his 4 year old boy, Robert George.

James Clopton, American Agitator, Run Out of Mexico

Mexico City, Mex., April 30.—James Clopton, described as an American agitator, was expelled from Mexico last night as a "pernicious foreigner."

THREE CHILDREN KILLED IN DAY'S AUTO ACCIDENTS

It had taken 6 year old Thomas Burak, 2031 West Eighteenth street, a whole week to make his kite. Yesterday he was flying it. Running merrily through the street, he did not notice an automobile approaching. In front of 2023 West Eighteenth street the machine, driven by Frank Swan, 2346 South Ridgeway avenue, struck him. He was killed instantly.

Richard Harrity, 6 years old, 937 Newport avenue, was fatally injured when struck by a taxicab, when crossing the street in front of his home. He died a few minutes later.

Lucy Catalano, 9 years old, 501 West Division street, was struck by an automobile driven by Peter Forset, 4910 West Ohio street. The child died at the Columbus hospital.

Katie Tomisello, 14 years old, 618 Reese street, died as the result of injuries received when she was struck by the police patrol automobile of the Chicago avenue station on April 5.

Woman Loses a $1,250 Lavalliere in the Loop

Mrs. Samuel F. Hirsch of 1605 Chase street, reported yesterday that she had lot a $1,250 diamond lavalliere in the loop, between Hotel La Salle and State and Madison streets. The lavalliere had seven diamonds and was fastened with a platinum chain.

RIGA, April 30.—Mrs. John Reed, widow of the American writer, who died in Russia last year, is ill here. Mrs. Reed, who writes under the name of Louise Bryant, has just arrived here from Moscow, and was taken ill before leaving soviet Russia.

SENATORS GET EMERGENCY BILL FOR NEW TARIFF

Safeguards for the Dye Industry Included.

Washington, D. C., April 30.—[Special.]—The emergency tariff bill, with the Knox amendment for the protection of the American dyestuffs industry, was reported to the senate today by Senator Penrose, chairman of the committee on finance.

Consideration of the bill will begin Monday with the expectation it will be passed before the end of the week.

Senator Penrose, anticipating speedy action on the emergency measure, announced the finance committee expects to begin hearing on revenue and taxation a week from Monday.

To Rush Permanent Bill.

The house leaders have stated that they expect to pass the permanent tariff bill in time to bring that bill into the senate not later than June 1. Chairman Fordney of the house committee on ways and means expects to report the bill to the house on or about May 15.

"It is our intention," Senator Penrose said today, "to go into the matter of the sales tax at the hearing to be started on May 9. Up to the present we have had few requests for hearings, but now a definite date has been fixed, I expect to receive many such requests."

As submitted to the senate today by Senator Penrose, the so called emergency tariff is in a great many respects a different measure from that passed by the house a few weeks ago.

Farm Features Unchanged.

The strictly tariff schedules, intended to protect agricultural products, remain unchanged, but the anti-dumping section has been amended, while the exchange equalization section, approved by the house, has been dropped, and a new section substituted. The Knox dyestuff amendment also is a new section.

DURABLE PACTS WITH ENGLAND, HOPE OF HARVEY

New York, April 30.—Less of tentative compromise and more durable agreements between this country and England is what is most needed by both countries, George Harvey, newly confirmed ambassador to Great Britain, told the Lotos club here tonight.

Mr. Harvey said President Harding told him that all partisanship should be abandoned "at the water's edge."

"In my case," Mr. Harvey declared, "I am unable to perceive why a citizen of the United States cannot represent his country without appearing either a sycophant or a swashbuckler."

Since he has voted four times for Democratic candidates and as many times for Republicans, Mr. Harvey said, compliance with the injunction to drop partisanship would not be difficult.

Gliddens, World Autoists, Hurt by Gotham Taxi

New York, April 30.—[Special.]—Charles Glidden, donator of the Glidden tours trophy, in years of enthusiastic motoring, toured thirty-nine countries and drove his own machine more than 100,000 miles, but never had an accident. Tonight Mr. Glidden and his wife, entered a New York taxicab and in collision with another taxicab both were severely cut and bruised.

Judge Annuls Marriage of 14 Year Old Bride

Judge Joseph Sabath in Superior court yesterday annulled the marriage of Princess Marchino Ferrera, 14, of Homewood, Ill., who for eighteen days was the wife of John Ferrara, 26. Mrs. Vito Marchino testified her daughter was married without her permission.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 30.

The senate tonight by a vote of 49 to 23 adopted the Knox peace resolution ending the state of war with Germany. No Republican was recorded in the roll call against it, but Senator Nelson of Minnesota, who was absent, was paired against it. Senator Lodge in the closing debate said that final adoption of the resolution by congress would probably be followed by a new treaty with Germany.

The house today defied the recommendation of the administration for a regular army of 175,000 enlisted men and insisted on reducing it to 150,000.

The war department announced today that limited appropriations make it necessary to receive only 1,200 civilians for military training at each of the summer camps to be conducted in the army corps areas this year.

President Harding has under advisement the appointment of a commission of three to settle the wage cut dispute between the United States shipping board and marine workers.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, declared today that the Hill bill to repeal the Volstead prohibition enforcement law had about as much chance of passage "as a rabbit would have to get through a dog kennel."

Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Medill McCormick planted memorial trees from Ohio and Illinois on the grounds of the American Forestry association.

The Washington government continued optimistic today over eventual success of its effort to bring about renewed discussion of the war reparations issue as a result of Germany's alternative proposal.

Government departments here, although watchful for radical uprisings on May day tomorrow, were not apprehensive. No evidence existed of any serious outbreaks, officials declared.

TENANTS DIG IN FOR MOVING DAY SIEGE TOMORROW

Half of Removals Take Goods to Storage.

Cheered by two relief measures already enacted by the legislature and by the hope that the six months' stay bill will be passed Tuesday, Chicago's embattled tenants are resting on their arms, prepared to meet the landlords' legal offensive tomorrow.

A few preliminary skirmishes took place yesterday and the difficulties encountered by decorators, gas men, telephone installers, electric light men, and movers furnished some indication of the chaotic conditions to be expected this week as soon as the courts tackle the mass of eviction cases to be filed. Chief Justice Olson yesterday assigned Judges Hosea W. Wells and Alfred L. Ehler to aid Judge John A. Swanson in hearing these cases.

Many instances were reported of rebuffs met by telephone men who attempted to remove the phones of old tenants and install those of the incoming flat dwellers.

"We don't care what the new tenant or the agent told you; we're not moving," was the greeting more than one phone man received before the door was slammed in his face.

More Than Half Store Goods.

Investigation disclosed that more than half of the flat dwellers who moved yesterday placed their household goods in storage. Family hotels and those with furnished rooms to rent are dividing the profits with the storage concerns through this arrangement.

K. Werner of Werner Brothers said only a few instances had come to his attention in which tenants were storing their goods in the basements of the buildings into which they hoped to move later.

Of fifty families moved by the Hebard Storage and Van company, thirty placed their effects in storage.

Arthur Reebie of W. C. Reebie & Co. reported that half of the 150 moving jobs his concern was handling were "storage jobs."

An official of Harder's concern said approximately half of the families to be moved today intended to store their goods.

All declared there is plenty of storage space to handle the business.

The tenants who loaded their goods on the vans only to find their new homes still occupied were comparatively few.

"After all this agitation a person is foolish to attempt to move into a flat where we have displayed our unfair signs," said A. E. Jessurun, secretary of the Chicago Tenants' Protective league. "They know they are doing it at their own risk. They are foolish even to sign a lease for these places."

Tenants All Sit Tight.

Reports received at the league headquarters indicated the militants were "sitting tight."

Eleven of the twenty-four tenants at 1426-1440 East 67th place reported they intended to fight. The rents there have been raised from $50 and $55 to $70 and $75. The tenants have offered $60 and $65.

Tenants of twenty-two stores and twenty-two flats at 2918 West Madison street are planning to organize today and resist a rent increase. Nine tenants at 1317 Farwell avenue—all in the building whose leases expired at midnight—are standing pat against increases from $55, $75, and $85 to $85, $110, and $115, respectively.

"We don't believe they've even made an attempt to lease these flats," said one tenant. "We've all got the signs up and there hasn't been a soul to look at the flats. I guess they know it's no use sending the decorators, because we wouldn't let them in. We've gone thus far in the fight and we're going to see it through."

She "Mixes" with Landlady.

Mrs. Thomas J. Murtaugh of 3131 Parnell avenue was a victor in a battle with her landlady, Mrs. Thomas Thompson, although she was nursing several bruises and scratches last night.

"Mrs. Thompson threatened to raise my rent some time ago, but agreed not to if I would do my own housework," said Mrs. Murtaugh. "I've been doing my own housework and now she says the place has been sold and I'll have to get out. I don't believe it has been sold. I put an unfair sign in the window and today Mrs. Thompson ordered me to take it down. When I refused she attacked me."

Mrs. Murtaugh hurried downtown and joined the tenants' league.

VANS THAT PASS IN THE NIGHT

The muscular moving men found no respite from their toil when the shades of night fell on our city yestereven. Through the still watches the throaty rumble of their trucks sounded in the streets as they transported the unhappy tenants' household effects hither and yon.

FALLS HEIR TO ANOTHER'S WOE; PAYS WITH LIFE

Healer Killed by Foe of Her Patient.

South Orange, N. J., April 30.—Mrs. Celeste Cassese, a faith healer, suddenly fell heir to another's misfortunes today and almost immediately lost her life.

Mistaken for Mrs. Joseph Selito, a patient at whose home she had just called and in whose auto she was going home, Mrs. Cassese's throat was cut by a man who leaped into the auto.

Just before the attack, the man's companion had shouted, "What did you do about the letters?" A reference, the police are convinced, to blackmail letters threatening death of Joseph Selito, a wealthy local contractor. Driving the auto for Mrs. Cassese was Michael Selito, a son of the contractor.

The man who cut Mrs. Cassese's throat tied young Selito to the steering wheel and robbed him. Then the assailant left the auto.

Bending foreward, Selito pressed his forehead against the horn on the steering wheel and when the attention of a passerby was attracted, Mrs. Cassese had bled to death.

The police have interviewed Joseph Selito to learn all that he suspects regarding the blackmailers and they are following all available clews. The police are convinced that the two men recognized the Selito auto and probably the young man and assumed at once that the woman was the wife of the man whom they had threatened. Undoubtedly they intended by murdering the wife to terrorize the contractor so that he would pay what they had demanded.

$100,000 AUTO GANG CRUSHED AS 7 ARE JAILED

With the arrest of seven men yesterday the police believe a gang of interstate automobile thieves responsible for the disappearance of $100,000 worth of cars has been broken up. A confession by one of those under arrest involves "fences" in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Michigan.

The thefts charged to the gang started more than a year ago. Detective Sergeants Michael Neary, Michael Vaughn, William Cox, and George O'Connor have been trailing some of the men two months. Yesterday they returned from Kenosha, Wis., with four prisoners. These are George A. Stein, Kenosha; Ralph Fox, 5609 South Park avenue; James A. Barry, 5440 Prairie avenue, and Cyril Kennealy, 5620 Prairie avenue.

Information said to have been supplied by Fox led the detectives to several Garfield boulevard poolrooms, where they arrested Frank McCann, 5429 Calumet avenue; John Calhoun, 311 East 55th place, and Donald McCormick, 5418 Indiana avenue.

All will be turned over to federal authorities and indictments asked for dealers who disposed of the stolen cars.

OFFICIALS SEE QUIET MAY DAY; BIG PARADE HERE

Despite the circulation of thousands of leaflets issued by the United Communist party calling for a "May Day Revolution," Chief of Police Fitzmorris and federal authorities united last night in predicting a fairly quiet May Day in Chicago.

The chief radical demonstration will be the Socialist party parade and mass meeting at the Coliseum. Chief Fitzmorris stated plenty of policemen would be scattered along the parade route and in the meeting hall to prevent disorder.

At Washington department of justice and department of labor officials stated no outbreaks were expected anywhere in the nation.

"The leaflets scattered in many cities are of the usual character circulated every year shortly before the first of May," the announcement said. "No serious consequences are expected to result therefrom."

In New York City, the police bomb squad announced it had secured much important evidence in the arrest of Edward Lindgren, formerly of Chicago and Rock Island, Ill., and a secretary in the Communist Party of America. Lindgren was one of those indicted here with William Bross Lloyd for violation of the state anti-sedition law. The indictment since has been stricken off the docket at the request of State's Attorney Crowe.

COUNTERFEITER LEAPS 15 FEET, FLEES; 3 SEIZED

Under orders of Capt. Thomas I. Porter, secret service agents searched the city last night for Frank Lipp of Milwaukee, missing member of a quartet of alleged counterfeiters who have passed $5,000 worth of bogus bills on the north side during the last month.

Lipp escaped from two secret service agents, William Harper and Peter Drautzburg, yesterday after they had arrested him and three companions in a rooming house at 1032 North La Salle street. He had been placed in a room on the second floor and a guard posted at the door. Suddenly slamming the door shut and locking it, Lipp jumped fifteen feet to the ground through a window, vaulted a fence, and was out of sight before his captors reached the street.

HOUSE IGNORES WEEKS AND PUTS ARMY AT 150,000

Democrats Help Get Coup Across.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 30.—[Special.]—The small-army men in the house, combining with the Democrats today, outgeneraled the Republican leaders and succeeded in amending the army bill so as to fix the size of the army at 150,000. This was done despite the request of Secretary Weeks the the army's size should not be reduced below 175,000.

The house adjourned without passing the bill after a prolonged debate during which the Republican leaders pleaded for a good sized army because of the disturbed world conditions.

The bill today provied for an army of 168,000. Representative Kahn, chairman, military affairs committee, offered an amendment for an army of 175,000. Representative Fish presented an amendment to this for an army of 156,000.

The Kahn amendment, as amended, was defeated by a vote of 97 to 74, and then Representative Byrnes of South Carolina moved that the army should be fixed at 150,000. This was adopted by a vote of 109 to 82.

By reducing the army to this size the appropriation for the army for the next fiscal year is reduced from $83,000,000 to $72,000,000.

Representative Kahn and Republican Leader Mondell pleaded in vain for acceptance of the recommendations of Secretary Weeks and the army officers.

New York News Begins Issuing Sunday Edition

New York, April 30.—[Special.]—The Daily News, New York's picture newspaper, begins the issue of a Sunday edition tomorrow morning. The paper is a little less than two years old and hitherto has been issued only six days a week. The first Sunday edition comprises thirty-six pages, including twelve of fiction, fashion and features. The paper is identical in control and ownership with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

DOLLARPRINCESS' HEART IS BROKEN BY LOVESICK BOY

Says She Isn't Filling Role of the Golden Goose.

ATHENS, April 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Princess Anastasia, who before her marriage to Prince Christopher of Greece was Mrs. William B. Leeds of New York; her son, William B. Jr.; the Grand Duchess Marie and the latter's two daughters, one of whom, the Princess Xenia, is engaged to young Leeds, will leave here May 4 for Brindisi, where they will entrain for Paris. Princess Anastasia will go to the American hospital in the French capital for a second operation.

When she recovers entirely Princess Anastasia intends to go to America, but if Prince Christopher goes to the fighting front in Asia Minor, she will return to Greece. She is endeavoring to postpone indefinitely the marriage of her son and Princess Xenia because of their youth.

Anastasia Is Very Weak.

Princess Anastasia today appeared extremely weak and much thinner than before her critical illness. She sat in an invalid's chair, being still unable to stand.

The engagement of her son, she declared, had broken her heart and on learning of it she wept three days and three nights, refusing to see him. The objections of the princess to the match, she said, were based on the youth and inexperience of the couple, but she finally yielded to her boy's persuasion.

Princess Anastasia denied that her son would adopt the Greek orthodox religion or receive a title from the king.

She said the young couple probably would live in America. Newspaper statements that young Leeds was the richest boy in the world, the princess declared to be absurd, stating that his father's will provided that he shall receive only $500,000 when he reaches 35.

Will Give Him Small Dower.

For the present, she said, he is entirely dependent upon what she allows him. On his marriage the princess intends to arrange with the trustees of the estate to give him a moderate sum.

Princess Anastasia said her will specified that upon her death her son would draw her interest on the trust fund, but would be unable to touch the principal. If her son or his wife should die, she declared, the entire Leeds fortune of $40,000,000 will go to their offsprings as a trust fund, which will cease with the third generation. If they have no issue the fortune, she said, would go to the Lying-In hospital in New York.

Not one dollar did she settle on Prince Christopher, the princess added. They were married under the Swiss law, by which each keeps his or her own money and property and one is not responsible for the debts of the other.

Mrs. Orthwein Owes Rent; Ziegler Left Only $1,000

Mrs. Cora Orthwein, who shot and killed Herbert P. Ziegler on March 1, was named in a judgment yesterday in the Municipal court for nonpayment of $370 rent on her Surf street apartment. At the same time the Probate court found that Ziegler, reputed to have been wealthy, left an estate of only $1,000. His widow, Alice H. Ziegler, has been forced to obtain employment.

Ziegler was sales manager of an automobile tire concern and lived as a man of wealth—two establishments—and dined at expensive cafés and gardens.

$100 MESSENGER IN BANK ADMITS $25,000 HOLDUP

Arrested with Tempter; $3,300 Recovered.

Two of the gang that kidnaped John F. Amberg and Norton S. Stone of the Scheubert & Amberg State bank, 4140 West Chicago avenue, a few days ago and robbed them of $25,000 are under arrest at the detective bureau and $3,300 has been recovered.

The two held are Irving Olson, 19, who lives with his wife in her mother's home at 2213 North Melvina street, and Leo Gistenson, 1254 North Western avenue, who matriculated from Pontiac and the bridewell. Olson is a messenger for the bank.

The police are trying to link Gistenson with the killing of Hjalmar Johnson, the Brinks Express company messenger murdered in a recent pay roll robbery.

How Police Trapped Robbers.

It was through tracing Olson that Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes solved the robbery. He is looking for three other young men and expects to recover most of the $25,000.

Hughes was certain the bandits had inside information as to the route Amberg and Stone would take, the time they would leave the bank for the clearing house, and the amount of money they would have.

The robbers were in a machine. They overtook the bank officials, forced them into their car, took the money, and dumped them out again.

Hughes detailed Detective Sergeants Charles and John Egan, William O'Connor, and Thomas Burke to follow Olson. Then he detailed Detective Sergeants Welling, Smith, Essig, Piper, Johnson, and Crot to trail some of Olson's acquaintances.

Messenger Tells of His Fall.

It was thus Gistenson was arrested. He had $1,500. He was identified by Amberg and Stone, and is said to have made a confession and involved the other three.

Olson said he was in need of money. His wife is about to become a mother. He was getting $100 a month from the bank. He met a young fellow in a crap game one day in a west side poolroom.

"We got to talking," he said, "and I told him where I worked and what I did. He said I'd get stuck up some day, but I'd get my bit out of it."

Money in His Union Suit.

Olson declares he was handed $1,900 by a woman at Twenty-second street and Wabash avenue. He spent $100. The rest he kept pinned inside his union suit. It was there when the detectives searched him.

Meyer Goland, 1250 North Western avenue; Jack Summers, 1254 North Western avenue, and Matthew Hockberg, 1941 Humboldt street, arrested with Gistenson, were released when Amberg and Stone failed to identify them.

French Budget Passed; 26,450,805,000 Francs

PARIS, April 30.—The budget, materially revised since it was first introduced, now totaling 26,450,805,000 francs, has been adopted by both senate and chamber. Of the amount, 23,264,969,000 francs have been set aside for the ordinary expenditures, while the remainder, 3,185,836,000 francs, is to be used for extraordinary expenses. Parliament adjourned today until May 19.

70,000 Boys March in Rain in New York Loyalty Day

New York, April 30.—Undaunted by a steady rain, 70,000 New York boys marched up Fifth avenue today in celebration of Loyalty day and the opening of Boys' week. Fifty juvenile bands were sprinkled in the line of march.

ALLIES DECIDE ON OCCUPATION OF RUHR BASIN

police, and wherever mine or factory superintendents, foremen or skilled laborers wish to remain at work they will be permitted to do so.

Today's events mark a striking victory for French diplomacy, Premier Briand clearly demonstrating to Mr. Lloyd George and the other supreme council members the imperative need of abandoning dilatory and procrastinating tactics with Germany and employing force instead to make the reactionaries in Berlin realize that Dr. Simons could not continue to stall for time forever.

Berlin's Offer Unmentioned.

Although Lord D'Abernon, the British ambassador to Berlin, brought minor modifications of the Simons offer as submitted to Washington, they were deemed so trivial that no one urged discussion of them.

M. Briand revealed from the start the fact that France intended to take action without delay and would refuse further fruitless parleying.

Since the Washington state department never officially transmitted Germany's new offer, it was ignored completely.

Diplomats here do not believe Washington will agree to handle any more German proposals. Both the British and French believe that the best policy for the United States in future would be to refer German propositions to the reparations commission or the allied governments directly.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION?

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 30.—The British account of the happenings at today's supreme council meeting differs greatly from that of the French delegates and in some quarters it is believed that a serious divergence of opinion has arisen among the allies.

Those of this belief point out the length of the session without adjournment and the calling of a meeting Sunday, which is unprecedented in England.

The British Views.

The British state the situation has been altered by the new reparations figure set by the reparations commission and declare that while the French insist that the allies should occupy the Ruhr immediately, the British and Italian representatives are of the opinion that with a total amount definitely fixed, a conference should decide how Germany's obligations could be carried out.

It also was proposed to send the Germans an ultimatum with a time limit set before which they must satisfy their obligations.

Allied Experts Meet.

With this in view the experts are said to be meeting tonight to prepare plans which will be submitted to the council tomorrow morning.

Immediately after today's conference had adjourned the British cabinet was summoned by telephone and members began arriving within a half hour for a meeting at which the entire situation was discussed and a program mapped out for tomorrow.

BERLIN'S BILL MOUNTING.

PARIS, April 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—The reparations commission has decided to notify the German mission here that the 12,000,000,000 gold marks remaining due on the 20,000,000,000 gold marks which the peace treaty provides shall be paid by tomorrow are to be added to the total of 132,000,000,000 marks fixed by the commission as the amount of war damages assessed against Germany, thus making the grand total 144,000,000,000 gold marks.

In addition to this are the acts of restitution provided for by the treaty of Versailles. A communication informing the German mission to this effect will be handed to it some time today.

DISCUSS MOBILIZATION

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 30.—The French cabinet, in a meeting this afternoon, determined to order the mobilization for a part of the class of 1919 to provide troops for the occupation of the Ruhr district, according to the Journal des Debats. The official communique issued to the press made no mention of the matter, but the cabinet ministers are understood to have discussed arrangements for mobilization and to have decided on partial mobilization on ministerial decrees.

In deference to the wishes of the universities there will be wholesale exemptions to students, as a call to the colors now would cause great inconvenience, final examinations being due.

WATCHFUL WAITING

Washington, D. C., April 30.—[Special.]—The Washington government continued its silence today regarding the war reparations negotiations precipitated by the alternative proposals submitted to Secretary of State Hughes by the German government.

In official quarters the assertion was reiterated that informal conversations with the allies were continuing and that nothing relating to the issue had reached an official status, although it is admitted there is difficulty in drawing the line between formality and informality in the premises.

It is known that the Washington government remains optimistic despite pessimistic reports from abroad concerning the reception the German proposals have received in Europe. They seek to emphasize daily the fact that the United States is not concerned regarding the acceptability of the German offer as a settlement of the question, but concerned only with its becoming eventually a basis for further discussions between the German government and the allies.

Keep to the Side Lines.

The Washington government admittedly was watching the meeting today of the supreme council at London, but watching it only from the side lines. No representative of the United States participated in the council nor was there present any representative of the United States merely as an observer.

Officials would not comment on reports that Great Britain was urging a postponement of seven days in the contemplated advance of the French into the Ruhr district. It was apparent here, however, that the United States government would look upon such a postponement as an indication of progress toward reopening of reparations negotiations and ultimate success of the effort made by this government to bring about a just settlement of the indemnity issue on terms acceptable to the allies.

BOOM TREE LINED ROADS IN LETTER, POEMS AND CASH

Tribune's Mail Is Heavy with Praises.

"It was upon the trunk of a knotty and sturdy oak the ancient heroes were wont to hang the arms and weapons taken from the enemy as trophies, as appears in the yet remaining stump of Marius at Rome and the reverses of several medals. Famous for this was the pregnant Leaffer which grew in the Forum of Megara, on which the heroes of old left their shields and bucklers, till in process of time it had covered them with successive coats of bark and timber, as it was afterward found when Pericles sacked the city, which the Oracle predicted should be impregnable till a tree should bring forth armour."—William John Evelyn.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

The great American avenues that the people of the country are planning to complete by Memorial day next year, in memory of every soldier, sailor and marine who did his bit in the world's greatest war, have stirred the fires of patriotism. The mind picture of those avenues, lined with memorial trees, has inspired men and women to give money, write poetry, send telegrams and write letters commending the idea. THE TRIBUNE mail is heavy with praises, offers of coöperation and questions about practical procedure from those who wish to begin the work at once.

Mrs. Ida Evans Arnold, chairman of roads for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Department of Applied Education, who put forth such splendid efforts and succeeded in getting 3,000 bird houses built in Illinois in three months, when the foresters needed them, has praised THE TRIBUNE's tree planting project and offered every coöperation.

Clubs to Coöperate.

The clubs have already, in conjunction with the schools, planted hundreds of memorial trees and are ready to plant more.

Miss Harriet Vittum approves the plan, and is certain the Woman's City club can be depended upon to help to complete in a year the greatest of "Roads of Remembrance."

Women's clubs throughout the country which have been interested in tree planting, and in memorial tree planting especially, have voiced an immediate desire to coöperate with THE TRIBUNE and bring to quick completion the Remembrance Roads.

Cook county's forester, Ransome Kennicott, has started the good work by assuring THE TRIBUNE that the county commissioner and forest preserve commissioners will donate probably as many as 10,000 trees from the county's nurseries to be planted along the highways.

Boy Scouts Will Aid.

Dr. H. W. Hurt says that by the end of the year, with a present membership of 8,000 and Boy Scouts recruiting at the rate of 400 and 500 a month, there will be about 10,000 Boy Scouts in the state.

"I can assure you each scout will plant a tree or furnish one," he said. "The commissioners would give those trees for the scouts to plant, I'm certain," said Mr. Kennicott.

The commissioners so generously inclined who have set an example to those of other communities are:

Daniel Ryan, president; Bartley Burg, William Busse, Joseph Carolan, Joseph M. Fitzgerald, Charles N. Goodnow, William H. Maclean, Robert W. McKinlay, George A. Miller, Tom Murray, Albert Nowak, Dudley D. Pierson, Emmet Whealan, and Frank J. Wilson.

Help Make Proudest Roads.

What have you or the organization to which you belong to say of the plan? What will you do to help make the avenues that will be the proudest roads in history and an aid and comfort to the country's friends who visit here for centuries to come?

Write to THE TRIBUNE.

WHICH WOULD YOU PREFER TO DRIVE OVER?

The picture above shows a stretch of the great Lincoln highway. The barrenness of the landscape is relieved only by the telegraph poles along one side of the road and the uncared for underbrush and scraggly looking trees that appear at rare intervals.

This picture shows another stretch of road along which trees were planted years ago and cared for until their branches overspread the highway now and provide shade for travelers along it.

MRS. HARDING IS ENTHUSIAST OVER "A TREE A HERO"

Mrs. McCormick Also Acclaims Idea.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 30.—[Special.]—With the flags of the allies fluttering, Mrs. Warren G. Harding and Mrs. Medill McCormick today planted trees from Ohio and from Illinois along the memorial walk on the grounds of the American Forestry association headquarters on 16th street.

An Ohio tulip tree from the agricultural experiment station at Wooster, O., was planted by the President's wife, who placed an American flag beside it. P. S. Ridsdale, association secretary, held the tree in place while Mrs. Harding trowled the earth.

While little Miss Katrina McCormick held an American hawthorn from State Forester Miller at Urbana, Mrs. McCormick was ably assisted by Master John Medill McCormick, who had brought his own shovel, and he did some plain and fancy shoveling that was a delight to Mrs. Harding.

Memorial Is Explained.

Secretary Ridsdale greeted Mrs. Harding, who was accompanied by Miss Laura Harlan and Mrs. McCormick, and explained to them the purpose of the miniature memorial highway. A little gravel walk is placed each side of the main walk, and on each side of these gravel paths there is room for twelve trees, making forty-eight in all, or one from each state.

"This is certainly a beautiful idea," Mrs. Harding said, "and I am glad to have a part in planting a tree from Ohio in this little walk. I do hope this memorial way will be a great inspiration to thousands of others, for it seems to me to be both an attractive and serviceable form of memorial to plant trees along our highways and our roads as the association inspires us to do.

Near McKinley's Tomb.

"In Ohio the Lincoln Highway Memorial association has been doing a great work near Canton, where the highway goes within a short distance of McKinley's tomb. There has been planting, too, at Middletown, and many other places.

"The idea of planting memorial trees along our roads should have a strong appeal to every one," Mrs. McCormick added. "A great deal has been done in the west, and much more can be done. I think it one of the biggest factors in aiding good roads projects, and making country life more attractive."

TRIBUNE PUSHES 'EXPERTS' SUIT TO HEARING FRIDAY

Five Defendants Notified to Be in Court.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The Tribune company wants action at once in its suit to recover more than $1,000,000 paid Austin J. Lynch and Frank H. Mesce as city building experts on six street improvements. It took a decided step yesterday to prevent delay in getting an injunction "permanently and perpetually enjoining and restraining" the payment of the remainder of $2,786,063 to them, which President Faherty of the board of local improvements has officially estimated they will receive under their agreement with the city.

The step to expedite the suit and get a decision was the serving of a notice on all defendants, except one, that next Friday morning the attorneys for the Tribune company, McCormick, Kirkland, Patterson, and Fleming, will start the taking of depositions before Master in Chancery Sidney S. Pollack at his offices in the First National Bank building. The notice tells the defendants that they are at liberty to be present and cross examine the witnesses, if they desire.

Mesce Can't Be Found.

The one on whom notice has not been served is Frank H. Mesce, one of the two experts. His office and residence were visited yesterday, as well as other places where it was surmsied he might be found, but he had not been located at the time of going to press. No information regarding his whereabouts was obtained from those of his employés interrogated. One person suggested that he was out of town for the week end, but no verification of that was obtained.

Mayor William Hale Thompson, one of the defendants, was served with a notice Friday evening. Another, Austin J. Lynch, building expert, was found at his office. Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, accepted his notification yesterday morning, as also did James Igoe, city clerk, on behalf of the city of Chicago.

Names of Witnesses.

The list of witnesses disclosed by the notice are as follows:

William Hale Thompson, mayor of Chicago.

George F. Harding, city controller.

Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements.

Frank H. Mesce, building expert.

Austin J. Lynch, building expert.

Clayton Smith, city treasurer.

Of the six, City Treasurer Smith is not a defendant. He took office only last Monday. All the payments to the experts complained of in the suit are alleged to have been paid before Smith took office. But the notice gives no indication whatever of the kind or amount of information which The Tribune company's lawyers will seek from the witnesses.

Charges in Suit.

The suit charges there was a conspiracy to cheat and defraud the city. It asserts that the services of Mesce and Lynch were not worth more than $15 a day each, and that the city paid approximately nineteen times more for their services than they are worth.

In addition, the bill charges that the two experts were paid in large part from appropriations that "are null, void, and of no effect, and are in direct contravention of the statutes of said state relating to appropriations of cities." They have been paid a total of $1,004,586.84, according to City Controller Harding.

Another charge reads:

"The said Michael J. Faherty, on or about the month of Janury, A. D. 1921, openly and notoriously declared and boasted both in public and at a session of the finance committee of the city council of said city that he, in behalf of said city, had without authority from the city council of said city employed the said Frank H. Mesce and Austin J. Lynch for a term of five years beginning in the month of January, A. D. 1920, as building experts for said city, and that during said term the said Frank H. Mesce and the said Austin J. Lynch will receive at least another million dollars for their alleged services as building experts."

One of Many North Shore Children Who Took Part in Kiddies' Fashion Show in Evanston Last Night.

ANNA JANE BECHTEL.
[Toloff Photo.]

Rolls-Royces, Pierce-Arrows, Packards and such-like to those who crave 'em. As for Anna Jane Bechtel, give her the little old 1921 model Baby Doll Buggy. Little Anna Jane, buggy and all, was one of the scores of winsome misses who took part in the Kiddie fashion show at the North Shore hotel, Evanston, last night. There were displays not only of fine doll equippages, but of all the dainty frocks smart children wear and of flowers and everything, as well. Proceeds of the show, under direction of Mildred Brandham Pierce, will go to furnishing a room at the Evanston hospital.

Seized as Booze Runner; Wanted as Mail Suspect

Federal authorities attach a twofold significance to the arrest yesterday of James F. Beeler, 819 North Wells street, alleged "brains" of an interstate whisky smuggling band. Besides this charge they have information Beeler is wanted in Pittsburgh for passing a check identified as part of the loot recently stolen from the mails here.

COMPANION OF MURDERED CHIEF HELD AS SLAYER

Friend Also Arrested for West Chicago Killing.

James R. Seanor, who, according to his own story, was with Chief of Police George Reihm of West Chicago when the latter was shot and killed early Friday morning, was arrested last night on a charge of murder. Carl Curtiss, a friend of Seanor, and the man who tried to secrete the fallen chief's revolver, was arrested on a similar charge. Both are in the Wheaton jail.

State's Attorney C. W. Reed and his assistant, G. W. Hadley, and Sheriff George F. Leineke of Du Page county are certain Reihm was killed by bootleggers, against whom he has been active. They charge Seanor and Curtiss took a leading part in the whisky ring.

Two Women Still Held.

Mrs. Marian Baune and Mrs. Elsie Betts, who live in St. Charles, and who were in West Chicago shortly before the murder, are still being held because of conflicting stories they have told. The county authorities believe they have some knowledge of the operations of the whisky ring, but do not think the women helped the slayer of Reihm to escape, as Seanor charges.

Chief Reihm, a former saloonkeeper, had been exceedingly active against bootleggers. He conducted raids, arrested and prosecuted ring members, and made every effort to break up the constant stream of "St. Charles-made white mule" which was being brought into town.

Chief Had Resigned.

The ring openly threatened to "get" the chief, it is said. Its members bullied him and abused him, and a week ago two of them attacked him. After this Reihm told friends he feared they meant business, and he handed in his resignation. It was to have taken effect last night.

Burglars Smother Man to Death in His Bed

New York, April 30.—Burglars today smothered Paul Ludwig to death in his bed and escaped with a large sum of money. Ludwig, who was the lessee of three apartment houses here, was found with blankets and bed clothes piled over his head. The bed clothing was strapped down by his own suspenders.

Burglar Drops Two Stories from Window and Escapes

Mrs. George Homan surprised a burglar yesterday in her home at 1034 North La Salle street. The man dropped from a second floor window and escaped. He took no loot.

110 BUILDING MEN INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

Supply Firms and Leaders of Unions Are Hit.

ing and rent paying public, it is set up, has wiped out genuine bidding, and has served to boost the prices of heating apparatus by at least 100 per cent, in other words, doubling the prices.

What Plumbing Men Face.

PLUMBING—An indictment against thirty-nine corporations and individuals engaged in the wholesale supply of plumbing and heating materials was returned by the March jury and released yesterday. It has two counts. The first charges a restraint of trade conspiracy and alleges that the thirty-nine defendants have restricted the trade of several manufacturers outside Illinois. The true bill sets up that this restraint was practiced on these manufacturers because they sold their products to mail order houses or directly from factory to the consumer.

The second count alleges a conspiracy to monopolize trade in the furnishing of plumbing and heating supplies by fixing the prices by the various jobbers in Chicago.

A uniformity of price is alleged among the thirteen jobbing houses that control practically the entire sales of plumbing and heating supplies in the city. Competition has been knocked cold; and the price fixing and trade restraint practices, it is claimed, have increased the cost of plumbing supplies in the last three years by about 150 per cent.

Not Work of Dailey Probers.

The indictments were independent of the Dailey commission's inquiry into abuses in the building industry. Agents of the department of justice, under Division Superintendent Edward J. Brennan, gathered the evidence, and the federal authorities give much of the credit for the results of the March and April grand jury hearings to Thomas J. Howe. As assistant district prosecutor he had charge of the presentation of evidence.

District Attorney Clyne called a conference of all those engaged in the building investigation late yesterday to form plans for the third grand jury quiz.

With the completion of the probe into the activity of the mill workers, steamfitters, plumbers, and sheet metal trades, the investigation is expected to turn on the electrical unions and sand, gravel, and glass industries.

"This is only the beginning of our investigation," Mr. Clyne said. "It will require several months to complete our probe into other branches of the building industry."

PROBERS CHEER NEWS.

While the Dailey investigating commission was in session yesterday it received word of the 110 indictments of building supply firms and men in the industry. The news caused rejoicing among the commission members. Senator Dailey issued the following statement:

"We are much pleased over the successful efforts of District Attorney Clyne, who pledged cooperation at the start. It is through the active cooperation of the United States district attorney, the state's attorney, and Attorney General Brundage, with the commission, that we can be assured of a relentless warfare against illegal combines of labor, material and contracting men."

Ford Plant Now Making 4,000 Motor Cars Daily

Detroit, Mich., April 30.—Announcement was made that the Ford Highland Park factory has reached a production of 4,000 cars a day, which equals the number produced when the industry was at its height. It also was announced officially today that employés of the Ford Motor company will receive a bonus in their pay envelopes every two weeks instead of once a year, as previously. It has not been decided definitely when the first payment will be made, but it will be soon, it is said.

INVALID BRAVES DEATH TO BARE BUILDING GRAFT

'Gets Habit' of Digging Up to Union Chiefs.

The paying of graft to the czars of the labor world became such a frequent occurrance with one well known Chicago builder that he began to turn the money over to them from force of habit, and without being asked to do so, the Dailey legislative investigating commission heard yesterday.

The builder appeared before the commission in such a weakened condition that several times a recess had to be called while he was revived. He had risen from his bed in the hospital, he told the commission, to come forward and tell his story.

His testimony followed shortly after the commission quizzed Al Woods, New York and Chicago theatrical owner, who had been summoned to tell of his version of the so-called $60,000 shakedown in connection with the construction of his new loop theater, the Apollo.

Woods' Manager Called.

Just what Mr. Woods revealed is not known, as he was called in executive session. However, following the questioning a subpoena was issued for his building manager, said to be a Mr. Thomas. According to report Thomas was about to board a train for New York when the subpoena was served on him.

He will appear before the commission on Monday and tell how the graft, if any, was paid.

Testimony of the invalid, whose name was not revealed, was the high light of yesterday's inquiry.

"I have been threatened by the unions," he declared, "but I am now risking my life to come here and tell what I know, so I don't feel that the threat of the union men means anything to me."

He said that graft totaling $7,500 had been paid the unions. Of this amount, he declared, $3,000 was paid through a well known architect, whose name was withheld.

"We made payments when the unions did not even demand it," he said. "They warned me each time, however, that if any one squawked he would be bumped off."

How trouble is collected from managers of downtown office buildings in which alterations are being made was told by a manager who testified that he has been approached recently by several labor business agents, who have demanded sums of from $200 to $500.

"When the first man came to see me he said that if I wanted alterations completed in time to give possession to a new tenant I would have to come across. I told him that I couldn't, as I had no way to pay out extra money.

"'Don't you belong to the Building Managers' association?' he asked. 'They ought to tell you how to do business.'

Will Not Be "Unfair."

"'But I represent the interests of the owner of the building and I can't do anything unfair to him,' I said.

"'What t' hell do you care about him?' he asked in surprise. 'It isn't you're money we're getting. Get wise to yourself and learn how we do business in Chicago.'"

A statement giving the rural citizen's viewpoint on building material prices was made last night by Senator Harold C. Kessinger.

"Rents will not come down until buildings go up," he said. "Buildings will not go up until prices come down. We country members of the legislative committee cannot understand why corn should drop from $2 to 50 cents a bushel—only one-fourth of its former price—while there has been little reduction in the prices of brick, lumber, cement, tile, and farm machinery.

OBREGON WRITES LEADEN PERIODS TO NEW UPRISING

Mexico City, April 30.—Mexican government authorities continue to arrest and execute persons alleged to be plotting against the stability of the Obregon administration. Sanchez del Castillo faced a firing squad Thursday at Monterey following his conviction as a rebel, while José Morno and Antonio Alderete were shot yesterday following their capture at Nuevo Laredo by federal forces in Tamaulipas.

Salome Castrejon, a former adherent of President Carranza, has been arrested at Acupalo, Guerrero, on charges of revolutionary activity.

It was stated at the war office last night that numerous letters had been received from farmers in states along the American border urging that summary action be taken against persons reported to be fomenting revolutions on United States soil. These letters mentionad in particular Francisco Murguia and Candido Aguilar.

LOCKOUT HALTS ALL BUILDING; BOTH SIDES 'PAT'

$35,000,000 Work Tied Up, 10,000 Idle.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

May day sees building in Chicago practically at a dead standstill. When the noon whistles blew yesterday the lockout announced by the two big associations of builders who normally do 85 per cent of the work, went into effect. Work was suspended on structures worth more than $35,000,000, which are either in process of erection or finishing or for which contracts have been let.

About 10,000 building craftsmen joined the army of the unemployed—the activities closed down by the lockout gave employment to about 20 per cent of the 48,000 or 50,000 men in the building trades in Chicago.

Neither side in the wage controversy budged during the day, nor were there signs of changed attitude. The builders repeated that work would not be resumed until a reduction in wages to $1 an hour for skilled men and 70 cents for unskilled labor is accepted.

Unions Equally Obstinate.

The unions sat as tight as the employers and said it would take until Tuesday or Wednesday before an accurate line can be got on the scope of the shutdown.

Saturday afternoon is a half holiday, so yesterday's closing did not change affairs much on the surface. The unions say that when the whistle blows Monday morning the lockout will demonstate how tightly or loosely it fits.

Some of the labor officials declare some contractors, with jobs almost finished, will bolt the associations. The builders deny this. Union chiefs point out that some independent contractors will keep going; the material men have announced that yards will remain open, and the result will be more work, perhaps on cottages, bungalows, and small flat buildings.

Claims and Counter Claims.

Some of the larger builders declare that many craftsmen, out of work, have been seeking and holding down jobs as common laborers at 70 to 80 cents an hour. The unions declare the scale will stick, even with small independents.

At Waukegan the old rate is being paid, and throughout the residential outskirts labor leaders say they rather look for something of a revival in home building. The builders take little stock in this, so it's a case of making one's own guess.

The milk, bread, and meat teamsters' controversies are in statu quo. No strike is looked for by the participants, at least tomorrow or next day, despite excited bulletins from some quarters to the opposite effect. The Illinois Milk Dealers' association, by W. B. Wanzer, said another conference with the drivers would be held the early part of the week.

Oppose Walkouts or Lockouts.

The packing house teamsters are still negotiating, and so are the bread wagon drivers. While negotiations are on, a strike is only a last resort, not an imminent contingency. Both sides yesterday were discouraging talk of walkouts or lockouts.

Ice cream vehicle drivers and manufacturers renewed a working agreement last night at a meeting in the Hotel Sherman.

Meanwhile May day sees more unemployment than did Jan. 1. But still Chicago and the middle west seem to be a trifle less hard hit than industrial regions to the east. An estimate of 4,500,000 unemployed or on part time is considered conservative for the country at large.

200,000 Jobless Here.

In Chicago the old figure of 100,000 out of work is still used. But it is last winter's estimate, and it applied only to manufacturing. Adding the increased slump in the last four months and the workless in other lines than industrial, 200,000 unemployed would come nearer the mark, so some conservative experts figure.

The federal reserve bank's bulletin yesterday gives a good cross-section of industries and how much under normal they appeared to be running in April. Figures based on reports from 929 plants indicate a one-third decrease in Chicago in number employed as against a year ago, and that plants on an average were operating at 52 per cent of capacity in March. At present a fair estimate would probably be that on an average the industrial plants are running 48 to 50 per cent of capacity, perhaps somewhat less.

Industry in This District.

For the Seventh reserve district as a whole, the trend of unemployment in twenty-seven lines of industry as of April 1 is as follows:

Per cent decrease in number of employed compared with March, 1920:

Public utility	4	Wood, paper containers	32
Printing	7	Miscellaneous	39
Coal mining	10	Farm implements	42
Glass, etc.	11	Cereals	43
Bakery, confectionery	16	Metal work	43
Woolens, knit goods	17	Chemicals, paints	45
Woodworking	21	Iron, steel, brass	45
Packing	22	Pianos, musl. insts.	46
Railroad shops	24	Machinery	48
Clothing	25	Railway cars, sup.	49
Lumber, millwork	26	Autos, acces	57
Furniture	28	Elec. goods	63
Leather	31	Const., bldg	70
Brick, const. matls.	35

The average decrease was 34 per cent. Indications are that it now ranges around the 40 per cent mark.

Consumption of coal outside the loop is reported at 45 per cent of normal, an indication of the sag in steam driven plants. Railroad traffic, inbound, is reported at about 45 per cent of normal, outbound at a trifle below this figure.

LEARNING HOW TO BE NURSES

BUILDING PERMITS DROP

In the face of the building deadlock, permits for new construction work of all kinds fell off during April, dropping almost to the level of April, 1920.

During the previous four months the pressure of home seekers caused a slight but steady increase in the number of permits for residences and small apartment buildings, but last month the number of apartment building permits dropped off 17 per cent, and permits for residences 33.9 per cent.

The figures:

	April, 1920.	March, 1921.	April, 1921.
Factories, stores, public garages, etc.	194	121	110
Residences	298	525	347
Apartments	11	74	61
Others	18	30	18
Total	521	750	536
Frontage [feet]	18,344	20,914	15,899
Cost	$9,060,000	$7,320,100	$15,239,400

The total cost of the buildings represented by last month's permits was swelled by a $9,000,000 permit for the Illinois Merchants bank. It was estimated that the sixty-one apartment buildings for which permits were taken out last month will add 400 flats to the city's supply.

Religion Causes Change in "Landing of Pilgrims"

Milwaukee, Wis., April 30—[Special.]—Because Archbishop Sebastian Messmer refused to permit children of the Catholic parochial schools to participate in a "Landing of the Pilgrims" pageant in the Fourth of July celebration here, this feature was stricken from the program following a meeting of the celebration committee. Archbishop Messmer, in his letter to the committee stated that Catholics would be unable to take part, inasmuch as the pageant would depict a Protestant history.

GAR II. JR. BEATS TRAIN IN RACE MIAMI-GOTHAM

New York, April 30.—In a smother of foam the Gar II. Jr. raced out of the mists of the North river this morning and docked at the Columbia Yacht club, having beaten the record time of the "Havana Special" of the Atlantic Coast Lines from Miami to New York by 21 minutes.

The actual running time of the Gar II. Jr. from Miami was 47 hours and 23 minutes, with fuel consumption of about one and one-half gallons of gasoline to the mile. The official express train time is 47 hours and 44 minutes. The boat has two Liberty motors.

The crew included Gar Wood, Detroit manufacturer and owner of the speed boat; Charles Chapman, editor of Motor Boating; Capt. John Post, and Joseph Kinney, mechanic. They were elated.

Mr. Wood expects to make Detroit and the Gar II. Jr. probably will leave Monday for Albany, then go through the Erie canal to Buffalo, and from Buffalo to Detroit. The entire trip from start to finish will be one of more than 2,000 miles. Mr. Chapman will continue with Mr. Wood to the end of the trip.

Splinter Causes Poison; Wood Chopper Is Dead

John J. Smith, 50, 324 South Lincoln street, died yesterday of blood poisoning which developed when his right hand was pierced by a splinter while he was chopping wood a week ago.

MORE ADEQUATE PACIFIC NAVAL BASES NEEDED

Poor Facilities Injure the Navy in West.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., April 30.—[Special.]—Because of the inadequacy of naval bases the United States, according to navy authorities, is totally unprepared to fight a successful war in the western Pacific.

The most advanced base we now possess is at Pearl Harbor, in the Hawaiian islands. Its facilities, however, are scarcely more than rudimentary. With the exception of a dry dock the equipment is insufficient to care for the needs of half the navy in time of peace, let alone the whole navy in time of war. Another dry dock and construction of a multitude of channels and berths, as well as the establishment of vast repair work and storage warehouses for supplies, are necessary, according to the navy department.

Need Base at Hawaii.

Until the Hawaiian islands are made an adequate base the American navy will be unable to operate effectively in the western Pacific. Lacking such a base, it would be necessary to supply the fighting fleet almost entirely from the Pacific coast bases, the distance to which would be a severe handicap on operations.

Even the Pacific coast bases are inadequate to the demands of the whole navy if stationed in the Pacific, even in time of peace. It would be necessary to send ships back to the Atlantic coast for major repair work.

The navy department is urging congress for appropriations to begin the construction of Pacific coast and Hawaiian island bases which it will require several years to complete. The senate is favorable but the house opposed to such appropriations.

The Parks-McKean board, which surveyed the need of bases in the Pacific, recommended the expenditure of $27,184,000 in the Hawaiian islands, $44,065,750 at Bremerton, Wash., $42,313,200 at San Diego, $5,000,000 at San Pedro, $5,000,000 at the Columbia river, $3,498,600 at Port Angeles, Wash., and $2,871,000 at Keyport, Wash., a total of $157,738,350.

Done Now at Less Cost.

"While this total," said the board, "seems to be an immense sum, considering the financial conditions of our country, to recommend to expend within the next five years, the board is of the opinion that it has recommended no items that are not necessary to the efficient and economical maintenance and operation of the fleet; that the providing of these necessary facilities can be done in time of peace at much less cost than they can be improvided and rushed under either war conditions or conditions preceding a threatened war; and when it is remembered that at the beginning of the world war we had on the Atlantic coast the following navy yards and bases: Portsmouth, N. H.; Boston, Mass.; Newport, R. I.; New London, Conn.; New York; Philadelphia, Pa.; Norfolk, Va.; naval operating base, Hampton Roads, Va.; Charleston, S. C.; Key West, Fla.; New Orleans, La.; Guantanamo, Cuba; and Pensacola, Fla.—a total of thirteen existing at that time, six more than the total recommended herein for the Pacific; that these bases and yards have been long established at great cost and that the navy department found it absolutely necessary to expend a total of about $88,209,753 on their expansion under war conditions at war prices in an attempt to equip them for the maintenance of the fleet found necessary under war conditions even when the war was 3,000 miles across the Atlantic; and that it was further necessary for the navy department to finance a large number of private ship yards, dock yards, boiler shops, forge shops, turbine shops, etc., at a total cost of about $64,022,500 the sum recommended for expenditure on the west coast and the number of bases recommended as necessary are relatively small.

Navy and Board Agree.

"The recommendations and requests coming in from the Pacific fleet as to the development of bases, expansion of yards, etc., which the fleet realizes to be necessary even after the short time that has elapsed since the fleet went to the Pacific, are in agreement with and along the lines proposed by the Helm commission and special board."

The Helm board found that the bases in the Pacific were only one-third the capacity required for adequate care of the navy even in time of peace.

Fascisti Give Rome Official Fiume Control

FIUME, April 29.—[Delayed.]—The revolutionary government here today handed over its authority to Sig. Vellasich, a plenipotentiary representative of the Rome government.

During grave rioting between Fascisti and Croatians, which lasted from 9 o'clock last night until 6 this morning, five persons were killed and many were wounded. Several lost their lives when a party of autonomists were trapped in a building.

SHUBERTS LEASE HIPPODROME; 'BIG TIME' BATTLE ON

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago was definitely selected as the site for one of the liveliest battles in the proposed nation-wide vaudeville war yesterday when the Shuberts signed leases by which they agree to pay $85,000 a year for the Hippodrome, or a total rental of $1,275,000 during the next fifteen years.

An interesting feature of this deal is that several years ago the Shuberts leased the theater, then called the Great Northern, for about $35,000 a year. They renamed it the Lyric and operated it for a short period. Now they rerent the same house at an advance of $50,000 a year from the Great Northern-Majestic Building corporation, of which A. C. Thompson is president.

This is the first tangible evidence that the long talked of variety war between the Shuberts and the Orpheum and allied interests actually will affect Chicago. The Hippodrome will be rechristened—the Alhambra being a tentative name—and opened on Sept. 1 with "big time" vaudeville at the same prices as the Palace and Majestic.

The theater will be closed Aug. 1, and about $75,000 spent in reseating, remodeling and redecorating. The balcony will be brought closer to the stage and 400 seats added, making a total capacity of 1,800.

The Hippodrome was opened as the Great Northern in November, 1896, with Henry Miller in "Heartsease." Since then it has fluctuated between high class legitimate, vaudeville, movies, popular priced legitimate stock and art theater.

Law of Success Indispensable For Progress

Wednesday, April 27.—That there is an infallible law of success applicable to every individual in every walk of life, was illustrated today by Gordon J. Hargrave, noted character analyst and vocational adviser, at the noon meeting of the Character Analysis club in the West room at the Sherman hotel. Mr. Hargrave amplified his statements with demonstrations of the principles on which success or failure of the individual are based.

Success Law Absolute.

"The law of success brought out by my research work into the science of human nature is absolutely infallible," declared Mr Hargrave.

"There are many persons who are not aware that there is something lacking—that they are getting nowhere, and that they are considered failures by all who know them. They do not realize that there is a law of success or a law of failure. I can assure such 'failures' that I never saw such a case which did not instantly yield to simple treatment.

Law True for All.

"The knowledge afforded by the law of success can be applied by every man or woman whose work involves influencing other persons.

"In the possession of the fundamental law of success, every progressive individual will find the secret of steady progress. The persons who know the law will get ahead in life; those who do not know it will slip back. There is no such thing as absolute immobility. All things change for better or worse, and all men are therefore progressive or retrogressive.

Not a Theory.

"There is nothing theoretical about the law of success. The theory that surrounded it in the beginning has been submerged in the practicality of the law's application. Every man and woman can apply it to himself and to every other individual. Its workings have physical indications that are apparent to the man who knows where to look for them and how to see them after he has looked.

Losing Sales.

"Many salesmen talk themselves into a probable sale—and then proceed to talk themselves out of it. They simply do not know when to get the name on the dotted line, pick up their hats, and leave.

"The law of success, as we understand it and discuss it in our round table meetings, lays down the facts that fit each and every case. If the salesman has knowledge of the law and conforms to it, he will not make the mistake of overselling himself or his goods. He will know positively how his prospect is inclined as the sales talk proceeds, and he will know the exact moment at which the sale can be closed."

Mr. Hargrave concluded his lecture by giving an actual demonstration of the principles involved in the law of success. The members of the Character Analysis club and the assembled guests followed him closely.

All Are Invited.

Meetings are held every Wednesday noon in the West room of the Sherman hotel; every Wednesday night between 8 and 9 o'clock in Garrick hall, Garrick theater building; and every Saturday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock in Mr. Hargrave's office, suite 820 Stewart building. Members of the club extend a cordial invitation to persons who feel that they are interested in learning something about influencing others.

You are invited to attend.

BLONDE HAIR NETS GIVE MRS. HOOL DIVORCE, $34,000

Rich Realtor's Wife Finds Evidence in Home.

When Mrs. James A. Hool returned unexpectedly to her home at 1326 Albion avenue, in the summer of 1920, she found the house in a general state of disorder. She had come merely for some of her summer clothes.

MRS. JAMES A. HOOL.

The value of her discoveries was measured in Judge Jesse Baldwin's court yesterday when she was granted a divorce and received $34,246 in cash and bonds as alimony. The money was paid by Attorney Charles E. Erbstein, representing her husband, James A. Hool, wealthy head of the Hool Realty company.

"I suppose you are as happy now as on the day you were married," remarked Attorney Erbstein.

"Happier," said Mrs. Hool, beaming, as she receipted for the money satchel.

Two Women Named in Bill.

Mrs. Hool in her bill charged her husband with "extreme cruelty" and named two women.

"What happened when you returned to your home last summer?" asked Attorney Clarence E. Mogg.

"Why," replied the witness, "in nearly all the bedrooms I found auburn hair nets, blonde hairpins, and nightgowns."

"Now will you please remove your hat and show the court the color of your hair?" suggested Attorney Mogg.

Mrs. Hool quickly removed her hat, smiling the while, and revealed a profusion of raven hair. She declared she had spent the summer months at Stone Lake, Wis., and had returned expecting to leave next day with some of her "outing" clothes.

Nurse Corroborates Story.

Mrs. Sigma Gustafson, a laundress, and Miss May McKenzie, a nurse employed by the family, corroborated Mrs. Hool's testimony.

The Hools were married Dec. 25, 1911, and lived together until Oct. 28, 1920, when the husband is alleged to have deserted his home and wife. In addition to the cash settlement Mrs. Hool is to receive an automobile and the custody of her child, James Hool Jr., 3 years old. The alimony terms were reached by agreement outside of court.

VISCOUNT FRENCH'S SISTER ASKS HELP FOR SUFFERING ERIN

MRS. CHARLOTTE DESPARD.

DUBLIN, April 30.—Mrs. Charlotte Despard, sister of Viscount French, today asked C. U. France, chairman of the American committee for relief in Ireland to transmit to the committee a cablegram summarizing the results of her investigation into conditions in Ireland.

She declares the people are suffering severely from the effects of unemployment, the general dislocation of industry and the destruction of factories and warehouses, in addition to the shortage of food. There has been a great deal of infant mortality, premature birth and other consequences of the abnormal situation, and measures of relief are needed urgently.

Mrs. Despard in conclusion pays tribute to the spirit of Irish women, declaring:

"Their courage, cheerful endurance and profound faith in the future of their country filled me with wonder and admiration."

SEAN M'SWINEY ESCAPES FROM BRITISH PRISON

Irish Ambush a British Military Train.

CORK, April 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Sean MacSwiney, brother of the late Lord Mayor MacSwiney, with two other Sinn Feiners under internment, escaped today from the Spike island internment camp. They overpowered the guard while working outside the fort and seized a motor boat on the shore.

Viscount French Honored.

LONDON, April 30.—King George conferred an earldom on Viscount French on his retirement today as lord lieutenant and governor general of Ireland. His successorfi Viscount Talbot, took over the office this morning.

Irish Hold Up Train.

DUBLIN, April 30.—A train carrying military and civilians was ambushed last night near Kilmacthomas, County Waterford, it was announced at headquarters today. The troops left the train and with machine gun and hand grenade fire dispersed the ambushing party. Three members of the attacking force and two soldiers were wounded.

To Take Part in Elections.

DUBLIN, April 30.—Augustin Stack, minister for home affairs in the Dail Eireann, or Irish republican parliament, today issued a proclamation in the name of that body, declaring the home rule act to be illegal as a foreign statute, but saying it would be recognized for the elections in order to enable the people's will again to be demonstrated.

JOB SHOPS POST NOTICE OF 'PAY FOR ACTUAL TIME'

Employing printers yesterday forced the forty-four hour day issue between themselves and their 6,000 employes by posting in their job shops notices that after tomorrow they would pay only for time actually spent at work. The union printers are demanding forty-eight hours' pay for forty-four hours' work. The employers announce that they are willing to pay forty-eight hours' pay for forty-eight hours' work or forty-four hours' pay for forty-four hours' work.

According to Mark J. Mitchell, vice president of Typographical union No. 16, the action of the employers is in violation of an agreement which the employing printers made with the unions, Aug. 25, 1919. The dispute, which involves many phases, has been submitted to Dean Ralph E. Heilman of Northwestern university as arbiter, and his decision is expected soon.

THREE MONTHS FOR AUTO THIEF.

Russell Pearsons, 18, 3726 North Sacramento avenue, was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction yesterday by Judge McKinley of the Boys' court on a charge of attempting to steal the automobile of John Vghetti, 1714 Melrose street.

DETROIT GIRL SEES U. OF M. BOY SHOT ON STREET

Detroit, Mich., April 30.—[Special.]—Bertram A. Levy, 18, a sophomore at the University of Michigan, who lived at 1065 Glynn court, was shot while in the Boston boulevard district at midnight Friday. He died on the way to Providence hospital. A watch, a gold knife, and a small amount of money were found untouched in the pockets. The bullet, which was of large caliber, entered his chest and pierced his spine.

Levy was returning from the home of Albert Eliel, 141 Euclid avenue west.

Information regarding Levy's killing was supplied by Miss Ida Niemitana, 1529 Boston boulevard, who saw the slaying from across the street.

Two men in a limousine drove rapidly along the boulevard and when a short distance from young Levy the machine drew up to the curb. One of the men alighted, Miss Niemitana said, ran in front of Levy, and pointed a revolver or automatic pistol at him. He screamed. The man fired.

NINE BOYS AND GIRLS WIN FREE TRIBUNE BIKES

Marjorie Hill in Lead of Great Race.

Hurrah! Marjorie Hill wins the first bicycle! She received it yesterday and rode away happy as a lark.

Marjorie was the first one under the wire with the thirty-five subscriptions for which THE TRIBUNE is offering the boys and girls who like to ride a chance to win a $60 Ranger bicycle. She says it was the easiest thing she ever earned and wishes the paper would offer something else now for thirty-five more.

"Every one was perfectly gran-n-nd to me," said Marjorie. "All I had to do was to go up and ask them. If they weren't already taking THE TRIBUNE they signed up right away. Tell the rest of the boys and girls who are after a bicycle I wish them good luck."

George Also Wins a Bike.

But Marjorie didn't win by a big margin. There were a number of boys and girls right on her heels. In fact she beat some of them into the office only by a matter of minutes. The winners started to arrive in quick succession yesterday.

First there was George Finerschienger, who brought thirty-nine orders—four more than he needed to win the bike.

"I started getting 'em," said George, "and I wasn't sure just how many I had, and didn't want to stop to count while the going was good. After I got through I counted 'em up and found I had four over. Well, I guess that's giving you good measure."

George was followed closely by David Green with 38 orders, and by Lorraine Anderson, who had signed up 36. David and Lorraine also wanted to make sure of that bicycle, so they thought it would be better to be a little over than a little short.

"What's the use of stopping when you got just enough?" said David. "Might as well make a good job of it."

Four More Also Land.

Among those who brought 35 subscriptions each were Dick McCarthy, Robert Tuscher, Adelaide Ewing, and Seymore Cooperman. They all win a bike, too, and—O, yes, at the last minute another arrived with 39, four over. She was Anna Busalachi, who had been out hustling like the dickens.

Well, the boys better hustle if they don't wish to see the girls beat their record, because those little girls are certainly working fast. Perhaps the little girls' winning smiles give them a "head start" on the boys. Anyway, they're going strong, and it looks as though they're going to give the boys a run for their bicycles.

And so far as the paper is concerned, it's going to cost a pretty figure in bikes before the contest is over—there's no doubt about that now.

SHE GETS FIRST FREE BIKE

Here is little Marjorie Hill, who yesterday received the first free bicycle in the Tribune's contest by bringing in the first thirty-five new subscriptions, and she surely is happy. But Marjorie was not the only one to win out. Eight others qualified for the free $60 Ranger bicycles.

Man May Be Down but He's Never Out, Harding Says

New York, April 30.—Commenting upon the Salvation Army slogan: "A man may be down but he is never out," President Harding, in a letter read at a massmeeting of the organization here today, wrote:

"It is my firm opinion that a man is never 'out' unless he himself confesses that he is. No organization has done more to prove this, or has proved it in more cases, than the Salvation Army."

THIS ISN'T THE LIFE, MRS. TATGE'S FARM SWAN SONG

Grid Star's Romance Wreck Told Court.

"I love the cows and chickens, but this is emphatically NOT the life!" remarked the youthful Mrs. Olive Crothers Tatge as her equally youthful husband, Luther Willis Tatge, University of Chicago quarter back, described the conversation yesterday to Judge Harry A. Lewis in the Superior court.

The occasion of Mrs. Tatge's observations concerning the denizens of the farm and existence within that sphere was her final parting from her husband, nine months after their marriage in April, 1917.

Just Out of High School.

The previous year the young couple had been graduated from the Parker High school. Tatge, whose father is Gustafus Tatge, a former county attorney, is now a junior at the university. He told Judge Lewis he wished a divorce.

His wife, it developed, resides with her father, Frank Crothers, an employé of Armour & Co., at 7123 Normal avenue. Young Tatge resides in a fraternity house at the university, where besides playing football, basketball and baseball claim a generous share of his attention.

No Country Life for Her.

"After our marriage," Tatge related, "we went to live on my father's farm near Melrose Park. But my wife quickly tired of it and left me."

The judge indicated he would grant the decree. Young Tatge's parents reside at 6630 Harvard avenue.

Senate at Cotton Mill Votes Against Pay Slash

Danville, Va., April 30.—The senate of the industrial democracy by which the Riverside and Dan river cotton mills, a $15,000,000 corporation, is governed, has voted nonconcurrence in the bill recently approved by the house accepting a cut of 22½ per cent in all wages.

REDS SENTENCE YANK TO PRISON FOR TWO YEARS

In Russia on Invitation of Bolshevists.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

RIGA, April 30.—[By Wireless.]—Frank Keeley, an American engineer, who was invited by M. Lenin to attempt the reorganization of Russian industry under the soviet régime, has been condemned to two years in prison for making reports unfavorable to bolshevism.

Mr. Keeley, who entered Russia in the fall of 1918, was quartered in a national hotel which was reserved for high officials. For six months he worked attempting to reorganize industry, but finally gave it up, saying it was impossible to do anything under Lenin's plans.

Yankee Talked Freely.

He talked freely with American correspondents on Russian industry, showing how production in the spring of 1920 was only 5 per cent of that before the war. He was credited with the creation of the scheme for employing labor armies as the only possible solution for the problem faced by the bolshevist régime.

Early in May, 1920, Mr. Keeley received permission from the foreign office to leave Russia. Following the usual method of procedure, when the foreign office wishes to get rid of someone without friends, Moscow ushered him out of the city with much publicity, but did not give him an extraordinary commission visé. This meant that the American would be arrested at Yamburg, which is the frontier control post.

Keeley Rushed to Prison.

This happened and the American has been in prison since then. All of his money, including $1,000 in American currency, was confiscated and his clothes were taken from him and exchanged for prison garb. Sentence was passed by the extraordinary commission.

Submarine O-10 Works Itself Free from Rocks

New London, Conn., April 30.—The United States submarine O-10, which went aground on Montauk Point early today, was floated shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon. It was extricated by a tug, assisted by its own power. It apparently was not damaged, and started for this port.

50 COAL MINES DESTROYED IN BRITISH STRIKE

Nation's Industries in Grave Peril.

LONDON, April 30.—Fifty coal mines already have been destroyed by flooding, it was officially announced here today. This indicates the extent to which the miners' strike is being carried.

Further evidence of the growing industrial paralysis is shown in these conditions:

Only thirteen steel furnaces are operating of a total of 500.

Train schedules have been reduced 50 per cent.

All express trains have been discontinued.

A curfew law is being planned for all lighting.

Daylight saving is to be extended another hour.

Dependent on Foreign Coal.

The country is expected soon to be dependent upon foreign coal. A cargo of German coal, shipped by way of Holland, was unloaded at Ipswich under police protection.

Misery and hunger are growing as the business depression increases. The capacity of charitable institutions is being taxed by the plight of the families of many workers thrown out of employment as a direct result of the strike.

Conferences Now Going On.

After the miners' final rejection of the government's offer of a $50,000,000 subsidy, officialdom become extremely pessimistic of the possibility of an early settlement.

The only ray of hope was in the belief that a majority of the miners' executives secretly favor acceptance of the subsidy despite the district delegates' rejection.

Representatives of both the owners and miners have left for the coal districts over the week end, and it was believed the union officials would seek first hand sentiment regarding the subsidy.

Assistant Census Director Stewart Appointed Director

Washington, D. C., April 30.—President Harding has decided to appoint William H. Stewart director of the census, it was learned today. Stewart now is assistant director

ASSEMBLY LAGS WITH IMPORTANT BILLS UNDECIDED

Statesmen Do Little in the Last Four Months.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., April 30.—[Special.]—The Illinois fifty-second general assembly has forty legislative days of life ahead of it and substantially nothing of the program that confronted it in January has reached concrete form.

The soldiers' bonus bill, two of the five emergency rent bills suggested by the Kessinger housing commission, the full suffrage for women bill and a series of deficiency appropriation bills are the only important measures to reach Gov. Small and become laws during the four months the legislature has been in session.

Administration spokesmen still insist that sine die adjournment is to come on May 14, two weeks hence, but nobody else figures such a thing possible. This will not happen unless the appropriation bills are shoved through with a rush and the legislature quits cold with its calendar clogged.

Status of Important Bills.

The status of the more featured legislation pending follows:

Appropriations—The charitable appropriation bill came from the house committee Thursday. The state officers bill is on the house calendar and the general omnibus bill is not yet reported. These are all house bills and no senate action has been taken.

Revenue—No bill has been reported from committee that establishes any of the new tax rates in Chicago or elsewhere. The house revenue committee is taking plenty of time for consideration, while rival interests fight in Chicago over what the rates ought to be.

Traction and Public Utilities—Hung up in the house utilities committee are the state administration's "Illinois commerce commission bill," and the "mayor's 5 cent fare bill."

Prohibition—The Anti-Saloon league's prohibition bill has been suddenly withdrawn and sent back to committee, where important changes are to be made. One of these, it is said, may be to cut out the attorney general as the law enforcement officer and subtract from his appropriation the $150,000 set by the drys as necessary.

Roads Bill Up to House.

Roads—The Meents bill, backed by the administration, which is a comprehensive road building and road patrol system act, passed the senate this week and goes to the house. The Holaday bill, allowing counties to make contracts with the state for construction, is now through both houses.

Waterways—The senate is ready to vote on the Barr bill reappropriating $20,000,000 for building the deep waterway, while substantially all of the sanitary district bills are awaiting action in the house waterways committee.

Board of Trade—In the senate next week a terrific fight will be staged between organized farmers and the Board of Trade over the two Lantz bills.

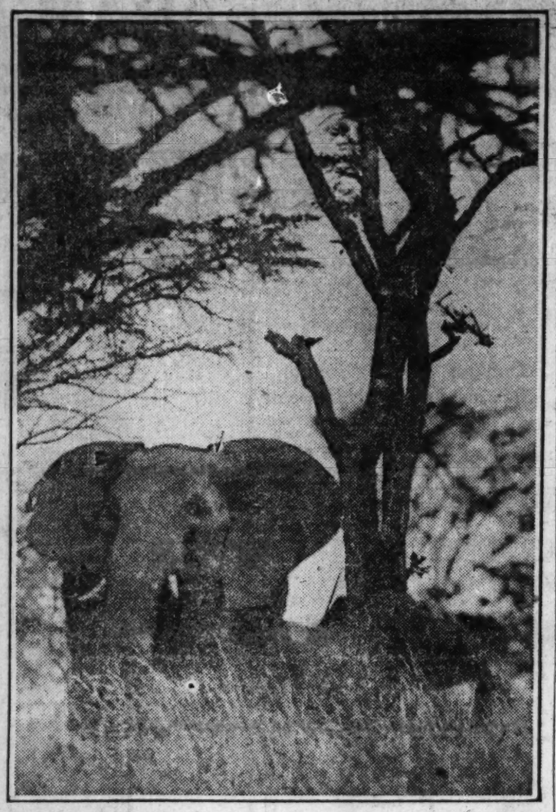
Tenants' Relief Bills.

Tenants—Two of the five Kessinger commission bills have been signed by the governor. Two others are pending in the house and the original Kessinger rent commission bill has not passed the senate.

University of Illinois—The university is making a valiant battle for a $10,000,000 appropriation, but has met a snag in the subcommittee of the appropriations committee. Unless Representative Tice changes his position there is danger these bills will fail. Senator Spence insists the common school fund shall be $20,000,000, and a deadlock over the two bills is imminent.

Caught in this jam are the bills reappropriating the unexpended balance for the constitutional convention, the anti-crime bills demanded by Chicago, the boxing and racing commission bills, the congressional reapportionment bill, and dozens of other minor measures.

OLD FRIEND OF ROOSEVELT



With the same ferocious demeano. with which he charged on "Teddy" Roosevelt and his fellow huntsman, Carl Akeley, "William," the jumbo elephant, is shown in the Field museum. William, a masterpiece of taxidermy, may be seen beginning next Tuesday, while Mr. Akeley will lecture on his dark African game experiences in Orchestra hall Wednesday night.

These Two Win Bachelor Degrees—and Then Marry

Charles H. Groves and Miss Norma Ann Price studied psychology and logic together at the University of Illinois in order to obtain their bachelor's degree and then they seized upon the psychological moment and were married yesterday in St. Chrysostom's church, 1424 North Dearborn street. The Rev. Gardner MacWhorter, former assistant minister at St. Chrysostom's, performed the ceremony, and the bride was given away by still another member of the bridegroom's fraternity, Norman Hackett, the actor playing in "The Tavern." Mr. and Mrs. Groves will make their home in Chicago after a short bridal trip.

20 HOUSES QUIT COMMISSION ROW FOR FULTON SITE

South Water street, said to be the busiest produce distributing center of the world, is breaking up. The largest move in this direction came yesterday, when almost twenty of the butter, egg, and poultry houses of South Water street moved to a new location known as the Fulton market. It is located in the territory bounded by Randolph, Fulton and Halsted streets, and Ashland avenue. Almost all the land in that area has been bought by commission merchants.

John B. Mitchell, part owner in the produce firm of J. H. White & Co., is a leader in the movement. His firm, said to be the second oldest of the South Water street firms, has built a store in the new colony. Mr. Mitchell said of the new location:

"The advantages are numerous. We have large streets, space to expand and railroad facilities. The location is central to all parts of the city. It will enable us to trade directly with the retail merchants again instead of only with jobbers, thus helping to reduce prices."

FATHER AND SON FIGHT OVER DEAD WOMAN'S ESTATE

Phelps Family in Suit to Settle Paris Fortune.

New York, April 30.—[Special.]—A dispute between Livingston Phelps, wealthy clubman, and his father, Harris Phelps, is revealed in a suit in the Supreme court. The litigation is over property left by the mother, Mrs. Eleanor Pell Phelps, who died in 1913.

Harris Phelps is suing his son and son's wife, Mrs. May de Berteaux Phelps, daughter of Count Jean de Berteaux, French sportsman, whose father was long one of the principal figures on the French turf and an intimate friend of King Edward of England. The younger Phelps was married in 1915.

Father Lived in Paris.

Harris Phelps has made his home in Paris for years. He was sued for divorce in 1910. His wife had inherited a fortune from her father, John Augustus Pell. She alleged that the husband had lived on her income; that he had become a French citizen, had abjured the English tongue, and had made their son French against his will.

Through the intervention of the son, Livingston, the case was settled before it went to trial. An agreement was signed by which Mr. and Mrs. Phelps adjusted their grievances in 1912. Her will was filed in May, 1913, and left her entire estate to the son, whom her husband had been accused of kidnaping in 1887. The income was estimated at $50,000. The will had been made a few months before Mrs. Phelps sued her husband, but it was not contested.

Son Failed in Duty, Charge.

Mr. Phelps alleges in his suit here against his son that he had not complied with the agreement by which the differences between the husband and wife had been settled.

The answer of the son was filed today and alleges that his father is entitled to a life interest in the mansion of 7 Rue de Presbourg, Paris, which his mother bought with her own money, but he says his father refuses to carry out the agreement.

The son says he is willing to give his father his half life interest in the property if the agreement is carried out by the delivery of the father's half interest in the property, at death, making the son then the sole owner.

Young Phelps in Europe.

Livingston Phelps is abroad with his wife. He left the diplomatic service when the bolshevist representative at Stockholm refused to visé his passport that he might return to his post at Petrograd in 1918. GATELY'S

The House of Character

1871 — 1921

Golden Anniversary

50 YEARS. 1871-1921

A CLEAR and true narrative, when written, will prove these 50 years to be the greatest chapter in the history of the American people, if not the most momentous in the life of mankind.

Fifty years ago this country had just emerged from its terrible civil strife. Since then it has fought two victorious foreign wars, developed vast internal territory, built cities and railroads, added island empires, and, in short, become the world's leading nation.

Throughout these 50 years Gately's has kept step with progress, consistently serving America's manhood and womanhood. It has expanded from one shop to 106 stores, reaching from Atlantic to Pacific. It has earned the public good will and become known as "The House of Character."

Gately's recognizes that the enduring good will can only be maintained by good, intelligent service to the public, and that this good will may be preserved and strengthened we are pledged to a continuation of offering to our patrons only the highest quality clothing at the fairest prices that such merchandise can be sold at.

SOBBING MOTHER IDENTIFIES BOY SLAIN IN HOLDUP

Policeman's Shot Brings Down Fleeing Youth.

Probationary Policeman John A. Lachel, on the force only three months, yesterday shot and killed a 19 year old holdup man at North Wood and Keenon streets.

At the county morgue a sobbing gray haired couple identified the boy as their son, George Schroeder, 1442 West North avenue.

The mother broke down.

"I hope he has in a measure atoned," she said. For years I have been afraid his waywardness would lead to this. He would never obey me nor his father. He would stay out late at night, and that led to one sort of trouble after another. They sent him to the parental schol three times and to St. Charles twice, but it did no good."

Story of Robbery.

Lachel heard a woman call from a second floor above a delicatessen store.

"Robbers! Police!" the woman screamed in Polish. The policeman understood. He ran toward the store. As he approached the robber rushed from the front door. Seeing the officer, the man turned east in Keenon street, then south into the first alley.

"Stop!" shouted Lachel.

The robber slipped and fell, but quickly recovered and darted on.

Lachel shot once in the air and again commanded the fleeing man to halt. Schroeder did not stop. Lachel then shot him in the head.

Money From Another Holdup.

In the man's clothing were found $28 he had taken from the delicatessen store and several rolls of change wrapped in paper. Valentine Ozniak, owner of the store, said this money was not taken from his place. The police believe Schroeder had committed another robbery.

How Highwayman Met Death

[TRIBUNE Photos.]

The photo-diagram tells the story of the killing of George Schroeder by Probationary Policeman John A. Lachel. Lachel, attracted by a woman's cries, ran up just as Schroeder was leaving a delicatessen store at North Wood and Keenon streets which he had robbed. He shouted to him to halt, but the man disobeyed him and darted into an alley. Lachel fired once in the air, then at the robber's head, hitting him. Schroeder died at the county hospital.

MAHONEY MURDER MAY BE LINKED TO 19TH WARD FEUD

Police were searching for a dozen men yesterday in connection with the killing Friday night of John L. Mahoney, 3625 South Wells street, whose body was found in an alley near Peoria street and Eighteenth place.

Whether Mahoney's death is the aftermath of recent political killings in the Nineteenth ward, or whether he was shot by men he had implicated in a recent $40,000 alcohol robbery, is puzzling the police.

Mahoney was a brother-in-law of Tony Valpi, secretary of "Diamond Joe" Esposito, and known as a political aid to "Diamond Joe." Esposito, Republican committeeman in the Nineteenth, was closely allied in bipartisan arrangements with Anthony D'Andrea, whose political cohorts were openly accused by the police in the slayings of Paul Labriola and Harry Ramondi, political aids of Ald. John Powers. This led the police to suspect political angles in the Mahoney shooting.

YOUTHS BLAMED FOR CITY'S CRIME BY GRAND JURY

The extreme youth of Chicago's gunmen and automobile thieves was made the subject of special mention by Edgar A. Jonas, assistant state's attorney assigned to the April grand jury, when the final report of that body was submitted to Chief Justice Charles A. McDonald yesterday.

"Evidence discloses," declared Mr. Jonas, "that the average ages of the stickup men is from 17 to 20 years. This talk about the gunmen being recruited from the ranks of former soldiers is all rot. They come from the youth of the city. The question of what is to be done to remedy this situation is one of the most pressing before this office."

In its report the grand jury said: "We consider that the penalty for automobile stealing should be far more severe. Heavier penalties would lessen such thefts and decrease other crimes based on plans calling for gang courage and speedy flight."

The report also says:

"We urge necessary reforms in the probation, parole, and pardon laws, with a view to their modification or repeal. At present too many criminals secure clemency under these laws, and too often hardened criminals and second offenders are released to prey upon society."

THEATER DROPS SUIT TO ENJOIN MUSICIANS' UNION

Petition for an injunction restraining the Chicago Federation of Musicians from violent acts against the Castle theater, 6 South State street, was dismissed on motion of the complainant before Judge Denis E. Sullivan of the Superior court yesterday. Throwing of stench bombs and other overt acts because the theater management would not unionize their two woman organists were charged against the union.

The petition was filed last Saturday. In the evening of the same day the projector operators walked out until the musicians joined the federation. This settled the dispute and the dismissal of the suit resulted.

TERROR UNKNOWN ON LAND FOUND IN SEA FIGHTS

Thousand Deaths in One Shell Blast.

Lieut. Young explained yesterday that the German raids were necessary to keep up the morale of the men and that these men on the enemy ships were as eager to put to sea as the British. He blames the lack of a general engagement between the German and British fleets during the war on the orders of the high German command, not on the seamen.

BY LIEUT. FILSON YOUNG.

[Copyright: 1921: In U. S. by The Chicago Tribune.]

The modern naval battle is different from everything else in the world in this, that nowhere else do men, banded together in such numbers and wielding such powers, contend with one another at so extreme a peril to themselves. It is more ringed with terror than any other human experience. Each man commits himself with a thousand others to a vulnerable shell, and launches it into an arena sheeted and bolted with flame and concussion. He can do nothing for his own safety, but only for the common purpose.

In addition to the ordinary risk of destruction to the human unit, there is the almost equal risk of destruction to the naval unit; and a single stroke of a single weapon might wipe out a thousand lives. This is warfare at the point to which Christian civilization has so far exceeded in bringing it; and no Pagan ingenuity has invented anything more hellish than this—that man's floating home and citadel can in a second be turned into a weapon to destroy him by the thousand.

Risks Sailors Take.

For if his floating tabernacle be dissolved it is not to a hospital or dressing station that he passes, but into the cold sea; hospitals, patients, and surgeons in the very act of operating are tumbled into it too; the fight sweeps on; in ten minutes it is three miles away, and there are no stretcher bearers in the sea. He may die by a blow, by asphyxiation, by drowning, by boiling, by mutilation, by flaying, by boiling, by mutilation, by drowning, or may be instantaneously consumed in a glory of mauve flame, accompanied by the thunder of a detonation which he never hears.

With all these varieties of death in visible and audible demonstration around him, and instantly menacing himself, he has to continue quietly and coolly doing the exact work for which he has been trained—work, perhaps, with delicate and scientific instruments such as other men handle in the calm of a laboratory or observatory. And often he has to continue this work in what he knows is the last minute or two of earthly existence left to him, and to do it as carefully as if his career in the navy depended on it.

Seamen as Heroes.

It is the supreme glory of the naval training that thousands and thousands of men are always ready to do this as a matter of course; do it easily, desire to do it. There is no one to whom life is sweeter than to the average sailor, whose mental habit it is always to be looking forward to pleasure; and there is no one who can so utterly put aside the preoccupation of safety and lose himself in his immediate duty.

How else, indeed, would such events as the battle cruiser fight at Jutland, or the attack of our destroyers after it, be possible? If men thought of themselves in such a situation, their demoralization would be indescribable, and the names of Queen Mary, Invincible, and Indefatigable would be names of terror. Instead of which it is the high morale which is indescribable, and these names are names of glory.

One has some right to say this who for the whole of a gray January morning knelt in the Lion's top while the storm of that concentrated bombardment gradually enveloped it, and had nothing else to do but consider it and give myself to its sensational embrace.

Mind Numb to Terror.

I remember that the increasing uproar and concussion came gradually to have a stupefying rather than an exciting effect; the mind became numb to mere terror, while it remained actively interested in what was going on.

Many mere details are registered on my mind and memory: the smell and taste of cordite smoke, as the wind drove it back upon us from the mouths of our guns; the great sounds about us, which I must admit to be among the noblest sounds I have ever heard, so enormous were they, so deep and trembling. No sharp or musically distressing note had place in that orchestra; it was as if the whole heaven were rolling up in a scroll of thunder.

I remember also the silences; lulls that came in the very heat of the battle, when sometimes for five or ten seconds there would be no sound but the soft brushing of the wind and its harp like harmonies in the rigging, until a salvo from our guns would split the heavens again and, like its echo, the hollow growl of the enemy's guns would fill the gap between it and the next.

BEG YOUR PARDON

THE TRIBUNE of April 16, in connection with a story concerning the work of the American committee for relief in Ireland, said the campaign was approved by various pastors, including the Rev. J. H. I. McCoy, pastor of Rayfield Baptist church, who said the Baptist Ministers' association would consider a resolution of indorsement at its meeting the following Monday. This information was given by the American committee for relief in Ireland. The Revs. G. R. Stair and J.W. Hoyt of the Baptist Ministers' conference wish it understood that their association has made no such indorsement, that the Rev. J. H. I. McCoy is not a member of the association, and that he did not offer the resolution.

The caption under the picture of Miss Flora Mae Hackett, $1,000 prize beauty of Indiana, in the rotogravure section of today's TRIBUNE, gives her home as Monon, Monon county, Ind. The correct address is Monon, White county, Ind.

An item in THE TRIBUNE of April 29 concerning a suit brought by Sigmund Krausz against publishers of "Eaton's History of the World War," said a magazine called the Hornet, owned and edited by Krausz, ceased publication in 1917. It ceased publication in 1915 with the absorption of its subscription list by The Fatherland. Krausz and his counsel also explain that the defendants accuse Krausz of treasonable utterances, not pro-Germanism.

U. S. RAID NETS 122 TAXICABS AT WHITE SOX PARK

Failure to Pay Occupation Tax Is Charged.

While a large part of the crowd of 20,000 fans at the White Sox park yesterday milled around, federal authorities arrested 122 owners of private taxicabs on a charge of failing to pay the federal occupational tax.

The raid was made by more than a score of revenue agents. The White Sox park was picked as the scene, it was announced, because the great majority of private taxicabs congregate there waiting for fares when the games are over.

Called to Revenue Office.

Of the cab owners arrested the greater part were members of the De Luxe Cab company, the Checker Cab company, and the Diamond Cab company.

Federal authorities announced that a complete check of the Checker company's machines would be made Monday. A checkup of the Yellow Cab company's cars was recently completed, it was said, and the tax collected.

All those arrested were notified to appear at 6240 Kimbark avenue, a branch revenue office, at 11 o'clock Monday morning for hearing.

Tax Is $10 a Year.

The federal tax of $10 per year on all livery cars carrying less than seven passengers was authorized by the passage of the federal occupational tax law which became effective Jan. 1, 1918.

Heretofore the federal authorities have not taken drastic steps in collection of the tax. The recent great increase in the number of "independent" cabs now operating in Chicago makes drastic measures necessary, the revenue agents declare, because the average "independent" owner hasn't paid.

The greater part of the cab owners arrested yesterday were not disturbed in their work. They were served with summons, constituting technical arrest.

U.S.-INDO-CHINA RADIO STARTS TO WORKING TODAY

Washington, D. C., April 30.—[Special.]—Acting Secretary of the Navy Admiral Coontz announced today that beginning tomorrow, May 1, commercial communication via navy radio between the United States and Indo-China by way of the Hawaiian islands and the Philippines will be inaugurated.

Plans have been completed whereby commercial messages will be sent from San Francisco by naval radio to Hanoi or Saigon at 96 cents a word, with additional charge of 5 cents a word for messages for interior points in French Indo-China.

Chicago, according to statistics compiled by the Student Fellowship, is the academic center of this hemisphere.

Just listen to a few of these figures:

More than 75,000 women students annually attend our professional and academic schools, exclusive of the women in attendence at the universities.

Between 175 and 200 academic schools in this city admit women to courses including every profession.

Between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 pour into Chicago's coffers annually in the form of tuition fees from these women students.

In one square mile on the north side one thousand students live in single rooms.

What is Chicago doing for this huge solitary student population?

Pauline's Three Complaints.

Pauline B——, a pretty young art student, has three complaints to make which she insists are not peculiar to her alone, but are general:

When your city sells to us it charges two prices. We can ill afford to pay the higher prices asked.

When your city gives us work it treats us like slaves. That is true in some stores, in the kitchen, in the hotel, in many of the occupations upon which the isolated woman student depends for her living, while here in pursuit of her education.

When your city feels like being nice to us it "welfares" us and patronizes us.

"I'm an art student," says Pauline, "but the harshness of your city is getting on my nerves and I'm becoming a cynic in spite of my art and my love for it."

A Girl Student's Problem.

A recent canvass among one branch of students reveals that more than one ambitious student, anxious to keep up appearances at her classes, was trying to dress nicely on a pitifully meager sum, spending an average of fifteen cents a day for food, and doing a man's work at that!

How would you care for Chicago's student population? About five years ago the Student Fellowship was organized under the direction of Miss Helen Pearson. The Fellowship will hold a massmeeting and reception this evening at the Art institute. Jeanette Rankin and Jane Addams will speak. Every woman who ever has been a student is invited.

Body of Suicide Found Hanging in Forest Preserve

An unidenitfied man, about 45, was found hanging to a tree in the forest preserve at 5735 Rogers avenue, yesterday. The body was taken to undertaking rooms at 4875 Milwaukee avenue. All marks of identification had been carefully removed from the clothing.

NOTED SALOON FIXTURES FORM AN ARMY 'SALON'

Upon the benign brow of Gene Malloy, quondam saloonkeeper, yesterday, a great sadness lay. He looked frequently with doleful air about him, viewing his menage at 57 East Adams street with a suspiciously moist eye; and ever and anon he gave vent to a sigh. There was to be a parting, a bereavement. It sat heavily upon him.

"You see," he explained, "I've been in the business right here in the loop going on thirty-one years now, and it makes me feel bad to part with them."

Go to Guard Armory.

He referred to his fixtures—bar, bottles, glasses, tables, booths, lights—everything, which have been sold to the First regiment, Illinois National guard, in whose armory at 16th street and Michigan boulevard, they will transform a basement quarters into a handsome salon. The fixtures cost $30,000, he said.

"Yes," continued Gene, "I've been in this place for eight years. My rent was $7,500 a year and there was a cancellation clause in the lease. Well, here a few days ago, along comes a Greek restaurant man and offers them $16,000 a year, and so I'm out. They offered to let me have it for $15,000, but I couldn't afford to take it.

Grand Old Game Is Over.

"Ah, well, it's been a great ol' game. You're a bit young, so I guess you don't remember Gene Malloy's old place on Clark street, right there where Righeimer's now is, across from the city hall. That was a place, I tell you, Gene Malloy's of the old days. All the politicians used to congregate there and hold their powwows and talk things over and lay their plans. Say, mayors of Chicago and governors of Illinois have been made in there—in Gene Malloy's old place. Yes, sir, many's the time——"

He was interrupted by a deep, melodious bass.

"Gone are the days——" it sang.

"Hell, yes!" concluded Gene. "Gone are the days, is right. Here, have a cigar."

A New Gift, Madam
Presented to Jiffy-Jell users

Here is the latest idea in dessert molds—your initial on each dessert. This set of six, where sold, is quoted at 75 cents today.

We will send you the six, each with your initial embossed, if you will send us six (J) trade-marks cut from the fronts of six Jiffy-Jell packages. The Jiffy-Jell will cost you only 75 cents and the molds are free.

This offer is made to induce a trial of Jiffy-Jell. It now costs no more than old-style deserts of this kind, with flavors in dry form.

Jiffy-Jell has real-fruit flavors sealed in glass—a bottle in each package. We crush the fruit, condense the juice and seal it in a vial. So it comes to you as rich and fragrant as fresh fruit.

The flavors are abundant. For each we use a great deal of ripe fruit. So here you get a real-fruit dainty, rich in fruit. A super-grade dessert without any extra cost.

Learn what it means to you. Jiffy-Jell has won millions by its deliciousness. It far excels any old-style gelatine dessert.

Note also the gifts offered below. You are welcome to all or any if you use Jiffy-Jell. Cut out this offer so you won't forget, as it will not appear again.

Jiffy Measuring Cup
An aluminum half-pint measuring cup. Fill twice with water to dissolve one package Jiffy-Jell. Use as standard cup in all recipes. Send two (J) trade-marks for it.

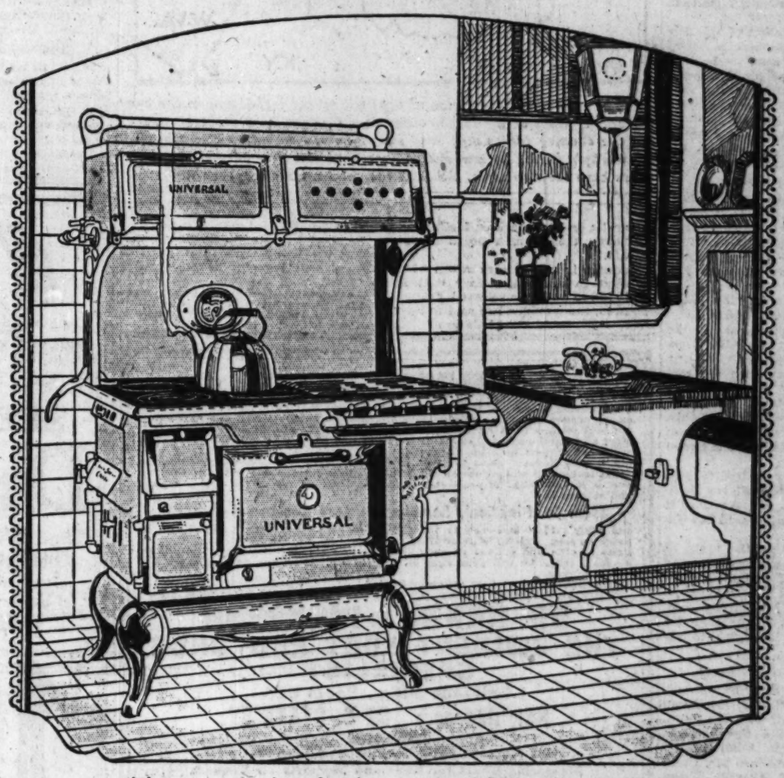
Offer You an Unusual Opportunity to Modernize Your Kitchen

A Special Sale and Demonstration of the Famous

UNIVERSAL COMBINATION RANGE

MADE IN CHICAGO



IT will pay you to visit our up-to-date furniture store at Milwaukee Avenue and Division Street, this week, where a special sale and demonstration of the UNIVERSAL Combination Range will be in progress—practically every obstacle to ownership of one of these beautiful blue or gray porcelain ranges has been removed. This is the time to discard your old, unsightly, inefficient stove and modernize the business of cooking. Come and see how the Universal gives you the advantage of three ranges in one—gas, coal and wood. See what a pleasure it is to use one and why its lustrous porcelain is as clean and sanitary as a china dish.

These Special Inducements Made for One Week Only

FREE! During this exhibit and sale we will include without charge the beautiful white porcelain top kitchen table shown below with every Universal Range purchased—an offer well worth consideration. FREE!

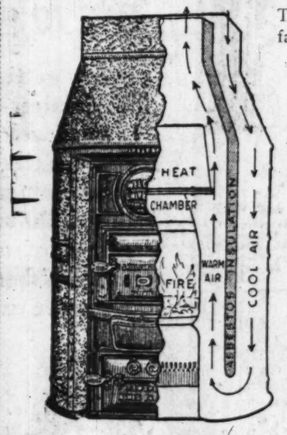
Unusually Liberal Terms

The matter of cash need not prevent you from taking advantage of our special offers. We will gladly arrange for payments convenient to you—subject only to the rules of good business. So do not let the matter of finances prevent you from attending this baking demonstration and sale of Universal Combination Ranges.

A 140 Page Cook Book Free to All Women Who Attend

Every woman who comes to see the Universal Range this week will receive as a souvenir a valuable 140 page fully illustrated Cook Book—a comprehensive compendium of thousands of approved recipes, together with a full explanation of the new Cold Pack Canning Processes. Surely you will want to attend if for nothing more than this splendid gift.

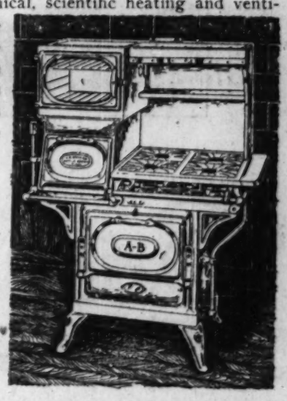
The UNIVERSAL Pipeless Furnace Included in This Sale



This is an opportune time for prospective purchasers of heating plants for the home to familiarize themselves with the last word in economical, scientific heating and ventilating systems—the Universal Asbestos Lined Pipeless Furnace. No wall registers or pipes are required—heats any home, old or new, through one register. Proper circulation of hot and cold air is the secret of its success. The special inducements mentioned above will apply on this Advanced-Type Pipeless Furnace.

A Fine Set of Aluminum Ware Free with Every Gas Range

Those who are in need of a new straight gas range will also find this an advantageous time to make their selection. A six-piece set of high-grade Aluminum Cooking Utensils will be included free with every gas range purchased during this sale. But remember—



These Offers Will Positively Be Withdrawn Next Saturday

We positively cannot extend these liberal offers beyond that time. So plan to attend early in the week.

'MARK OF DEATH' CLEW TO SLAYING OF EX-SOLDIER

Spanish Revenge Sign on Freed Killer.

With the Spanish gratia de Dios—the mark of the "grace of God"—upon it, the bullet riddled body of Robert L. McCurry, former private in the 108th army supply train, lies in Burns' undertaking rooms at 239 East State street, Hammond, the center of a murder mystery.

McCurry's body was found lying face downward in the road between Highland, Ind., and Hammond on Friday by a passing automobilist. The body bore thirteen bullet wounds, including the Spanish death mark—a bullet through the head diagonally from each temple.

It was the identification of this McCurry as the same Robert McCurry who was tried and sent to Leavenworth penitentiary for murder, while a soldier with the supply train, that shed a significant light upon his death and sent speculation by the authorities back to the killing of J. C. Sneed, a gambler, in Houston, Tex., on the night of Nov. 28, 1917.

Clinnin Tells Story.

The story of Sneed's death is best told by Col. John V. Clinnin, who defended McCurry before the court martial at that time, and who identified McCurry's body in the Hammond undertaking rooms at midnight Friday.

"Yes," said Col. Clinnin, "this is the McCurry I defended in Houston.

"McCurry was implicated in the murder of Sneed with two pals, Granville Shaw and Clarence Broberg. Shaw appears to have been the real plotter, and McCurry, always spoiling for a fight, was his dupe.

"Shaw, after a three day courtship, had married a girl of the name of Hessie Ennis. She had been the sweetheart of Sneed.

"Shaw and Broberg plotted to beat Sneed and to persuade McCurry to do the beating for them. So they fixed it up with the girl to lead Sneed down a dark street.

"The girl did this on the night of Nov. 25, 1917. Shaw, Broberg, and McCurry followed. Sneed must have noticed he was being followed, for he drew a knife and carried it in his hand. When Shaw thought it was time for the attack he told McCurry to approach Sneed.

Fight Ends in Sneed's Death.

"They clinched, and Sneed cut McCurry twice on the forehead, through his army hat, with the knife. McCurry fought like a tiger. After a bit Sneed got his knife behind McCurry's back and slashed him twice more. Finally Sneed lay still on the ground."

It was Col. Clinnin who discovered the gratia de Dios mark on McCurry.

"That's the Spanish death mark," he said.

McCurry is said to have sworn when he went to the penitentiary that he would kill Shaw when released. Friends of Sneed, the gambler, are said to have sworn they would kill McCurry.

DAYLIGHT SAVING IN MIDDLE WEST

The map shows the status of daylight saving legislation in the central west. Most of the larger cities near Chicago have daylight saving, but the country places still keep sun time. In the east, Massachusetts has daylight saving by law, and in New York and New Jersey most large cities have the new style, although the rural interests oppose it.

BOW OVER 5C COSTS HIM $25.

Chris Vellos, owner of the Jitney restaurant at 662 West Madison street, was fined $25 and costs yesterday by Judge Joseph W. Schulman in Des Plaines street court. Rudolph Peterson, 657 West Madison street, charged Vellos cut him in the throat with a knife when Peterson was 5 cents short in his lunch bill.

REMOVAL NOTICE

Dr. Pinkston's Corn and Callous Remover will stop that awful pain in hard corns on top of toes, soft corns between toes, callouses on bottom of feet and on bunions and will remove them by the roots without pain. No chance for infection. Most all painful corns and callouses have pus cavities in them, and my preparation will remove them both by the roots.
My Bunion Reducer stops the pain at once, removes the soreness, swelling and inflammation. It will reduce an old bunion ½ to ¾ its size and will cure a bunion that is just starting. It penetrates to the bone and softens up the chalky deposit and absorbs it.

VANCE DEMANDS FULL SIFTING OF NICOTINE DEATH

Double Inquiry Into "Love Bungalow" Tragedy On.

Dr. William W. Vance, Chicago and Glencoe dentist, whose daughter, Miss Marie Vance, perished mysteriously after a sojourn in her Los Angeles "love bungalow," asked Coroner Hoffman yesterday to sift the evidence of nicotine poisoning to determine if it would justify the arrest of Robert S. Lockhart of Covington, Va. Analysis by Coroner Hoffman's staff had revealed two grains of nicotine in the girl's vital organs.

Lockhart was Miss Vance's wealthy fiancé, who installed her in the love cottage, according to the girl's relatives, notwithstanding he had a wife and family living in Virginia.

Opposes Suicide Theory.

Dr. B. E. Ryder, who attended Miss Vance in Los Angeles, said he did not believe his patient "swallowed poison with suicidal intent." His certificate ascribed death to diphtheria. He said he did not believe that Miss Vance died of "essence of nicotine."

He again asserted the young woman's death had been influenced by self-administered treatment," and an operation which he said he had performed upon her with the sanction of Los Angeles health authorities.

Asks Condition of Body.

J. M. O'Connell, Los Angeles agent for the California state board of medicine, said the board would ask Chicago authorities for a report on the condition of the body "with a view to ascertaining whether the operation was justified."

Newspaper reports of the finding of pills and powders and a prescription for a "rare drug" alleged once to have been in Miss Vance's possession could not be officially verified by Los Angeles investigators, dispatches said.

CITY HALL SKIT, "NEIGHBORS, BUT STRANGERS," ENDS

Thomas Joyce, assistant chief operator of the police department, and John F. Devine, clerk of the Probate court, sighed with relief yesterday. After twelve years Mr. Joyce and Mr. Devine had found each other.

In 1909 Mr. Joyce was appointed administrator of the estate of Detective Sergeant James Hanton. He waited and waited for a notice from the Probate court. He had been working for thirty years in the city hall, the same building that houses Mr. Devine. For twelve years Mr. Devine tried to find Mr. Joyce.

Then Mr. Devine learned Mr. Joyce was under the same roof with him. The notice was served, the estate was wound up yesterday to the satisfaction of Judge Horner, and Mr. Joyce was relieved of his duties as administrator.

At Rector's, years ago, we served a delicious asparagus salad which was one of the features making it a famous eating place. At the North American we now serve that same high quality asparagus salad for 35 cents. At other good restaurants and hotels it will cost you 75 cents.

Our Big Portions and Low Prices Astound the Hotels and Restaurants Who Said "It Can't Be Done"

Whole Baby Lobster Hot or Cold, 65 Cents

No matter where you dine, nor what you pay, you can't get a tenderer, sweeter, fresher baby lobster than the one we serve, with Chili sauce or melted butter for 65 cents.

Almost every day some restaurant or hotel man comes into the North American to dine and ask us how it is possible to give such big food portions at such low prices. They know our food can't be beaten: They see for themselves the size of the portions: And they know our prices are all far below what they charge.

As an example: A delicious Strawberry Shortcake made from luscious ripe strawberries, and plenty of them, flaky pastry that really melts in your mouth, and plenty of rich whipped cream, costs 35 cents: The portion is ample for two: An individual portion of Pork Tenderloin costs 35 cents: A breast of Chicken, with bacon, 65 cents: A generous portion of Combination Salad made from fresh vegetables, with Thousand Island dressing 30 cents: A whole Baby Lobster, hot or cold, with Chili Sauce or melted butter, 65 cents.

Whatever You Do—Eat Breakfast Here

If you have eaten breakfast here we don't need to tell you how good our breakfasts are, nor how small the cost—you know. But if you have not had breakfast here recently then you can't possibly know how good our food will taste. We do everything we possibly can to make our food taste better. For instance: We cook all of our eggs in fresh, pure creamery butter; we use the finest bacon and ham and the freshest eggs; we buy grapefruit just a little bit bigger than other good places serve. And these are only a few of the things we do. Just compare our prices with what others charge.

Fluffy Honey Waffles, with 3 strips of bacon, butter, pure maple sap or honey	25c
3 fresh eggs, any style	25c
2 fried eggs, 4 strips of bacon	30c
Calves liver and bacon	35c
Half big grapefruit	15c
Fresh toast and butter	5c

Considering all these things—food which really tastes better, big portions, and the prices so far below what others charge—is it any wonder that the North American is the most popular dining place in Chicago today?

If you haven't dined here, why don't you try it?

'SOS' CALL SENT OUT IN FIGHT ON BOOST OF TAXES

Business Men Will Move on Springfield Tuesday.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

"The burden of more taxes inevitably must fall on every man, woman and child in the state. This burden will retard business cause unemployment, increase living costs, and make rents higher—and this at a time when business is having considerable difficulty in keeping its head above water."

This is from George R. Meyercord, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, which has planned a taxpayers' demonstration at the armory in Springfield next Tuesday afternoon. Secretary John M. Glenn said that representatives are expected from the Chicago Association of Commerce, Illinois Chamber of Commerce, Chicago jewelers' association, Civic federation, Chicago Real Estate board, the Illinois Bankers' association, the Illinois Implement and Vehicle association, and from each of the nineteen commercial associations composing the Industrial council, which are located in such centers as Moline, East St. Louis, Aurora, Belleville, Granite City, Bloomington, Chicago Heights, Decatur, Waukegan, Rockford, Galesburg, Rock Island, Streator, Peoria, Sterling, Kankakee, Quincy, La Salle, and Elgin.

144 Bills Relate to Taxes.

"We believe there are enough thoughtful members of the legislature who themselves realize that certain elements are utterly unreasonable in their insatiable demand for money," went on Mr. Meyercord. "There are 144 bills pending in the state legislature relating to increased taxation appropriations, increased rates or removing tax limitations that now exist. That was my last count; there may be more now.

"It has been estimated that if all of these bills are enacted into laws, taxpayers of the state would have to pay the enormous figure of $9.75 on each $100 valuation, or almost 10 per cent for taxes on the valuation. George C. Gale, chairman of the revenue committee of the constitutional convention, estimates that the taxes of this year—unless the ruinous policy inaugurated in the bills is checked—will be over $200,000,000 for all purposes in the state, and that by 1922 they will reach $350,000,000. The public can't stand such burdens."

S. O. S. Message Sent Out.

Notice sent yesterday to members of the association, headed "S. O. S." in red type, says:

"Your presence in Springfield May 3 is just as important to you as is your presence in your office or factory. The Chicago taxpayer is lagging on the job. Remember—once an increase is granted it is seldom, if ever, removed. Now is the time to act.

"It is the fight of your life, Mr. Taxpayer. Nothing can avert the calamity except a solid front."

Small Invited to Attend.

It is announced that Gov. Small and other officers of the state administration and members of the general assembly have been invited to attend the meeting. Among those who have promised to speak are President Meyercord; a representative of the Association of Commerce, to be announced later; H. A. Jansen, secretary of the Tri-City Manufacturing company of Moline; T. E. O'Brien, president of the Leader Iron works of Decatur; Mr. Gale; Burton F. Peek, vice president of Deere & Co.; Samuel M. Hastings, mayor of Highland Park; Douglas Sutherland, secretary of the Civic federation; Speaker Dahlberg of the house, former Speaker Shanahan, Senator Turnbaugh, and Senator Funk.

If the governor appears to listen to the protests of the taxpayers, he will be given an opportunity to tell his attitude on higher taxes.

The South Austin Improvement club last night appointed a committee to go to Springfield tomorrow night to oppose the passage by the senate of the school land bill. At the same time Chicago aldermen and representatives of the City club and other organizations will go to the capital to protest against the bill which, if passed, would give school boards sole authority to sell school lands.

HUG AND KISS COST $25 FINE.

On complaint of Mrs. Mildred Carlson, 19 years old, 1300 West Madison street, that he had hugged and kissed her against her will, Nicholas Grecko, 857 West Monroe street, was fined $25 yesterday by Judge Joseph W. Schulman.

Leader in Plans for Theater Party at Which Wounded Soldiers Will Be Guests.

MRS. EDWIN F. HOLTZMAN.
(Photo by Waters.)

Next Tuesday evening (May 3) the alumnæ of St. Xavier academy will give a theater party at Powers' theater to see "Call the Doctor." Among those giving box parties are Dr. and Mrs John F. Golden, Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Fortune, Mr. and Mrs. William Stenson and Mr. and Mrs. William Juergens. Seats may be procured at the box office and the proceeds are toward the fund for a new college. Three hundred wounded soldiers will be guests on that evening, and any one willing to stop at Drexel hospital and take one of the boys down in his car is asked to call Midway 936. The academy is sending its busses, but many will have to ride down in the street cars unless friends are thoughtful.

Mrs. Edwin F. Holtzman and Mrs. E. E. Hartrich are active in work for the success of the affair. There is a large list of well known women as patronesses.

RICHERT REFUSES TO BOOST CITY'S TAX RAISE BILL

A special request from the city administration that he go to Springfield next Tuesday to support the plea that the city's revenue be increased was declined yesterday by Ald. John A. Richert, chairman of the council finance committee.

Ald. Richert, when the matter was before the council, voted against the plea on the ground it would mean a tax boost. He declared taxes should not be increased.

The invitation to appear before the revenue committee of the house of representatives was sent by Second Assistant Corporation Counsel Hornstein, the city's Springfield lobbyist.

"I voted against the resolution in the council, and I will not go to Springfield to support it unless ordered to do so by the council," Ald. Richert said. "I could not take it upon myself to go to the legislature in support of something that I have opposed."

ONLY WOMAN TO LEAP NIAGARA IN BARREL IS DEAD

Lockport, N. Y., April 30.—[Special.]—Anna Edison Taylor, the only woman who ever navigated Niagara falls in a barrel and lived, died in the Niagara county infirmary today. She made the trip over the falls on Oct. 24, 1901.

Mrs. Taylor was towed out from La Salle, two miles above the falls, into the Canadian channel, so that her barrel would pass over the Horseshoe falls, where the water was deepest.

Her barrel passed safely through the upper rapids, made the plunge near the middle of the horseshoe, and reappeared in the spume below the falls within half an hour. Mrs. Taylor was severely injured and it was necessary to cut the barrel in halves to get her out. While she was receiving medical attention her barrel was stolen.

WEISS—Emma Weiss. In sad but loving memory of my dear mother, who passed away two years ago today, May 1, 1919.
"What is a home without a mother.
All things the world may send;
But when I lost my dear mother,
I lost my dearest friend.
Who wore a crown of patience
Through the years she struggled on.
Those hands that rest forever
Were the hands that made our home.
Oh, mother, I am lonely,
How I miss your loving face,
But you left me to remember
None on earth can take your place."
YOUR ONLY DAUGHTER, LILLIAN STENKE.

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

How to Live Longer and Better

Restful sleep is the keynote of our lives. If we don't sleep well, we can't live as well or as long. We all realize this, yet many of us fail to trace the biggest cause of restless sleep to its source—the bedspring. We choose any bedspring and wonder why we cannot sleep.

As a matter of fact, it is a wonder we sleep as well as we do on the ordinary coil, woven wire or national spring, for they certainly are not made for complete bodily comfort. They give where they shouldn't, and don't give where they should. They hold the body in a cramped position, distort the spine, and press unduly on prominent parts of the anatomy, because they fail totally to support other parts. There can be no bodily or mental relaxation on such springs.

The De Luxe, by putting the body at complete ease, is conducive to that mental quiet comfort that brings sound, restful sleep. The body feels no strain—no tension anywhere. The Proof is in the Use.

Examine the De Luxe at your dealer's. The more carefully you compare the De Luxe with any spring at any price, the more certainly you will recognize its superior, luxurious comfort. It is always finished in Rome Gray enamel, and on the side rail appears the Rome Quality Trade-Mark, which identifies all Rome products. For wood or metal beds.

INDIANS NOSE OUT SOX IN 12TH, 4 TO 3

MID-WESTERN ATHLETES TAKE HONORS IN PENN GAMES

ILLINI CAPTURE 4-MILE RELAY; JUMPERS STAR

Campbell Wins 2-Mile in Great Finish for Yale.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 30.—Remarkable performance by midwestern athletes featured the final day of the annual relay carnival of University of Pennsylvania on Franklin field today. Upon water soaked track and turf, with a chilling wind sweeping the field, the tall, lithe and powerful performers from the central states won important competitions in impressive fashion.

R. F. WHARTON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Of the more important college championship races, Illinois captured the four mile event after a steady race, which caused both Cornell and Princeton runners to falter under the strain. R. F. Wharton, the Illinois anchor man, romped to the tape twenty yards ahead of the panting Cornellian.

Cedar Rapids high school, with splendid combination, won both the one mile and the two mile interscholastic titular relays.

Take Individual Contests.

In the individual contests Weiss of Illinois won the discus throw; Osborne of Illinois tied with Chamberlain of Virginia, Alberts of Illinois, and Murphy of Notre Dame in the high jump. Merrick of Wisconsin tied with Gardner of Yale in the pole vault, and Sandefur of Kansas won the shotput.

Notwithstanding the heavy track the Iowa State quartet of half milers, which established a new American record of 7:52 2-5 for two miles at the Drake relays last week, forced Yale to run the limit to win the best and most thrilling of today's championship events.

The contest was in doubt until the last dash for the worsted swept Tom Campbell to victory for Yale, against the gains of Ames and Eby of Penn. Ender the latter had led in entering the stretch. During the entire two miles the lead changed frequently and sensationally.

Syracuse Wins One Mile.

Eastern athletes were not without their share of glory, for in addition to the remarkable race won by the Yale four, Syracuse swept the one mile college titular race.

The University of Paris runners, weakened by the sickness of their captain, finished in the ruck in the one mile relay. Close to 20,000 spectators thronged the huge stadium, regardless of the threaten'g weather. Summaries:

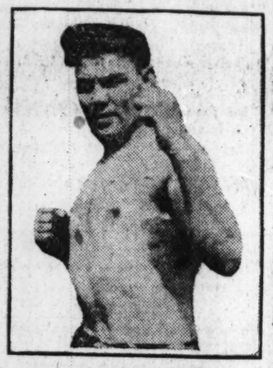
WILL HE BE FIT?



Within a week from the time he started easy training at Summit, N. J., Jack Dempsey had reached the above condition. He hopes he won't go stale before he steps into the ring with Carpentier.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

Would you pay an admission fee to see the "Black Sox" play baseball in any Chicago ball park?

Where Asked.

Wabash avenue and Van Buren street.

The Answers.

Rudolph Kadow, 1915 Irving Park boulevard, property officer, United States public health service—Under no condition would I pay an admission fee to see a baseball game in which any of the "black sox" participate. Baseball is our national sport and it should be strictly clean. If a game were played in the loop and any of the "black sox" took part in it, I would not go near it.

Richard Roeder, 6525 Union avenue, engineer — I do not think it wise to condemn a player until he is found guilty. The so-called "black sox," as I understand it, never have been tried and found guilty. I am opposed to condemning these men until they have been taken into court, have had a fair trial and proved guilty of the charges.

J. R. Bandalin, 1323 West 13th street, salesman — Under no circumstances would I see a game played with any of the "black sox" in it. I like to see clean baseball. To turn out to see any of these men playing in a game would, in my mind, be unsportsmanlike.

Robert Firman, 1437 South Harding avenue, deputy sheriff —I am sorry that any scandal should become mixed in our national sport. These players who were suspended have, no doubt, learned their lesson and we certainly never will hear of a like occurrence. I would say let well enough alone. Forget the past and show willingness to back the boys by attending such games.

F. M. Clark, 4056 Wentworth avenue, chauffeur—I live in a district which abounds in loyal Sox rooters. I always had these men in my mind as idols, but after the world's series of 1919 I wouldn't walk across the street to see any one of them make a triple play unassisted. Out my way, some of the fellows probably would pay a lot of money to get inside a ball park to let the "black sox" know what they think of them.

RELIEF HURLERS FAIL AS BADGERS CRUSH MAROONS

Crisler's Arm Goes Wrong, Staggs Losing, 7-1.

BY ALBON HOLDEN.

When Fritz Crisler, veteran University of Chicago pitcher, developed a sore arm and had to leave the game the University of Wisconsin sluggers picked on two relief hurlers for a bunch of long clouts, defeating the Maroons, 7 to 1, on Stagg field.

It started out to be a pitchers' duel, but after Crisler's arm gave out the contest developed into a rout, for Paddock remained steady. Crisler started brilliantly, fanning the first three batters, and was invincible until the fourth inning, when the Badgers scored twice on Maroon slips.

With two out J. Williams walked and Davey, Chicago's football jinx, singled. Crisler fanned the third batter, but Yardley missed the third strike, letting one run over, and Fedor fumbled a grounder, letting the second run trickle in. It was too cold for a lame arm, so Crisler was relieved at this stage.

Dixon, the Maroon left handed first baseman came in to pitch, and before he could get started Rollie Williams' double, a hit by Farrington and J. Williams' home run drive to deep left center scored three runs. Palmer, who finished the game, was touched for two more runs, a double by Paddock, and a triple by Farrington doing the business.

The single Maroon score came in the sixth when Palmer tripled over Snow's head and scored on Fryer's grounder.

OHIO WINS 2 GAMES

Columbus, O., April 30.—[Special.]—Ohio State won a doubleheader from Indiana today, the first game being a pitchers' battle in which the Buckeyes won, 2 to 1, when McNulty and Huffman scored on double steals in the first and fourth innings. The second game was featured by hard hitting and the excellent pitching of Fisk, who eased up after his team had secured a big lead, winning 6 to 3.

Fast fielding by Ohio featured both games. A rapid double play ended the second game, when Indiana had two men on bases and two runs already scored. Walker attempted to pitch the second game, after having worked throughout the first, but was pounded off the slab. Scores:

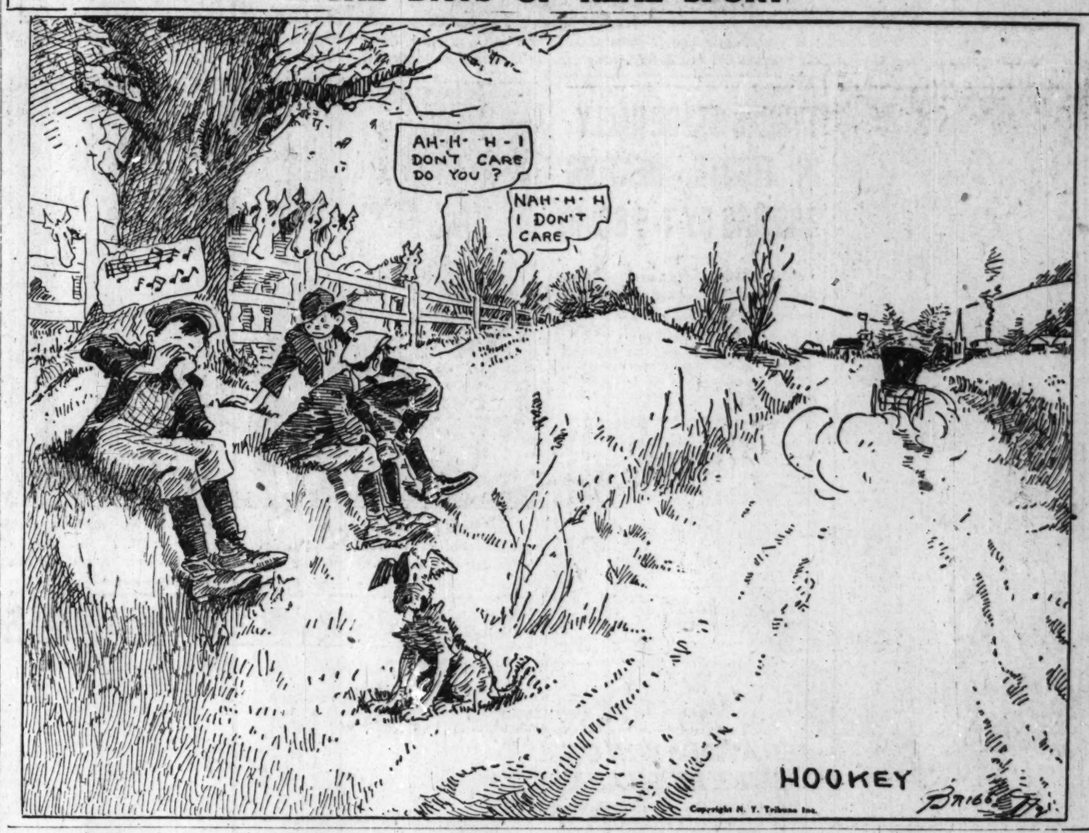
THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT



BOUTS OF TODAY MERELY PICNICS, CHAMPION SAYS

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, April 30.—[Special.]—"What was the hardest fight you ever had, Jack?" inquired a curious person of the champion, Jack Dempsey, at Freddy Welsh's farm at Summit, N. J., today just as the big boxer settled himself for a rest following several rounds of tame boxing with one of his assistants.

Dempsey did not hesitate for a moment.

"O, I haven't had a hard fight in five y... the hasty response of the big fellow. 'I've been extended here and there, but the hardest fight or fights I ever had came along in the days when I first took up boxing. Those were the topsy turvy days."

Thoughts Revert to Early Days.

Jack's thoughts wandered back to he lean moments when he was having his face knocked out of kilter and his ribs caved in and the only balm being a few dollars to provide him with enough chuck to keep him from starving.

"The old days were the tough ones for me," added Dempsey. "Up there taking some terrible whalings, and for the most part I was doing all this on an empty stomach. Talk about hard fights—why, the quarrels I have had since I won the title were picnics compared to some of those jams in the lovable periods when I was trying to convince myself that I was a fighter.

"Duck Soup" Now.

"Getting your ribs staved in by the tough fellows for a few dollars was rough going, don't you think?" continued Jack with a smile. "The fights I engaged in just before or since I grabbed the title were duck soup compared to some of the fights I worked in in the old days.

"Now it is all different. You have comfortable quarters to train in and well appointed clubhouses to box in. Who is hard about that? If you happen to get a clip on the chin the flop is made easy with a soundly padded ring, and if you are the person to deliver the well known clip on the other fellow you are hailed as a hero. You are a hero or a bum; it all depends on which one the clout lands. However, my hard fights all happened before I ever dreamed of the present comforts.

Remembers the Long Ago.

"Carpentier may make it hard for me, but I will always believe that my hardest fights were in the long ago when I was plunging my way through and getting nothing but busted eyes and crushed in ribs. Those were the rough spots," concluded the champion as he made his way to the dining room to answer the call for lunch.

In the Wake of the News

KENTUCKY'S DERBY.

FOR the renewal of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs next Saturday thousands of persons, including several hundred from Chicago, will visit Louisville. Hotel and restaurant capacity will be taxed and thousands of dollars will be spent in that city.

Once we had a Derby in Chicago—the American Derby, at Washington park. It was last run in 1904, seventeen years ago. At that time it was the greatest race in America for 3 year olds. Its value was not as great as the Kentucky Derby of Saturday, but, compared with racing of that time and the value of the dollar then, it was greater.

We have no Derby in Chicago now because, under an interpretation of the Illinois law, betting on a horse race is common gambling, and we have no law permitting wagering by machines or orally within a race track inclosure.

If there were a racing law we would be looking forward to the appearance of the Kentucky Derby winner at our own American Derby along toward the end of June.

Four Leading Candidates.

Among the field of ten or twelve expected to go to the post in the Kentucky Derby and traverse its mile and one-quarter route, for a purse which may reach a gross of $60,000, of which $50,000 is added by the Jockey club, are four great racers.

Of this quartet three are prominent, while Bit of White, a Sunstar filly owned by E. R. Bradley, is a possible starter. Tryster, generally regarded as the hope of the Whitney stable, makes the entry the ante-post favorite. He is by Peter Pan-Tryst. Six wins in six starts is his 1920 record.

Inchcape started only twice last year, and won both starts, selling for the highest price ever paid for a 2 year old. He is by Friar Rock-Rose of Gold.

Leonardo II., which has a strong local following, is by Sweep-Ethel Pace. He started four times last year, and won all his races, including the Hopeful stakes, but was not given a fall campaign.

This does not comprise all those with a chance, by any means, and the winner is likely to come from the ranks of the outsiders. For the last five years favorites have been bowled over by George Smith, Omar Khayyam, Exterminator, Sir Barton, and Paul Jones. But at any rate, we may expect a great field and probably a great race.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Cleveland's world's championship title seems to hold no terrors for Gleason's Sox. After vanquishing the titleholders the day previous, the Hose came back yesterday and for twelve rounds furnished all the thrills imaginable. Then their defense cracked and Speaker's men broke forth with enough runs to land victory, 4 to 3.

DICK KERR. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Although trimmed, the Sox were far from disgraced. They provided some 14,000 fans with enough of the spectacular stuff to make a half dozen ball games interesting. Their fielding was remarkable and it was this that had much to do with Dick Kerr's success in southpawing his way into the twelfth round before defeat overtook him. The great White Sox machine of yesteryear could have done no better.

Error Gives Sox Run.

Aside from the defense displayed by the Sox, Walter Mails, the Indians' star southpaw, featured. He proved himself a regular pitcher. For eleven rounds he was invincible and only for an error by Burns, the Sox would have been scoreless and beaten in regulation time.

Despite his good work, however, Mails couldn't complete his task, being banished in the twelfth, when a pass, an error, and a hit got him into such a pickle that Speaker deemed it wise to call forth Jim Bagby. The latter suppressed the uprising, but not until after two Hose had counted and two more were waiting on the paths for the hit that never came.

Sheely Stars in Field.

In looking over possible heroes for the spotlight the work of Earl Sheely at first base cannot be slighted. The young guardian of the front door gave an exhibition of fielding that even Hal Chase in his prime could not have duplicated. High throws, low throws and good throws, all looked alike to the kid. He caught 'em with one hand as easily as with two.

The way in which the Indians suddenly burst forth with base hits in the twelfth indicated Kerr had weakened after his brilliant effort. O'Neill opened what proved to be the last stand with a single to left and Mails sacrificed. Evans walked. Then Burns atoned for his early error by slapping a single to center and Jamieson, who ran for O'Neill, scored. Speaker also singled, Evans counting, and Joe Wood drove a fly to Hooper on which Burns tallied.

Mostil Starts with Pass.

Undismayed by what had just happened, the Sox cut loose in their half. It all started when Mostil, batting for Strunk, drew a pass with one out. Then Gardner booted Mulligan's roller. Schalk came up and drove the first pitch to left for a single, scoring Murphy, who ran for the ailing Mostil.

Yaryan was sent up to bat for Kerr and Bagby was rushed to the slab. A force play was Yaryan's effort, but Mulligan scored on it. McClellan ran for Yaryan and went to third when Hooper drove a single to right. Next came Johnson, and a roller to Burns ended the pastime.

The first tally grabbed by the Sox was shoved over without a hit. A pass to Hooper started the sixth, after which Johnson sacrificed. Collins' out let Hooper advance, and he scored when Burns fumbled Shelly's bounder, which should have been an easy out. Falk ended the round with a long drive which Evans grabbed in left.

The Indians immediately got back the tally given away by Burns. Speaker opened the seventh with a bouncing single over Kerr's dome. Wood walked and Gardner sacrificed. Sewell hit a puny roller in front of the plate and Schalk threw him out. Stephenson then bounced one at Kerr and the ball caromed off the southpaw's glove for a single, Speaker scoring.

KELLY OF GIANTS WITH 6TH HOMER PASSES BAMBINO

New York, April 30.—George Kelly passed Babe Ruth in their battle for home run honors by clouting his sixth circuit drive today. The smash came in the seventh inning with the bases loaded and made certain the Giants' victory over Boston, 9 to 4, in the opening contest of the series. It was Kelly's only bingle. Nehf was hit hard, being found for twelve swats, but he was effective when the Braves had men on bases. Score:

Notre Dame, Ind., April 30.—[Special.]—Displaying the fight and determination for which Michigan is famous, the Wolverines pulled a game out of the fire today, defeating Notre Dame, 8 to 7, in ten innings.

HENRY VICK. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

When Michigan took its turn at bat in its half of the ninth the score was 6 to 2 in favor of Notre Dame. Despite the handicap the Wolverines went to the plate with a determination which could not be denied. Capt. Van Boven led the assault by working Pitcher Castner for a base on balls. The next two batters also were walked.

Dixon Clears the Bases.

Coach Ray Fisher then used a bit of his big league strategy. He sent Milton Dixon to bit for Johnson after Karpus had singled, which scored one run. The pitcher then met one and sent it sailing into right center for three bases, clearing the sacks and tying the count. Dixon's clout should have been good for a home run, but he was flagged at third by the coacher. He scored a moment later on Geneback's double and the half of the inning closed with Michigan one run in the lead.

Notre Dame, however, came back. Capt. Johnny Mohardt, one of the best all round athletes developed here in years, led off with a long triple to left center. He scored a moment later on Fitzgerald's clean single to center.

Shackelford Sends in Run.

With the score a tie Michigan again bent to its task. After Capt. Van Boven had been thrown out at first by Kane, Perrin hit a sharp bounder to Miles. The tall shortstop was caught off his balance and made a wild throw to first and Perrin advanced to second. Shackelford sent him home with a clean single to center.

It was a wild baseball game, one of the kind for which the teams are noted. In the opening inning Michigan took every advantage of its opponents' misplays and scored two runs. The game then proceeded according to Hoyle until the fifth session, when Notre Dame scored four runs on as many hits and some bad baseball by Michigan. This session was featured by the home run drive of Paul Castner in left center with one man on.

Pitching Still Weak.

Aside from its pitching, which was a little weak today, Michigan is as strong a baseball team as there is in the conference. Howard Liverance and Alfred Shultz, who did the slab work, will improve, while Ed Ruzicka, who was one of the mainstays of last year's pitching staff, is not yet in shape, but will be ready within two weeks, according to Coach Fisher.

In the first inning, first baseman Johnson of Michigan put his team in a bad way by going after a ground ball which he should have left for Uteritz, the second baseman. At the same time Pitcher Liverance was slow to cover the bag and the play went for a hit.

Result of Good Coaching.

In other departments of play Michigan showed the results of expert coaching by Del Pratt, who recently gave up coaching to rejoin the Boston Red Sox, and Ray Fisher, formerly of the Cincinnati Reds, who is now in charge.

Following the disqualification of Slicker Parks, Pete Van Boven, shortstop, was elected captain. This player is an ideal infielder who plays the position with the finish of a veteran. He bats well and is in the game at all times. Like most Michigan captains, he is a natural leader.

Irwin Uteritz at second and Arthur Karpus at third are reliable players. The latter made one bad throw, but his stellar playing at other times offset this mistake. Uteritz is playing his first year of college baseball, and handled himself in a satisfactory manner today.

Outfield Is Fast.

The outfield, composed of John Shackelford in right, John Perrin of football fame in center, and Lowell Geneback in left, is as strong as any in the Big Ten. Perrin is a fast, clever fielder who generally knows where the batters will hit. Genebach was bothered by the sun, but with a little more experience will be a valuable man.

Henry Vick is as strong a catcher as there is in the conference. Vick will be remembered as one of Yost's football stars, and he is every bit as valuable to this year's Michigan baseball team. He holds up his pitcher in commendable fashion, while his alertness and quick recovery of short passed balls nipped several Notre Dame runners at the plate or on the bags. He is also a good hitter.

Michigan will remain here tonight and continue its journey tomorrow to Lafayette, where Purdue will be met on Monday.

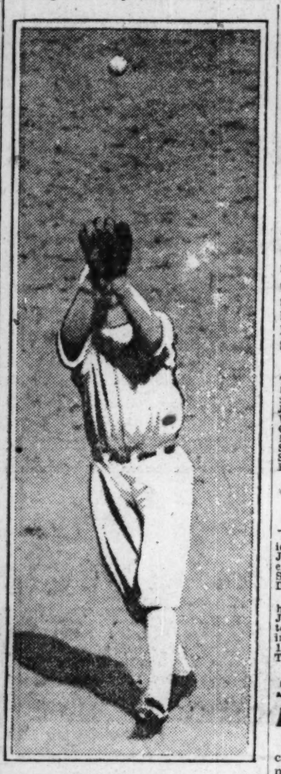
PROVIDING THRILLS FOR THE SOX-INDIANS ROOTERS

After singling in the fifth inning of yesterday's Sox-Indians game, Mulligan attempted to steal second. He reached the bag safely, but overslid and was out. The picture shows Stephenson with the ball while Mulligan is just going into the sack.



Among Mr. Earl Sheely's seventeen fielding chances was a popup off Gardner's bat in the fifth. The ball can be seen on its way to a sure putout.

SENATORS WIN ON HOMER BY SHANKS

Philadelphia, Pa., April 30.—Shank's circuit drive in to bleachers with two men on the bases by virtue of singles in the seventh inning gave Washington a 6 to 5 victory over Philadelphia today. Moore pitched good ball until the fifth, when he developed a wild streak and was succeeded by Perry. Score:

Notes

THE Sox and Indians will battle on the South Side today while the Cubs and Pirates are having it out on the North Side lot.

Mostil's charley horse has improved and if he feels O. K. today he may be sent to center field.

Speaker will trot out his hurling ace—Stanley Coveleskie—this afternoon. Gleason will have to depend on his young pitchers.

The crowd gave Sheely a hand several times in recognition of his sensational fielding around the initial corner.

Ernie Johnson played a dandy game at short, being deadly on the six chances coming his way. He snuffed out a couple of drives that started like base hits.

Judge Landis, baseball's high commissioner, was among those present. He visited the Indians' bench before the game and was introduced to all Speaker's athletes.

Burns pursued Schalk's foul to the Indian bench in the fifth and just as he made the catch he collided with an iron railing. He tumbled over but held the ball. Beyond a bruise he was undamaged.

Gleason, Collins and Schalk gave Ump Hildebrand an earful in the eighth. Evans apparently bunted at a pitch and missed it. Hildebrand called it a ball, thus the loud complaint.

Kerr pulled through a tight situation in the fifth. With one gone Sewell and Stephenson, the Alabama kids, singled. O'Neill then grounded to Kerr, who heaved to third in time to force Sewell. Mulligan relayed the pill to first and O'Neill was doubled.

CUB-PIRATE GAME WASHED AWAY BY PITTSBURGH RAIN

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 30.—[Special.]—The rain which tried to stop yesterday's game continued until mid-afternoon today and postponed the final game of the Cubs-Pirate series here, although President Dreyfuss waited until the last minute before declaring everything off.

The two teams left on the same rattler tonight for Chicago to continue their argument there for the next three days. So far the Pirates have the better of the series with the Cubs, having won three of the four games played by the two teams.

In spite of the fact the Cubs have won only one more game than they have lost, Manager Evers is confident they will give a good account of themselves when they are able to use their full strength. So far, with Alexander out of commission since the opening day and with Vaughn and Tyler below par in efficiency, most of the slab work has fallen on the youngsters, and they have demonstrated that Evers has some mighty good material in the rookie corps.

The Cubs will be home for eight games, three with Pittsburgh, beginning tomorrow, four with Cincinnati, ending Saturday, and one with St. Louis on May 8.

EUREKA, 85; ILLINOIS WESLEYAN, 30.

LA GRANGE NINE TRIMS NEW TRIER BY 9 TO 8 COUNT

Casper's sacrifice fly scoring Zimmerman in the seventh inning gave Coach C. M. Osborne's La Grange high school baseball team a 9 to 8 victory over New Trier in a Suburban league game at La Grange yesterday. New Trier forced La Grange to the limit, however, jumping into an early lead and holding the advantage until the sixth inning when Williams evened the score for the home nine by swatting a home run with Casper on second.

COACH C. M. OSBORNE.

White of New Trier pitched great ball each hurler fanning twelve. Casper had the better of the argument, however, due to better support from his infield. New Trier was guilty of six errors, four of which helped to boost La Grange's score. Williams was the Babe Ruth of the fray. This dusky backstop gave the La Grange nine the tying runs and paved the way for the victory. Score:

THE POLE VAULT

NOW and then an anonymous author uses Uncle Sam's mails to send into the office of a newspaper some "masterpiece" in the form of a story or a poem. Most of these contributions help to clutter the waste basket. But, not always, for the appended poetical effort, the work of some anonymous person finds its way to the editoral desk and is considered of publishable merit so here it is:

When all the dashes have been run,
The shot-put and the hurdles done,
What keeps me there till after 1?
The pole vault.

What makes me miss the last express?
What sends the paper late to press,
And causes all of us distress?
The pole vault.

When wise men all have hit the hay,
What fiend's invention makes me stay
And desecrate the Sabbath day?
The pole vault.

When fans have hastened home because
They fear their yawns will break their jaws,
What violates the closing laws?
The pole vault.

Please can it Mister A. A. U.,
Or else provide a bed or two,
So we poor scribes can slumber through
The pole vault.

Louisville, Ky., April 30.—[Special.]—The Kentucky Derby, turfdom's classic, is a week off.

The eyes of race lovers of the world will be turned upon Churchill Downs next Saturday afternoon, when between fifteen and twenty 3 year olds face the barrier in the forty-seventh running of the Derby. With the cream of America's thoroughbred products trained to the last minute for the great race, and a strong representation of England's best blood, the event assumes an international aspect that leaves in extreme doubt the question of supremacy of foreign or domestic breeding.

Added Money Is Record.

With $50,000 added, the Derby of 1921 establishes a new mark for Jockey club liberality.

With the arrival of Harry Payne Whitney's entrants this week, speculation as to the favorite increased noticeably, and the popularity of Tryster and Prudery, which seem sure to be the Whitney entry, failed to be shaken appreciably by the wonderful record made by Leonardo II. in running a mile and one-sixteenth at Lexington Monday in 1:42 2-5.

With Tryster and Prudery on the ground and both horses training well, it looks as if this pair certainly will hold the position of favoritism Derby day. Then will come Leonardo II. as second choice. The Bradley entry, which will be Black Servant and probably Behave Yourself, also is certain to come in for a big play.

W. J. Salmon's Careful, a consistent filly, also is sure to have a strong following. She is at the top of her form now, as her performance in the Chesapeake stakes at Havre de Grace last Saturday plainly showed.

Cuban Derby Winner to Start.

Mose Goldblatt will start Billy Barton, the Cuban Derby winner, for his owner, Charles Stoneham. "Bud" Fisher, the cartoonist, has notified his trainers to have his $50,000 Muskalonge ready for the race. Former Senator Johnson Camden will start Rangoon.

Coyne, a whirlwind on a fast track and a stayer, and Firebrand, the son of McGee, the sire of Donerail and Exterminator, Derby winners, are regarded as sure starters.

Grey Lag, Pluribus, and Nancy Lee may complete the list of starters. Centimeter, Bon Homme and Uncle Velo are believed to have been put out of the running by their race in Lexington, when they were defeated by Black Servant.

Whitney Horses Heavily Backed.

Just now—and there is little possibility, barring accidents, of a change in public sentiment before next Saturday—Tryster and Leonardo II. hold the center of the stage and both will go to the barrier heavily backed.

Last year Tryster won six races, all his starts, and $50,000. In his first start this year he met his first defeat when Paul Jones, last year's Kentucky Derby winner, beat him three parts of a length at Havre de Grace last Saturday. But Tryster was not disgraced by that defeat; on the other hand, he showed a wonderful performance for a young horse.

This year, as always, the classic will be witnessed by notables from throughout the country—sportsmen, statesmen, millionaires, and others of wide reputation, drawn annually to Churchill Downs as if by an irresistible magnet.

BLACK SERVANT WINS BLUE GRASS TURF RACE STAKE

Lexington, Ky., April 30.—[Special.]—Leonardo II., a Kentucky Derby candidate, today met the first defeat of his career in the Blue Grass stakes, and failed to finish in the money. The Bradley Derby entry, Black Servant and Behave Yourself, finished one, two in the Blue Grass, and thereby gained considerable prestige for the Derby. This pair may rule second to the Whitney entry of Tryster and Prudery in popularity.

Leonardo II. carried the Derby weight today, as did the Bradley pair, and the contentions of some turfmen that he could not "stay" under that impost seem to have been justified. However, the track was heavy and the colt does not seem to favor heavy going.

Bud Fisher's Muskalonge's Derby test did not show the $50,000 colt in any too favorable a light. The colt ran a fast three-quarters, then fell back.

Naperville Squad Wins Meet of Local Colleges

Scoring 40 points, Northwestern college yesterday won the track meet between Northwestern, Y. M. C. A. college, Elmhurst, De Paul, Lewis Institute, and Armour Tech held at Stagg field. Y. M. C. A. college athletes placed second with 33 points. La Veaga of Y. M. C. A. college won individual honors, scoring 20 points. Summaries:

MINISTERS FIGHT HOLDING BIG GO IN JERSEY CITY

Jersey City, N. J., April 30.—A resolution adopted by fifty protestant ministers, protesting against the holding of the Dempsey-Carpentier world championship boxing match on July 2, was circulated here today.

The resolution calls upon "all high minded and public spirited citizens of Jersey City, regardless of creed or church connections," to oppose the fight. The resolution characterized the event as "a shameful humiliation to our city," and pointed out that six deaths have resulted from "these brutal encounters during the three years the law has been in existence."

Corri Is Invited Here After Jersey City Bout

Chicago may see Eugene Corri, England's great boxing authority and fight referee. Tex Rickard has invited Corri to come to America with the Prince of Wales and Lord Lonsdale to be his guests at the Dempsey-Carpentier bout July 2 at Jersey City and Corri has accepted. Promoter Doc Krone, who will run a special train to the fight, is a friend of Corri, and he cabled Corri to pay a visit to Chicago when in the United States.

Frank Moran Will Battle Carpentier in September

New York, April 30.—Frank Moran, Pittsburgh heavyweight pugilist, returned from England today on the steamer Aquitania. Moran said he had an agreement with Maj. Arnold Wilson, a London boxing promoter, to meet Georges Carpentier in London in September regardless of the outcome of the championship bout between Carpentier and Jack Dempsey July 2.

STATE BOWLERS START TOURNEY WITH 626 TEAMS

The twenty-fourth annual tournament of the Illinois Bowling association started last night at the Chateau alleys, 3800 Broadway. According to the official schedule it will continue until May 29, and will decide the different bowling championships of the state of Illinois.

The meet is sanctioned by the American bowling congress, and the largest from the point of entries that has ever been held by the state organization. In the main event 626 teams will compete, 1,576 pairs will roll in the doubles, and 3,143 will face the barrier in the individual event. The prize money will amount to over $18,000, which will be well distributed.

Last night's schedule called for shooting in the main event only. Forty teams went on the alleys in three squads, and, as is usual on opening nights, the scoring was low.

BARRY TO COACH AT DE LA SALLE

Norman Barry, one of the stars of last year's undefeated Notre Dame football team, has been engaged to develop the gridiron eleven at De La Salle institute next fall. Barry was a member of the Hoosier eleven for three years and played in the backfield. Coach Knute Rockne considered him one of the main cogs in his machine last season and his experience should fit him for the coaching position.

Nick Malloy, manager of the Woodlawn Lions baseball team has announced that Barry will make his first appearance with the team today at White City park. Barry was a member of the Notre Dame nine for three years.

COLUMBIA BEATS YALE'S OARSMEN

Derby, Conn., April 30.—Under rainy skies and over a smooth course Columbia crews made a clean sweep over Yale today in the rowing races on Lake Housatonic, winning both the junior and varsity events, the former by three lengths and the latter by a length and a quarter. The time for each race was as follows:

Junior — Columbia, 10:48 2-5; Yale, 11:05 2-5.
Varsity—Columbia, 10:23; Yale, 10:30½.

Illinois Net Men Victors Over Northwestern Team

Hoboken, N. J., April 30.—Stevens defeated Yale at lacrosse today, 5 to 1.

WOODS and WATERS by LARRY ST. JOHN

THE TROUT ROD.

THERE is an amazing variety in trout rods, ranging from an alder limb, cut à la small boy from the brookside, to the beautiful and expensive weapon of the dry fly fisherman.

Costliness is not always an indication of a rod's fitness for a given style of fishing. For example, a beautifully balanced, light fly rod is no more suitable for derricking trout from a brushy brook than a common cane pole is for casting fine and far off.

A cane pole, a cut pole, or the good wife's clothes-line prop will serve for bait fishing in an emergency, but bait fishing tackle need not be crude. In fact it ought to be neat and businesslike, to be in keeping with the fitness of things.

For fishing brushy brooks, or brooks with soft and gooey edges, where the fish must be horsed in quickly, and where travel is slow and difficult, an ideal rod is the steel telescopic affair in the bait fishing model—not a fly rod, nor a bait casting rod, but a bait rod—with the guides on the outside.

In a tight and ticklish place, such a rod may be quickly shortened and stiffened until it is little more than a club, and when you come to a more open place it can be lengthened into a nice, sweet handling fishing rod.

For fishing larger, more open streams, where the fish can be played and landed with a net, regular fly fishing tackle is both elegant and practical. In rough, deep water, however, where considerable lead must be used, one can easily put a set in the tip of a light rod. For such fishing a fly rod with quite a bit of backbone is recommended.

One can go some ways in the light tackle direction when fly fishing the little brooks where the fish run small. The tiny fly rods of less than three ounces are not always appropriate for this kind of fishing, however, especially if the streamlet is full of snags. Good sized fish have been landed on these ultra-light rods, but nearly always when fishing from a boat or a raft in water free of debris.

These rods, when well made, are not toys—a cast of eighty-two feet has been made with an eight foot, two ounce fly rod—but they are not designed for rough work.

Of course, a great deal depends on the individual rod. The better class of fine hand made rods are stronger and will stand more hard usage per ounce than will those turned out in quantities, mainly by machinery. Nevertheless, taking brook fishing as it comes, the rod of eight and one-half feet and three and one-half ounces is as far as we would go in lightness—you never can tell when an old granddaddy trout is going to take hold and start for the next county, and a little reserve power then comes in mighty handy.

Besides, one must remember that brook fishing in many parts of the country is not wading but fishing from the bank. And fishing from the bank means that every step you take jars the earth beneath your feet and telegraphs ahead to the fish announcing your coming. Longish casts, then, should be the rule, not the exception, in brook fishing, and for dropping a fly regularly at reasonable distances you want a rod of considerable power.

LET us help you with your fishing problems. Tell us how far you want to go, how long you intend to stay, what kind of fish you want to catch, whether by still fishing, trolling, bait-casting, or fly-fishing, and any other particulars, and we will tell you where to go. Last season we helped hundreds of anglers. Please don't forget a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

YANK POLO TEAM UPSET BRITONS IN 7 TO 1 SCRAP

SUNBURY, England, April 30.—Members of the American polo team, C. C. Rumsey, Thomas Hitchcock Jr., J. Watson Webb, and Devereaeux Milburn, today defeated a team composed of Earl W. Hopping, Louis Stoddard, Robert E. Strawbridge, and an American from Cambridge university, named Sanford, 7 goals to 1. Rumsey slightly strained his back, but it is believed the injury is not serious.

BURDICK PLAYS LAST GAME TODAY

Ralph ("Bill") Burdick will make his last appearance as a tennis representative of this city in the concluding rounds of the South Side Tennis club's backhand championship tourney this afternoon. Burdick will make his home in Indianapolis after this week, and will represent that city and section in national competition hereafter.

Burdick will play Alex Squair, former western singles champion, in the semi-finals. In the other semi-final brack, Arthur P. Hubbell and F. H. Avery will clash. The winners will meet at 3 o'clock.

A good sized gallery saw Burdick win a three hour match from E. W. Wilson yesterday, 7—9, 7—5, 12—10, while Squair defeated A. Green Jr., former western intercollegiate champion, 8—6, 4—6, 7—5.

NOTES OF THE CUEISTS.

Edouard Horemans, the Belgian cueist, is now traveling westward to San Francisco, where on May 11 he will meet Jake Schaefer in their second match of this season.

The annual meeting of the Illinois billiard association will be held at the Sherman House, May 10. Winners of the pocket, three cushion and balkline titles will appear in exhibition games.

EVANSTON HIGH SHOWS HEELS TO MAINE ON TRACK

Athletes representing Evanston High school yesterday defeated Maine Township High school's track team, 69 to 43, in a dual meet held at Evanston. Evanston won ten first places of the thirteen events held, forfeiting all points in the discus throw through lack of entries. Four Evanston athletes Merrill, Barker, Swan, and Hamilton, captured two first places.

Sally of Maine was individual point winner of the meet with fourteen markers. Swan of Evanston, a junior athlete who was running in the meet for seasoning, equaled the Suburban league record for the 220.

100 yard dash—Won by Swan, Evanston; Sally, Maine, second; Prendergast, Evanston, third. Time, :10 2-5.

220 yard dash—Won by Swan, Evanston; Sally, Maine, second; Prendergast, Evanston, third. Time, :23.

The Superior Worth of The Nash Six Finds General Acceptance

It is apparent today how generally the Nash Six is accepted as an outstanding value among motor cars.

It has acquired leadership. Nash owners have learned to know the Nash Six as a car of uncommon goodness. They have for it that friendly enthusiastic regard which good service merits and earns.

They recommend it to other buyers who find in the Nash Six all of the qualities which make for satisfied ownership and at a cost which convinces them that it is by far the best value in its field.

Your judgment, we are sure, will incline to theirs.

You will find the Nash Six has more power, a finer beauty of design and finish, and greater riding comfort than other cars $100 to $300 higher in price.

The 1921 Briscoe Is the Best Car Built Today

The style that satisfies the eye—the stamina that stands the abuse of week-in and week-out traveling—the power that laughs at hill and sand—the comfort that smooths the road all day long—the economy that lays the expense bug-a-boo—these features make the Briscoe the best car for pleasure or for business—for social calls or for touring—the best car built today.

BRISCOE
The Trustworthy Car

The Briscoe owner can look a repair shop in the face without a shudder. And his visits to gas stations are far apart. Owner's records of 20 to 25 miles per gallon are common. The Briscoe is a car you can use continuously without carrying the spectre of high expense as an extra passenger.

Come in and get a real demonstration of present-day motor car values. Do it right away—don't wait.

SPYING TACTICS OUT OF FASHION IN BOXING GAME

BY RAY PEARSON.

Not so very long ago it was a custom in the game of pugilism for ring men to keep close tab on prospective opponents. Some of them even went so far as to paste on the old whisker disguise, slip past the doorkeeper with a purchased ducat, and sit eyeing some fellow in a scrap. The object was to get a line on future opposition, which meant, in other words, that the spying person wanted to see the style—the strong and weak points in offense and defense—of his rival.

RAY C. PEARSON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Even that was not completely to the satisfaction of some fighters and their managers, for they resorted to the old training camp spy methods to get the "dope" on a scrapper. It was a frequent thing in those days to hear of some second or other member of a boxer's camp being thrown out of the camp of another scrapper because he was caught getting an eyeful and an earful of something that wasn't meant for him.

Times Have Changed.

But it isn't at all like that today, and the fans who chance to put the glims on a yarn telling about this spying business can put it down as a lead pipe cinch that it is a press agent dream. Boxers of the present don't pull the "tumble stuff."

Times have changed in pugilism just as in other things, and—like in many things—for the better. The boxers of today are different, in fact, intellectually they have advanced to such a degree that they cannot be compared on even terms with some of those of the past. Of course, this is not meant as a criticism of those of other years, because they were fighters and made no pretense of being anything else. And then, too, conditions then were not what they are today.

Take Case of Dempsey.

Now, for instance, take Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, who on July 2 battles Georges Carpentier, European champion, in the ring operated by Tex Rickard at Jersey City. Here one gets a fair example of how unnecessary it seems for fighters of the present to get a line on their rivals. Dempsey, in the first place, wouldn't countenance the spying system in his own camp.

Jack has ideas of his own about such things. For one thing, he wouldn't cheapen himself by making an effort to "sneak" information about a rival. But of far greater importance, he does not think it necessary to know the way other scrappers conduct themselves in combat.

It was before Dempsey fought Willard in Toledo on July 4, 1919 that the writer asked Jack if he had a line on Willard's way of milling and he answered:

"No, I haven't. All I know is that he is an awfully big fellow. I never try to find out what a prospective opponent has in his fighting repertoire, for I don't think it would do a bit of good.

Doesn't Need Any "Tips."

"On the contrary, it might do a lot of harm, for the fellow being inspected might have something under cover. Then when it came to the business of battling, he could cross me by springing something I hadn't seen him use."

YANKEE GOLFERS OFF FOR ENGLAND

New York, April 30.—Seven American players, entered in the British golf championships, sailed today on the liner Caronia. They are W. C. Fownes Jr., Captain Bobby Jones, Francis Ouimet, J. Wood Platt, Jesse Guilford, Dr. Paul Hunter, and Fred Wright. They are accompanied by George B. Balch of Cincinnati, who however, is not entered in the tournament. Charles Evans Jr., the other American entrant, is scheduled to sail next Wednesday.

Hyde Park "Y" B. & P. vs. Gary Nooners.

Division street "Y" No. 2 vs. Bell Telephone company.

Hyde Park Business Men vs. Gary Y. M. C. A.

Hyde Park Nooners vs. Gary Reserves.

The Girls' A. A. F. volleyball finals will also be played there the same night.

Committee Allows Lasker to Resign Chess Series

HAVANA, April 27.—The tournament committee which had in charge the international chess championship match between Dr. Emanuel Lasker of Germany and José R. Capablanca, the Cuban expert, decided today to grant Dr. Lasker's request to resign the series and concede Capablanca the world championship. Dr. Lasker gave illness as the reason for his desire to cease playing. The $25,000 involved in the match is being divided between the players as though the full twenty-four games of the series had been played.

Chicago Boy Captain of Onarga Cadets Nine

Onarga, Ill., April 30.—[Special.]—Donald McChesney of Chicago was elected captain of the Onarga Military school baseball team here today. Other Chicago boys on the team are C. Collie, C. Monnet, J. McAnulty, R. Brunell, and W. Salmon.

You Can't Tell a Golf Champion from Appearances

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

THE United States is going to have a strong army of golfers, both amateur and professional, in the British open championships this year. Formerly a few individuals went over, and they were lost in the mass of competition. This time Chick Evans, Bobby Jones, Francis Ouimet, W. C. Fownes Jr., Paul Hunter, J. Wood Platt, Fred Wright, and a few more will try to make it interesting for the English champions.

Walter J. Travis, former American champion and only American who ever went to England and won the British open, has slipped a little back from the championship class, but his performances are still remembered in England. When Travis won at Sandwich in 1904 he used a Schenectady putter, and the Englishmen, unable to understand how an American golfer could possibly compete with the British sharps in the ancient Scottish game, pounced on the putter as an alibi and forever barred it.

Well Balanced Team.

We have sent over a lot of individual players since Travis' time, but never such a strong and well balanced team. Ouimet went over once, and Evans twice, and both failed to pass the second round. Last year when England had lost many of her best golfers through the war, and Americans were too busy to think much about golf, only five Americans went over. Bob Gardner reached the final match and carried the English champion, Cyril Tolley, along to the thirty-seventh hole before being put out.

Chick Evans, national champion, is one of the stars of the team. Evans has been a contender among the champions for ten years. When a small boy he lived across the road from the Edgewater Golf club, near Chicago. He began playing with an iron.

Some Placing!

For a long time Chick practiced approaches by having a caddy, wearing a baseball catcher's glove, stationed on the green. Evans became so skillful that he could drop every pitched shot into the caddie's glove without making him step after the ball. He started short pitches and gradually increased the distance. Today Evans is recognized as the best player of iron shots in America.

When Evans began playing in the big matches and going after championships, luck passed him by for a long time.

Under the strain his game went off and his opponents nosed him out. In 1916 he won the national open championship, the first national he won. A few weeks later he won the national amateur at Philadelphia. He is the only American golfer who ever won both titles in the same year. He repeated last year by winning the national amateur the second time.

New Putter Helps Evans.

For a long time Evans was a nervous putter, seeming unable to putt with the confidence shown in other departments of his game. Last year he played a lot of golf with "Snakes" Ames, the famous old-time Princeton football player, who is an expert golfer. Ames used a peculiar putter, shaped like a stirrup, and Chick used it with remarkable results. This putter being center shafted is not allowed in Great Britain.

After seeing Evans and Jones play last year Harry Vardon, the great English player, said that if he was a betting man he'd risk a good bet on the Americans to carry off the British open this season.

William C. Fownes, team captain, is a Pittsburgh steel millionaire and a great golfer, holder of the American national amateur title in 1909.

Champion at 11 Years.

Many think that Bobby Jones of Atlanta is the greatest amateur golfer in America, and that he is likely to win in England. Jones is now 19 and a splendidly developed athlete from playing golf since he was a small boy. He won the southern championship when only 11.

Jones' home was near the East Lake Park Golf club course. Born in Atlanta, he was a sickly boy, and the doctors advised his parents to "turn him out for air." He was "turned out" on the golf course, and Stewart Maiden, a little Scotch professional at the club, took charge of him and taught him the rudiments of the game. Jones never was a caddie. Stewart Maiden says he "only showed Bobbie a few strokes," and Jones developed his own style of play. The result was good, for Jones is now said to have a form as near perfect as ever seen on any course, and Harry Vardon said last year that Jones' style is the best he ever saw in this country.

Early Fame for Ouimet.

Francis Ouimet became famous at Brookline in the National Open in 1913, when he defeated the Englishmen, Vardon and Ray in the playoff of a tie. At that time he was a tall, slim boy, and wasn't counted among the championship possibilities until the final match, where he showed amazing steadiness as well as skill. Ouimet has one rule in golf. He says he never knows where his opponent's ball is, and never watches an opponent's shot. He concentrates on his own game and doesn't even see the gallery. After his victory over Vardon and Ray some one asked him if he felt nervous.

"Why, no," he said, "I didn't even know they were in the match."

Some Advice for Boys.

As a boy, Ouimet lived across the road from the Brookline course and played golf when he should have been in school. In fact, he insisted upon giving all his time to playing golf instead of going to high school. He was a real "golf bug." Often at night his mother used to hear him moving around in his room, and upon going up to see if he was sick, found him practicing putts on the carpet.

The system worked in this case. However, Ouimet doesn't recommend it to other boys. If he had it all to do over again, he says, he'd go to school first and play golf afterward.

Augie Kleckhefer, former world's three-cushion champion and Charles Le Gros, this week will decide first place in the Chicago Billiard League three-cushion race for the Blake cup. The two experts, after battling for weeks on practically even terms, have won 20 games each and lost 5. Each has one contest left to play, Le Gros playing Joe Capron at the Casino on Thursday night and Kleckhefer meeting Leonard Kenney at the Recreation Friday night.

Capron is a bang-up third with two left to play and if he wins both and either Kleckhefer or Le Gros suffers defeat, he will get into a tie for second prize.

LOW GROSS PLAY FOR WILLIAMS AT BOB O' LINKS

BY JOE DAVIS.

A lake breeze which offset the efforts of the engineer in charge of nature's heating system to provide the golfers with a balmy afternoon, coupled with moving day problems, kept the attendance at the local courses below normal.

From all sides come reports that the grass this year is in wonderful condition, but recent rains have left the low spots boggy. With a fair amount of fine weather this week it is probable every course in the Chicago district will open its regular greens.

Prize to Williams.

The Bob o' Link club opened its competitive season with a ball sweepstakes in which C. S. Williams won the low gross prize with a well played score of 83, K. W. Curtis being second with 85.

William H. Arthur, for many years one of our leading amateur boxers, showed the benefit of his indoor practice by getting low net with a card of 85—18—63, E. P. Bartlett being second with 101—30—71.

OLYMPIA FIELDS.

J. Clarke Baker made a double play at Olympia Fields by getting low gross and net in the handicap played over the No. 3 course. A 6 on the eleventh hole was his high mark, and his card read 39—41—82, his allowance of 8 giving him a net of 72. In the ball sweepstakes over the second course S. A. Winsor was top card with 94—18—76, A. D. Campbell, with 105—26—77, tying with H. E. Roelke, 84—9—77, for second place.

RIDGE.

Shooting 92—30—62, C. P. Talmadge yesterday won the low net prize at Ridge Country club. Three tied for second low net as follows: M. J. Trees, 97—30—67; H. G. Van Nostrand, 89—22—67; W. H. Voltz, 96—29—67.

JACKSON PARK.

Jackson Park was crowded, players coming at 8 o'clock having to wait eight hours. The leading gross scores in the odd and even hole contest were T. J. Monahan, J. D. Wright, 75; J. Brewer, 76; D. Ritchit, 77; S. Miller, 78; R. Oliver, 84; J. Badenoch, 87; G. Geanes, 88; A. Bennett, 90; L. Cavell, 90. Monahan

SHOTS ON THE LINKS
by JOE DAVIS

MRS. MELVIN JONES, who for a number of years has been one of Chicago's leading players, has left Glen Oak and joined Olympia Fields. Mr. Jones, who is not quite as well known to golfing fame as his wife, has purchased a home near Olympia Fields, hence the change. The addition of Mrs. Jones will strengthen the already strong galaxy of talent possessed by the big south side club, which has a policy of encouraging its women players.

J. Augustine Mudd, Jr., one of the stars of the Beverly club is taking his spring practice at the Excelsior Springs Golf club. Fifty Chicago golfers were registered at the course last week among them being Tom Meade of Westward Ho, F. P. Sullivan, William Hopkins, W. C. Coe, W. G. Lloyd, C. L. Iverson, T. B. Swanson, J. P. O'Leary, Chas. W. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo F. Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Haugan and M. W. Borders.

Donald Ross, who is to remodel the Calumet Country club course arrived yesterday and will make his first inspection of the course today. It is expected that the entire layout will be changed as the original plan was to have 27 holes while the present plan is for 18, with a spacious ground for practice shots.

A statement that Capt. C. H. Alison, of the firm of Colt, Mackenzie and Alison, golf course architects, had staked out a temporary course at the new Briergate club of Deerfield was erroneous. Capt. Alison is preparing plans only for the permanent course.

[8], Devine [16], and Bennett [23] tied at 38 in the odd and even hole contest.

CALUMET.

Lee Thiltgen led the field at Calumet yesterday in the qualifying round of the ball sweepstakes tournament with 39—42—81, which earned for him the honor of captain of the No. 1 foursome. The other teams of the fourteen foursomes that will engage in the first round of the event next Saturday are, respectively: J. N. McDonald, G. R. Wild, W. L. Eulass, A. L. Wilson, J. R. Britz, J. B. Morris, H. J. Mellus, G. N. S. Clair, V. W. Foster, R. O'Hara, C. L. Belplane, Harry Hurry, and E. S. Hammond.

Winners in the ball sweepstakes competition were E. S. Hammond, W. B. Ross, J. R. Morris, C. L. Delaplane, J. T. Morrison, T. J. McKeogy, F. J. Klug, R. P. Miller, D. C. Wing, and Harry Hurry.

Next Year's Prices Now!

Not a new model. Not a lesser car. Not a single cheapening. Not one accessory removed. But the finest Marmon ever built!

THE Marmon 34 henceforth will sell on the 1922 price basis. We give you now the revisions we will obtain eventually in raw materials and lowered manufacturing costs.

This $3985 Marmon 34 is the identical $5000 Marmon—not a new model, not a lesser car. There is not the slightest compromise in quality. The entire difference is due to the times.

The $3985 Marmon 34 is, in fact, the finest car we ever built. We've used the recent lull—never closing our factory—to make added refinements. The Marmon 34 has continued to sell as the foremost $5000 car.

We have made this revision at the earliest opportunity—six months sooner than anticipated. We make one complete reduction, instead of several steps downward. Our new price is based on the anticipated lowered production costs of the next 18 months.

The $3985 Marmon 34 is complete—it includes all its extra equipment and accessories. Nothing has been removed. It is the finest car we ever built, a car that will give you constant pride of ownership.

Thus we fulfill our ambition to bring the Marmon 34 within the reach of thousands who have longed for a de luxe car. Now the lower price establishes the Marmon 34 unquestionably as America's foremost quality car.

The result of this reduction is certain—it will multiply Marmon sales many times over. The bare announcement of the new price is sufficient to attract thousands. So we recommend instant ordering.

CHANDLER SIX

Famous For Its Marvelous Motor

First Quality at Low Price Has Put Chandler in First Place

WHAT are you going to drive this year, and for several years to come? We want to tell you why it should be a Chandler.

There are a hundred thousand Chandlers on the road now. From a modest beginning eight years ago, but with the pioneer idea of a six to sell for less than two thousand dollars and with a really good car and an organization that knows how to build good cars, the Chandler has gone steadily into a position of leadership.

Chandler Stands Apart, Free From Keen Competition

AND 1921 will be no exception in Chandler progress. For the Chandler never occupied a more distinctive position that it does today.

The Chandler price sets the Chandler apart from competition. Men who consider values and prices carefully will recognize the fairness of this statement.

Price Always Kept Low and the Reasons Why

THE Chandler price has always been kept low without sacrifice of quality. This has been made possible by the most efficient management, the most modern factory and the highest financial credit with sources of supply, together with the fact that we have always built one chassis, developed and refined as the years have passed, but never abandoned, because constantly more popular.

Some lines have manufactured simultaneously as many as three or four distinct models—not styles of body, but chasses. They have come and gone. You can probably imagine what such a policy means in manufacturing costs, in selling prices and in the resale value of such cars.

Chandler resale value is relatively higher than that of any car, after a like period of service.

The Chandler Offers You Unmatched Value

THE Chandler motor, which, in the early days, was named "The Marvelous Motor" by Chandler owners, has always been thought of as the prime feature of the Chandler car, and it probably is. But all the other units and equipment of the Chandler chassis are of the same high quality, the same splendid character of design. The whole chassis is of fine, sturdy construction.

Cord Tires Standard Equipment

The motor has won supremacy in its constant performance in the hands of its owners. It has ample power for the speed any reasonable driver could ever care for and power, at the same time, for performance on long, sharp hills, mountain climbs or in mud and sand, that not many other cars can produce.

Distinguished Chandler Motor Features

THE motor base of the Chandler is of a character which few other cars possess, and those the highest priced cars. It is a solid cast aluminum mounting, extending from frame to frame and locking to the frame at four points. It greatly reduces weight and gives utmost rigidity.

Among other distinctive motor features are the magneto equipment, the heavy counter-balanced crankshaft, extra large bearings, silent chain drive for auxiliary motor shafts, the combination manifold and a cooling system which makes it impossible for the motor to overheat if there is water in the radiator and oil in the crankcase.

Importance and Superiority of Magneto Ignition

CHANDLER ignition is supplied by the Bosch High-Tension Magneto, as it always has been. Many high-priced American cars and all foreign cars are magneto-equipped. The great majority of trucks are magneto equipped. Practically all airplanes and motor-driven fire apparatus and nearly one hundred percent of all farm tractors have magnetos. The fastest racing records have been made by magneto-equipped cars.

There is no question as to the marked superiority of magneto equipment. We could make a very considerable saving by the use of the battery-distributor system, which is called upon to start the starter, blow the horn, light the lamps and furnish the ignition, but the greater efficiency of the magneto more than compensates for the added cost.

The magneto gives the Chandler motor a hotter, fatter spark, igniting the gas quickly and completely, and its simplicity of wiring and absolute dependability make it the ideal ignition equipment.

A Wide Choice of Beautiful Comfortable Bodies

CHANDLER bodies are most pleasing and offer a wide selection from which to choose. The big seven-passenger touring car is the leader perhaps, but the snappy, sporty four-passenger Dispatch car, the lithe, marine-gray two-passenger roadster, and the chummy four-passenger roadster have their own large followings. All four of these models are upholstered in genuine hand-buffed leather and softly cushioned.

Closed Cars of Most Pleasing Design

THOUSANDS have chosen the Chandler sedan and the coupe as their all-season cars and found them ideal in any weather. They are of beautiful design, and, which is also equally important, they are substantially built. The sedan seats seven persons and the coupe four persons in delightful comfort.

The upholstery is of silk velour and the interior fittings in dull silver finish. The windows are instantly adjusted to meet your desire. These bodies are free from mouldings and exposed outside hinges that mar.

The Chandler limousine, seating five passengers in the enclosed compartment, is of striking appeal to those desiring a chauffeur driven car.

Stability and Responsibility Back of the Chandler

STANDING back of the Chandler car, and responsible for its honest quality, is one of the notably strong organizations of the motor car industry. An organization whose purpose has always been to build a car that shall live and multiply its friendships.

You will find an uncommon degree of satisfaction in the ownership of a Chandler car.

THE FUTURE FOR FRANCE AND GERMANY.

Keynes, in an article which THE TRIBUNE published, says there are three pressures in France and three factors influencing the conduct of the French towards the Germans. One is military, expressed by Foch, which asks for the bank of the Rhine. One is economic, which asks for the contraction of German industrial life and the restriction of her access to natural resources. The third is political and seeks to get what French sentiment, in the populace and in the chamber of deputies, demands in punishment of Germany.

We believe it is true, of a great part of France, that the French think the present to be a lull and not a peace. They have very little reason to think that their relations with Germany now will be different than they have been for centuries. They probably have no illusions. There is a new German government and it is not now royalist or militaristic, but there is no assurance that it will endure long and there is no assurance that the German people themselves, regardless of their form of government, whether it is monarchical or republican, will not want a war of revenge against France.

Americans have had no knowledge of wars which seemed to be in the blood and breed. When the United States has fought it always has been able to make a peace which promised to heal the wounds. Our wars with Great Britain did not leave us with the feeling that other wars with Great Britain were inevitable. We did not leave the southern states with an irredenta. They had a lost cause and they were bitter, but we knew that the war of the rebellion was done. We fought Spain, but we do not have to fight Spain again.

We have fought wars and have closed the case. The French and the Germans fight and a peace is a lull between wars. The Germans are numerically stronger and they multiply more rapidly than the French. The French have lost their great ally, Russia. Great Britain's policy with regard to continental Europe may change within ten or twenty years. The French can remember when the British were with Bismarck against Napoleon III. They were with the French against Wilhelm II. The entente may live, but the French cannot count on it.

They count on only one probability and count on it as a virtual certainty—that Germany will recover and when she does recover will be a danger to France. That is why Foch wants a defendable frontier on the Rhine and that is why French military leaders and economists believe that safety lies in keeping Germany from regaining full industrial strength.

We say this is bad for the well being of the world, but we are not living next door to a strong and bitter enemy which has a lost cause and lost territory. France would feel safe if Germany were a collection of detached agricultural states. It needs an industrial state to make war.

If we ask the French not to press for military advantages against the Germans, but to make it possible for Germany to return to sane and sound life, the French may ask us what guaranty we are willing to give that Germany, with recovered strength, will not attack.

Probably if the United States and Great Britain would form the alliance with France which was proposed and would agree to go to her aid instantly if Germany attacked, the French would modify their demands upon Germany, not relinquishing the claims for restitution, but relinquishing the policies which aim to keep Germany weak.

Americans are not willing to give such a pledge. We doubt that it could be effectively kept. Our navy could be used instantly, but it would not be of a service in keeping the Germans out of Paris and we do not believe we could put an army in France. We have none to put there and we doubt that we could raise one to fight a war in France.

That being the case, the French can tell us that our advice is interesting, but hardly worth considering. France wants to know what the world will do for her if she lets up on Germany. We may say that she is only making a bad situation worse and is not giving the German moderates, republicans, and anti-militarists a chance to create a society which does not want war. France may say that the situation could not be worse except as Germany is stronger.

France has in mind the day to come when the German gray columns will be on the march again towards the French frontier or across it. And we do not know what to say to that. Their wars are not conclusive as ours have been. They fight one war and rest to fight another, and there is nothing in the prospects of Europe which denies the infallibility of its past.

TO GUARD THE HIGHWAYS.

A paragraph in the summary of the day's progress of legislation at Springfield refers to the state police bill with the remark that enough votes have been pledged to warrant forecast that the senate will pass it. We hope there is no implication there that the house will not complete the good work or the governor will not sign it.

A state police system is a logical and essential development of the modern state. It is necessary to the protection of life and property. With the extension of good roads and the facility for escape from crime which they offer through the automobile, a state police trained and responsible for the protection of rural districts is essential. Without it great areas will be at the mercy of any criminal who can steal an automobile and wield a revolver.

Opposition to such a necessity on the ground that it will be used to coerce labor is absurd. It will not be used against any individual or group who keep within the law. In the rare event of rioting, whether inspired by strike situations, race clashes, or any of the influences which excite mobs, the danger of an unjust use of state police is no greater than the danger of an unjust use of state militia. But all arguments on such issues are likely to be presented merely to confuse the situation.

What is needed is a trained, equipped, and mobile force of policemen to patrol and guard the highways, protect the life and property of the isolated farmer and the small community, and to safeguard the traveler. It is difficult to understand how a thoughtful and conscientious legislator can vote against such a plan.

MORONS.

Judge Devid recently tried to find out what a moron is. He called in various experts and according to the newspaper reports he discovered that a moron may have an adult intellect for the ordinary commerce of life but a moral intellect of six or seven years. The judge was evidently no further along when the questioning was over than when it began.

Journalistically, we know what a moron is. He is any person whose acts are irregular, particularly with regard to sex.

We also know that a moron, when cases against women are involved, is what ten years ago was plainly known as a vicious character, a depraved man, or one liable to moments of depravity. He is perfectly conscious of his viciousness.

He knows precisely what evil is. He is conscious of moral guilt—even a child can be conscious of that—is conscious of taking chances with punishment, is conscious of doing injury to others, and for the gratification he seeks does not care.

Whatever intricacies and complexities involve the subject for the psychopath, none of them involve it for the police and for justice. If we permit these involutions to control we lose control in turn of the crime. The moron of the psychopathic hospitals and the newspaper headlines is a bad man. He generally is known to his associates and in his neighborhood because his impulse is to reveal himself. The first law of his nature is to reveal himself by talking. He can be gathered in by the police and he can be treated by law as a dangerous, vicious character.

Women now are full citizens. They have been given citizenship because they told men for years that without suffrage they were not fully protected. They must have a direct voice in the making and administration of laws or the best of men would not do them justice.

Now they have what they asked for their own protection and development. The crimes of the moron are crimes against women. When the organizations of women use their new power for their own protection they can attend to the case of the moron.

FOR A BARGAINING TARIFF.

Now come the advocates of a high tariff to protect the American production of commodities included in schedule B of the tariff law applying to earths, pottery, chinaware, glassware, etc. They complain that imports of pottery from England, pumice stone from Italy, mica from India, glass from central Europe, etc., are ruining American factories.

Perhaps that is true, just as similar appeals for protection on commodities listed in schedules A, C, D, and the others may be true. But there is something to be considered in connection with these tariff schedules besides the protection of all the little infant industries in the United States. The protection of an infant industry is not a humanitarian proposition such as the protection of a real infant might be. It is a cold blooded matter of economic advisability.

Steel was once an infant industry in this country. It was protected and has grown to be the gigantic business which it is today. But that growth has been due to natural advantages as well as artificial protection by tariff barriers. We had the coal and iron within easy access to make steel successfully. We had the ability to combine them scientifically and develop them efficiently. All this brought about the success of the steel industry and justified its early protection.

But no amount of tariff against silk worms or mulberry trees would be likely to develop a raw silk industry in the United States. Our country is not adapted to silk growing. It is equally possible that we are not adapted to successful making of fine chinaware. British and some continental clays are capable of a refinement at small expense which produces a better article than any which we have been able to develop with profit.

For such reasons it might be proper for the framers of a new tariff law to extend protection to those industries to which our resources are adapted, and not seek to bar all importations from all countries in the hope that some day America may be able to supply her own demands. With a tariff law built on such lines, allowing Europe to sell to us those things which Europe is best adapted to produce, and with our production stimulated along the lines of our own best resources, our trade can expand without loss of tariff revenue, and other nations can prosper sufficiently to buy our products and pay their debts to us.

Editorial of the Day

CURFEW REVIVED IN CHICAGO.

[Des Moines Capital.]

The Chicago city council decided by unanimous vote last Friday to revive the old curfew law. Hereafter Chicago children who are not accompanied by their parents or other adults must not be on the streets between 10 p. m. and 6 a. m.

"Children who violate the ordinance will be treated as juvenile delinquents after the first warning. Parents or guardians who permit violation of the curfew ordinance may be fined from $5 to $100 for each offense.

Contrary to popular opinion, the curfew law is not a relic of ancient days. It has not, and never will, outlive its usefulness. Parental knowledge of what children are doing is just as vital today as it was a hundred years ago. As a matter of fact, it is even more important today, because there are more things, both good and bad, for children to do.

Society has a right to expect parents to be responsible for their children between 10 o'clock at night and 6 o'clock in the morning. A curfew law is an excellent way to safeguard the morals of children. It is society's way of making up for the shortcomings of some parents.

It may be assumed that most parents do not need the assistance of a curfew law. In such families the law does not mean any hardship. So far as other parents are concerned, there is no need of tempering the law to meet criticism.

THE PERFECT HOUR.

From pulpits of dead leaves, again
The woodland flowers of May do preach
Their starry sermons, couched in speech
That lifts the weary souls of men
To heights the parson fails to reach.

So long I listened where they taught,
I seemed to be a worshiper
Where Beauty and her vestals were,
While incense of clear-visioned thought
Outsoared the breath of nard and myrrh.

Imperfect hour it was, and not Without a benediction sweet—
A little lamp unto the feet,
When nights are dark, and ways forgot,
And Hope's a plodder through the sleet.

A LETTER TO B. L. T.

Dear Judge: I seldom dream, and but twice in my life have I dreamed of music. The dreams of music were raptures of sound, so beautifully and technically perfect that I tried to follow, in order once more to sense the perfection of a vast orchestration that intoxicated. But repetition was denied, and I awoke. You, who loved music, must now know how feeble our own efforts to create music on this earth shall always be. Appreciation—and even more, the creation—of music is a God-quality in man, is it not? All striving for artistic expression, in its myriad phases, must also be a God-quality! I seem to hear you say, "Go on—and seek yet further."

There are those who would say, with a sneer, that a dream of music is Freudian in analysis. Be it so, should we turn away from sex? Another mystery of sex, complicated and inextricably interwoven with life and of tremendous dominating influence. Nature, the handmaiden, occupies herself serenely with two problems, nutrition and reproduction, and she utilizes music and color to further her projects. We view Nature's work with pride, joy, and complacency, in plants and animals, but prudishly turn away from any comparative discussion that would include the wonder-animal, man. And here is where the culture of the French, their civilization, passes ours in the applause of beauty and the search for its reason.

If Brahms' music gave you pleasure when you were here, what greater happiness must now be yours in knowing music which would rend mortal senses with the first notes! This alone would repay for what you left with your earth shell. Then there must surely be association with great intellects that have preceded you. Such intellects cannot have perished—nothing perishes, but only changes form—and let us think that the activating quality of great minds which have eluded us has become part and parcel of that directing thing we call Fate. Fate is never understood by mortal minds. It serves to balance and stabilize, therefore its direction is assumed by those who, when they lived among us, strove to explain the mastery of their minds by some expression of beauty. Thy ANONYMA (we learned about flappers from her) interviewed Gee Kay Chesterton while he was imbibing local culture here. The sparkle of his intellect charmed her, but the psychology of his tweeds enchanted her. His clothes were loosely draped and notably wrinkled. The trousers were baggy at the knees.

Anonyma's first impression was that he was violating the canons of sartorial taste. Then came enlightenment. The author was an exemplar of the British art of easy indifference to clothes. Each loose fold was essential to the picture. Each wrinkle belonged.

In America, where it pays to advertise, we do it differently. Our trousers must have a razor edge crease, the coat sleeves must harmonize, and the lapels must lay back like the ears of a mad bulldog. The picture is completed when, from the left breast pocket, there burgeons the silk handkerchief with the snappy border, which matches the tie, which matches the sox.

There is an Aristocracy of Negligence. If we were retaining a literary secretary our choice would be the young man whose trousers were baggy at the knees.

Sir: One never can tell what the dear lads will say next, can one? Splendid fellows, really charming—but what queer ideas they have! I think the chap who told me that "in 1798 Wordsworth and Coleridge wrote a book together and left for Germany," was a bit critical. And let Einstein fathom this one: "'A Tale of Two Cities' is called a novel of the picturesque because it was written about a time of intense financial heresies." Yet there is an element of truth in the remark of the lad who quoted from "As You Like It," "And then the lover, with a wowful ballad made to his mistress' eyebrows," and how often "the sextet is the last six lines of a Plutarchan sonnet"! I think the chief tells the best one of them all: "Name a didactic poem."—"Silas Marner."—"What?!" "No! I don't mean that. The Ancient Marner." One loves them for it, however. H. G. R.

LESSONS FROM PATAGONIA.

RECENTLY a correspondent asked me about a large spot in the dark part of one of his eyes. I was compelled to tell him that I knew nothing about it, but added that so far as I knew, it was a matter of no consequence. A friend called to my attention certain statements about eyes found in Hudson's "Idle Days in Patagonia."

Hudson says: "I have found curiously marked and spotted eyes not uncommon; in some instances the spots being so black, round and large as to produce the appearance of eyes with clusters of pupils on them. I have known one person with large brown spots on light blue-gray eyes, whose children all inherited the peculiarity. Also another with reddish hazel irides thickly marked with fine characters resembling Greek letters. This person was an Argentinian of Spanish blood and was called by his neighbors "written eyes."

He also tells of a Gauchos of the pampas, who was a tall fellow with thick eyebrows and a great length of crow-black beard. One of his eyes was black and the other a dark blue.

Hudson also writes of the relative acuteness of vision of civilized men and savages. Most of us accept as a fact that the Indians have incomparably better vision than any civilized white man. With this opinion Hudson does not agree. He spent many years in the wilds in close contact with wild people and principally plains people. He is convinced that their vision is no better than ours; that the human eye is not deteriorating as the result of exposure to artificial lights and to inharmonious colors; that the savage looking across a plain can recognize a certain dark spot as a buffalo. The white man not accustomed to the plains saw the same spot, but to him it was only a dark spot of no significance. The Indian had learned by experience that a spot of that size, of that appearance and location was a buffalo.

Though he saw no more of the features of the buffalo than the white man did, his experience had trained him to properly interpret what he saw. Hudson said that had the savage been set to find a reversed S in a printed page he would have fallen down on the job, while a printer with no ability to pick out a buffalo on the horizon would have seen the reversed S when he first glanced at the page.

Hudson has another observation relating to eyes. An Englishman wearing glasses was talking to a middle aged Patagonian. The latter said:

"Why do you wear those glasses straddled across your nose? You say you see better, but that is a delusion. No man could believe such a thing."

The Patagonian was persuaded to try the glasses. They happened to fit him. "Angel of Heaven," he asked, "what is this I see?" His vision had grown dim so gradually that he had not recognized the change.

When by the aid of glasses he saw the world as he had seen it when he was younger he was astounded. We never think of the debt we middle aged and old people owe to those who properly fit glasses. Were it not for their services we would have to change our work and lessen our efficiency just at the period of life when our training should prove most valuable. It takes a Patagonian wild man to show us our debt.

ABOUT SOFT TEETH.

Mrs. O. W. Writes: "A young man of 23 has very soft teeth. He takes the best of care of them and consults a dentist when necessary. He has decayed spots at the base of his teeth, a yellow spot and then a cavity. Is there any diet or mode of living that would help this trouble?"

REPLY.

Let him continue the policy of brushing and cleaning his teeth and having a dentist work on them when needed. Above all, let him clean his teeth after each meal with dental floss and scrub them at night with a soft cloth wrapped around the finger. A sour mouth or tooth wash will be advantageous. He should eat acid fruits and vegetables and meats cooked with acid. Have him look in the library for Pickerill's book on care of the teeth. He might read with advantage the chapter on the hard yellow teeth of certain Australians.

YOU NEED MORE SLEEP.

W. M. B. writes: "I am 22 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches tall, and weigh 140 pounds. I am and have been for the last six months working evenings and attending school, also averaging only six hours' sleep. My friends say I am failing in health, which I am inclined to doubt. I expect to continue this for four months to come. Am I getting enough sleep to do so? Occasionally my eyes feel strained. If I get glasses to relieve me would same weaken my eyes, making necessary the use of glasses in the future?"

REPLY.

1. You need eight hours' sleep. If you get only six you will have to pay for robbing yourself at some time in your life. The sins against the laws of hygiene committed in youth unfortunately are not paid for until after the years of maximum vigor. During the years of maximum vigor one's reserve power is so great that the threshold of symptoms is not often passed.

2. If you start wearing glasses it is probable you will have to continue. However, that does not mean you should delay putting on glasses if you suffer from eyestrain.

CAUSES ARE VARIOUS.

Inquisitive writes: "Will you tell me why the pupils in the eyes vary so much in size? Some are so very large, while others are extremely small. Has it anything to do with the state of one's health?"

REPLY.

One factor is the amount of light. The iris is an adjustable curtain arranged for the purpose of shutting out excess light. When more is needed the pupil enlarges; when less it contracts. Another is the amount of light required by the back of the eye for purposes of sight. Some eyes require more, some less. There are certain drugs which affect the size of the pupil—belladonna, morphine. People of certain temperaments have large pupils. Nervous, blushing, mobile faced people are apt to show large pupils. Albinos are apt to have very small pupils. Certain brain and cord diseases manifest themselves by large pupils, small pupils, unequal pupils, and other pupil peculiarities. Certain eye diseases cause large pupil, small pupil, fixed pupil, uneven pupil, irregular pupil.

RESULTS ARE CONTRADICTORY.

A Reader writes: "1. What effect has iodine on a small hard goiter? I often use it, but it does not seem to help any. Would you advise an operation. 2. What is wrong with one's system when they sprain themselves so easily? I have a sprain constantly somewhere — wrists, joints, or some place."

REPLY.

1. Opinions of physicians are not the same as to the effect of iodine on goiter. Some physicians have seen small doses of iodine cure some goiters. Some have seen goiters made worse by taking iodine. Whether a goiter should be operated on depends on the amount of thyroid poisoning in the given case.

2. It is possible the joints are not very secure, do not fit well and the binding ligaments are not of good quality. The work one does may tend to cause sprains.

WON'T HARM YOUR EYES.

A Reader writes: "Is it injurious to the eyes for a person who has not worn glasses to wear sun glasses at the beach?"

REPLY.

No.

ILLINOIS STATE MILITIA.

Chicago, April 26.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—What is the status of the Illinois state militia at the present time? Does all of this organization have regular encampments or does it get together in emergencies only? Are its line officers appointed by the governor without a special examination? F. W.

Properly speaking, there is no state militia at the present time. The national guard is now under the direct control of the war department and as rapidly as units are formed they are being federalized, the officers and men being paid by the federal government for all drills, encampments, and active duty. All of the units of the national guard of Illinois that have been federalized will have fifteen day encampments this summer. The Chicago infantry regiments will go to Camp Logan, just north of Zion City. The artillery goes to Sparta, Wis. The cavalry and certain downstate units go to Camp Lincoln at Springfield. All these encampments will be under strict federal supervision and officers and men who attend them will be paid by the federal government. In addition, there will be a special training camp for officers, noncommissioned officers, and specially selected enlisted men at Camp Logan June 20 to 23. Officers and men who attend this camp will also be paid by the federal government. S.

Line officers of the national guard units are appointed by the governor, where the appointments are original. He is restricted in his choice by federal regulations and before federal recognition is given an officer he must meet with certain requirements as to age, experience, etc. Although no definite order has been issued, it is understood that after a certain period all officers will be compelled to stand a federal examination as to their qualifications. After this examination is held all appointments will be absolutely under the control of the war department.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

ELATED AT THE SUIT TO SAVE CITY FUNDS.

Chicago, April 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I am elated at your suit to try to save the taxpayers' money, now going into experts' fees. Try to get a non-partisan nonpolitical audit company on the books.

Gee! There would be something doing, ah? DAILY READER.

MONEY.

Algona, Ia., April 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—E. S. Eaton, in the Voice of the People in Saturday's TRIBUNE, declares himself to be a "radical" and challenges any one to prove that "capitalism is not the force that corrupts politicians and makes mockery of government." Does he infer that our government is corrupt? Most government, local, state, and national, is not corrupt but is honest and clean, truly representative of the people. True there are notorious exceptions such as you Chicagoans are now experiencing. Mr. Eaton has said that "commercialism" is the thing that blights nations and human happiness. Just what is meant by "commercialism" is hard to say, but if Mr. Eaton has the idea that the country can get along without industry, manufacturing, commerce, and finance he had better jump off from the slippery perch of Utopian idealism and set his feet on mother earth.

The best answer I have ever heard to the socialistic abuse of capital was made by Dr. Frank Crane in Forbes' Magazine. Part of it is as follows:

"I get pretty tired of hearing people abuse money. For money is not bad, or good; it is not immoral, it is unmoral. It has no more guilt or goodness than a stick of wood. It is simply the condensed power of the race. We store hay in barns, wine in casks, apples in bins and merchandise in warehouses. Even so we store work in money. Money is concentrated work; work in a handy and negotiable form. The conflict between capital (money) and labor is ridiculous, because money is labor. It was made by labor and its only value is to be turned into labor again. The wage system is the squarest ever conceived. There are only two known ways to get another to work for you. One is with a club, the other by money." P. W.

THE "INSULT" OF GERMANY'S APPEAL.

Chicago, April 23.—[Editor of the Tribune.]—Reading the daily papers for news of the reparations negotiations and reading the editorial comment on the whole question of reparations, one wonders, at times, just which side we were really on during the recent war. There is something almost ludicrous about this last bit of German diplomacy—an appeal to the only nation with which she is still technically at war to act as arbiter between her and the nations with which she is at peace. It may be gratifying to some as a recognition of our sincere altruism, but to me it is a burning insult, the more aggravating because it is so well merited.

When I realize how well merited, I am all but ashamed of my nationality, as I was in 1918 when I found myself in a German prison and awoke to a realization that I was looked upon, not as an enemy, but as one of a nation which was to stand between Germany and just retribution at the hands of the allies.

You say our government believes that the world cannot be well with so large an industrial part of it as Germany sick. Is France, then, of such small importance in the economic scheme that her industries can better be taxed to death to pay for the destruction her ancient enemy has wrought?

You say our government believes that the reparations paid by Germany should relate to their responsibility for beginning the war, to damage they did in the war, and to the just demands of devastated nations for restitution and compensation. Do you seriously believe—does our government seriously believe—that payment by Germany of every farthing demanded by the allies could begin to make amends for these things?

But I forget. Neither you nor the heads of our government were behind the German lines during those last weeks of the war, when Huns and French alike were being forced to flee before the cleansing fire of allied guns. You haven't seen the hordes of white-haired men and women and half-starved children dragging their weary feet along the muddy roads east of Cambrai and Bapaume; you haven't seen a gruesome swine in German uniform drive ahead through as they scatter like leaves before the wind; and you haven't dragged your own weary feet eighteen long miles behind a German ammunition wagon while its occupants jeered at your misery. WALTER R. AVERY.

FOLEY OF THE BROTHERHOOD IS BACK.

Chicago, April 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Well, well; it seems as though I have stepped on the feelings of quite a few folks, but I have read one or two contribs' letters backing me up. I wish to say to "I. M. A. Draftsman" (4-20-21) to please reread my letter of the 18th, as he has misconstrued it, and get us all wrong.

Brothers C. D. Taylor (4-19-21) and Tommy Tucker (4-20-21) have expressed my sentiments exactly. Mr. F. M. Howe, from that nice little village of Gary, also puts in a "load," and starts "soaping off."

Mr. Howe, let me call your attention to any standard book of rules. Read the duties of a passenger conductor and freight conductor. They clearly define his responsibility. After reading these read the duties of an engineman. This will show you where, except for violation of rules or law and the possibility of danger to his train, he is under the direction of the conductor. I still maintain the conductor is the responsible person on a train.

You say that any one can become a passenger conductor. Sure—if any one provided they go through the mill. However, you still see plenty of old timers who still are brakemen. You say you have been a conductor. What "peaving" did you conduct on, and what was the matter with "the pension job after several years' hard work on a freight train?" Put your hat back on, Mr. Howe; we're coming to a stock close.

In conclusion—"Stingers, where are you"; are we going to let all these folks tie up our railroads, that have managed to limp along thus far?

ON THE MILKMEN'S DEMANDS.

Chicago, April 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Regarding the demand of the milkmen for six day's work with seven day's pay, at a time like the present, when there are hundreds out of work who would be willing to give seven days' work for six days' pay, their demand seems uncalled for to say the least. If all the housewives would stop taking milk from the wagon, go to the store to buy what they need, some of these men would very soon be looking for other jobs, and the ones who were retained would be willing to work for the good salary they are receiving. Incidentally, the housewife would be money ahead. Considering the fact that they receive $41 a week and commission, do not need any training nor particular amount of intelligence, their demands are a joke, but a joke for which the good natured (?) public will eventually have to pay. The solution lies with the housewife.

FREE RAIL RATES VS. FREE CANAL TOLLS.

Chicago, April 27.—(Editor of The Tribune.)—Referring to your editorial regarding "Free Tolls Through the Panama Canal to American Shipping," I believe that the United States is building quite a stretch of railroad in Alaska. I am wondering if some operating company will not be wanting free use of the rails of this road, and if so just what would be the difference between giving them that right and giving free tolls through the canal?

The advocates of the free toll deal do not pretend that the consuming public get the slightest benefit from it, or that merchandise shipped through the canal will be sold a cent cheaper in consequence of free tolls. It is also well known that there is a constant fight with the interstate commerce commission regarding the "long and short haul" rates in consequence of the railroads demanding rates for Pacific coast points that will allow them to deliver freights as cheaply as the ocean lines can with regular tolls paid. How will it be when tolls are made free, as is now contemplated by the senate? L. S.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THE BANKS O' DOON.
By Robert Burns.

Ye banks and braes o' bonnie Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair?
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae weary, fu' o' care!
Thou'lt break my heart, thou warbling bird,
That wantons thro' the flowering thorn;
Thou minds me o' departed joys,
Departed—never to return!

Aft hae I rov'd by bonnie Doon
To see the rose and woodbine twine;
And ilka bird sang o' its luve,
And fondly sae did I o' mine.
Wi' lightsome heart I pu'd a rose,
Fu' sweet upon its thorny tree;
And my fause luver stole my rose,
But, ah! he left the thorn wi' me.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago bookstore were:

FICTION.

"Main Street" [Harcourt, Brace & Co.], by Sinclair Lewis.
"The Brimming Cup" [Harcourt, Brace & Co.], by Dorothy Canfield.
"Moon Calf", [Knopf], by Floyd Dell.
"The Narrow House" [Boni & Liveright], by Evelyn Scott.
"Sister Sue" [Houghton Mifflin], by Eleanor H. Porter.
"A Chair on the Boulevard" [Dutton], by Leonard Merrick.

NONFICTION.

"The Peace Negotiations" [Houghton Mifflin], by Robert Lansing.
"The Mirrors of Downing Street" [Putnam], by the Gentleman with a Duster.
"Mayfair to Moscow" [Boni & Liveright], by Clare Sheridan.

Last week's six best circulators in the public library were:
"Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis.
"The Growth of the Soil," by Knut Hamsun.
"Sisters-in-Law," by Gertrude Atherton.
"The Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"The Peace Negotiations," by Robert Lansing.
"New Jerusalem," by G. K. Chesterton.

"THINGS That Have Interested Me" is the latest book to bear the signature of Arnold Bennett. It is obviously written with a pair of scissors and a pot of paste. Mr. Bennett, like many of our—and England's—successful writers, evidently can't bear the thought of having his precious flowers scattered through ephemeral magazines or papers. With a careless hand he sprinkles them over the journals of his own—and our—country, but though his fingers be gay with the spring, though he flutter roseleaves in the warmly welcoming air, he goes around after the performance and gathers up his rosebuds and presses them in a book. Much of "Things That Have Interested Me" has just that quality of pressed flowers—the things may have interested Mr. Bennett and they even have interested you and me when they were written, but they were merely casual observations, a journalist's pencilings, and they are, now, something embalmed. They are short, about everything in the world, the theater, art, buses in busy London streets, the tube, prohibition, ladies' smoking, housekeeping, and, now and then, about books.

R. K. wants to know what "The Twelve" is or was. It was the Marseillaise of the Russian revolution. Alexander Blok, the author, is one of the outstanding figures in contemperary Slavic letters. It is a poem which depicts the progress of twelve revolutionists through the bitterly cold city of Petrograd, and ends mystically with the idea of Christ and the twelve apostles. Already it has had a sale of two million copies in Russia. It has been translated into five languages, and it is available in our United States as a pamphlet published by B. W. Huebsch. Always a pleasure to answer questions.

On Tuesday Edgar Guest's new book of poetry comes off the presses. "When a Day Is Done" it is called. There will be 40,000 in the first printing, a most impressive number when you realize that the first printing of a novel varies from three to ten thousand.

In an English rare book catalog there is listed "Chesterton, G. K., 1sts, 'A Shilling for My Thoughts,' shabby, 3s."

Poe and Emerson may now be "known." Two new additions to the excellent series published by Bobbs Merrill are "Emerson, How to Know Him," by Samuel McChord Crothers, and "Poe, How to Know Him," by C. Alphonso Smith, who was the biographer of O. Henry. Mr. Crothers' delightful essays are his label.

Edward Bernstein's "My Years of Exile" on a bookshelf brought this pungent bit of information from a man who speaks with more than a blustering authority. "Who is Edward Bernstein?" I asked from the abyss of my ignorance. "Don't you remember?" (he flattered me) "he's that German Social Democrat who says he can prove that Lenin took at least 50,000 marks from the German imperial government. He has a subcommittee of the reichstag now investigating it, and he says he is not going to let it drop or be hushed up. He thinks that the international socialists ought to define clearly how much opportunism a socialist may be guilty of."

Inspired by the business prowess of the book salesman who wrote a letter to all the McCarthys in the directory suggesting that they buy "The McCarthys in America," a beautiful and no less brilliant young woman suggested that we look up all the men who did the right thing and suggest that they buy Sir Harry Johnston's new novel.

Samuel Merwin's "In Red and Gold" is a collection of interesting facts about China's art and literature spoiled by a bad story. Mr. Merwin has evidently been fascinated by ancient China and its modern antithesis. When he talks about facts he is interesting, but when he tries to weave a story into them he is dull. The illustrations are by C. LeRoy Baldridge, who was official cartoonist for the Stars and Stripes (the official A. E. F. newspaper, said she sarcastically, realizing that we have, too many of us, forgotten) and whose book, "I Was There" was the one vivid record which many soldiers have of their jaunt overseas.

Arthur Mason, author of "The Flying Bo'sun," tells a smuggling story that is better than any in a story book. He used to know a prosperous smuggler on the Pacific coast a number of years ago who dealt in Chinamen. He brought them in, that was certain. But for a long time his professional secret eluded revenue officers. When they boarded him they never found any one but the crew. His trick was this: He had some curious collars made, and at the approach of the revenue men he dropped his Chinamen overboard in these, securely attached by a line. When all was clear he fished them up again, as good as new.

"Shakespeare's Lost Years in London, 1586-1592," is the self-explanatory title of a volume of interest to scholars of Shakespeare. It is written by Arthur Acheson, and the edition is limited to 550 copies for England and America. Mr. Acheson's previous contributions to Shakespeareana are rivaled by this volume.

"What David Did," by Helen S. Woodruff, is the silliest, twaddliest, sloppiest, most muddled sentimentality that I have ever read. With which pleasant introduction. . . . .

There was a literary romance in that prosaic looking map on the editorial page the other day—the one which showed the Red river and the lands which were given to the state of Oklahoma by the Supreme court. A book written a century ago influenced the decision. The memoirs of John Quincy Adams, who was secretary of state in 1819, say that he insisted that the southern bank of the Red river was the boundary line of the United States. Texas claimed that the middle of the river was the boundary, and therefore the boundary of the two states. Oklahoma cited John Quincy Adams' Memoirs, and won two hundred million dollars' worth of oil lands.

Who first said that whenever a new book was published he read an old one? It was Augustine Birrell, whose essays were once read—when they were new! He does not deserve the cruelty of the fate which he imposed upon new books, however. Get out his "Res Judicatae" or "Obiter Dicta." They'll give you a calmly pleasant evening.

The Macmillan company has published the "Collected Plays" of Stephen Phillips, with a short but intent preface by Stephen Phillips Jr., the first paragraph of which is, "I remember my father as a big man with a beautiful but rather sullen face and eyes full of strange, sad melancholy, as if the soul were always dreaming and yearning, and reaching for heights unattainable. He had about him a presence of mystery and power." Stephen Phillips is another rose of yesteryear, pressed in the memory of a few who loved him, but merely withered into crackling gray dust in the minds of most of his readers.

Leopold Auer, now 75 years old, still a great master, has written down his theory of teaching the violin. "Violin Playing as I Teach It," the book is called. It needs no explanatory ululas.

"The Diary of a Journalist," by Sir Henry Lucy, is so much more than its title that the title is a complete misnomer. It is neither a diary, nor is the author—in this book—a journalist. It is a delightful series of semi-autobiographical memories of days that many of us never knew, but that Sir Henry Lucy revivifies for us and gives the verve of a novel.

"How the Mind Cures" is by Dr. George F. Butler, medical director of the North Shore Health resort at Winnetka, and well known among Chicago maladees. It contains such nonmedical advice as how to avoid worry, how to sleep, how to develop confidence, how to determine your proper sphere of activity, and opens with the admonition, "If you are well, read this book and remain so. If you are ill, read this book and consult a good doctor."

Count Witte's Memoirs, which have finally appeared—in England and America in translation—created much disturbance in his lifetime. The czar tried repeatedly to have them stolen and destroyed. The book was written abroad, for in Petrograd the manuscript would not have been safe for a moment. Countess Witte deposited the manuscript in a bank in Paris in her name, and shortly before her husband's death in 1915 had it transferred to Bayonne under another name. Her fears were not ungrounded, for as soon as the count died his study was sealed and his papers seized. When the authorities failed to find the memoirs, an attaché of the Russian embassy in Paris secretly searched the countess' villa for it. Count Witte certainly does what, in our colorful parlance, is called spilling the beans. The memoirs of Alexander Iswolsky, former foreign minister of the late czar, have also just been published.

AT the SIGN of the WORLD'S END
by G. K. Chesterton

DIPLOMACY AND DIXIE.

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

HISTORY is an eternal tangle of cross-purposes; and we could not take a clearer case, or rather a more complicated case, of such a tangle, than the facts lying behind a political parallel recently mentioned by many politicians. I mean the parallel between the movement for Irish independence and the attempted secession of the Southern Confederacy in America.

Superficially, any one might say that the comparison is natural enough; and that there is much in common between the quarrel of the north and south in Ireland and the quarrel of the north and south in America. In both cases the south was on the whole agricultural, the north on the whole industrial. True, the comparison magnifies the proportions of Belfast. To make it fit we must suppose the whole federal system concentrated in Pittsburgh. In both the side that was more successful was felt by many to be less attractive. In both the same political terms were used, such as the term "union" and "unionism."

An ordinary Englishman comes to America, knowing these main lines of American history, and knowing that the American knows the similar main lines of Irish history. He knows that there are strong champions of Ireland in America; possibly he also knows that there are genuine champions of England in America. By every possible historical analogy, he would naturally expect to find the pro-Irish in the south and the pro-English in the north.

As a matter of fact, he finds almost exactly the opposite. He finds Boston governed by Irishmen, and Nashville containing people more pro-English than Englishmen. He finds Virginians not only of British blood, like George Washington, but of British convictions almost worthy of George the Third.

But I do not say this, as will be seen in a moment, as a criticism of the comparative Toryism of the south. I say it as a criticism of the superlative stupidity of English propaganda. In a recent article I remarked on the need for a new sort of English propaganda; a propaganda that should be really English, and have some remote reference to England.

Now if it were a matter of making foreigners feel the real humors and humanities of England, there are no Americans so able or willing to do it as the Americans of the southern states. As I have already hinted, some of them are loyal to the English humanities, but they think it their duty to defend even the English inhumanities.

New England is turning into New Ireland. But Old England can still be faintly traced in Old Dixie. It contains some of the best things that England herself has had, and therefore, of course, the things that England herself has lost, or is trying to lose.

An Unfortunate Defense of Imperialism.

BUT above all, as I have said, there are people in these places whose historic memories and family traditions really hold them to us, not by alliance but by affection. Indeed, they have the affection in spite of the alliance. They love us in spite of our compliments and courtesies and hands across the sea; all our ambassadorial salutations and speeches cannot kill their love. They manage even to respect us in spite of the shady stock brokers we send them as English envoys, or the "efficient" men, who are sent out to be tactful with foreigners because they have been too tactless with trades unionists.

This type of traditional American, north or south, really has some traditions connecting him with England; and though he is now in a small minority, I cannot imagine why England should wish to make it smaller. England once sympathized with the south. The south still sympathizes with England. It would seem that the south, or some elements in the south, had rather the advantage of us in political firmness and fidelity; but it does not follow that that fidelity will stand every shock.

And at this moment, and in this matter, of all things in the world, our political propagandists must try to bolster British imperialism up, by kicking southern secession when it is down. The English politicians eagerly point out that we shall be justified in crushing Ireland, exactly as Sumner and Stevens crushed the most English part of America.

It does not seem to occur to them that this comparison between the unionist triumph in America and a unionist triumph in Britain is rather hard upon our particular sympathizers, who did not triumph. When England exults in Lincoln's victory over his foes, she is exulting in his victory over her own friends. If her diplomacy continues as delicate and chivalrous as it is at present, they may soon be her only friends. England will be defending herself at the expense of her only defenders.

But, however this may be, it is as well to bear witness to some of the elements of my own experience; and I can answer for it, at least, that there are some people in the south who will not be pleased at being swept into the rubbish heap of history as rebels and ruffians; and who will not, I regret to say, by any means enjoy even being classed with Fenians and Sinn Feiners.

Some Things Politicians Do Not Understand.

NOW touching the actual comparison between the conquest of the Confederacy and the conquest of Ireland, there are, of course, a good many things to be said which politicians cannot be expected to understand. Strange to say, it is not certain that a lost cause was never worth winning; and it would be easy to argue that the world lost very much indeed when that particular cause was lost. These are not days in which it is exactly obvious that an agricultural society was more dangerous than an industrial one. And even southern slavery had this great moral merit, that it was decadent; and has this great historic advantage, that it is dead.

Northern slavery, industrial slavery, or what is called wage slavery, is not decaying but increasing; and the end of it is not yet. It still remains a question whether the bones of the brave men scattered in the wilderness may not have reason to rise from their graves, to point at the final establishment of the servile state.

But in any case, it would be well for us to realize that the reproach of resembling the Confederacy does not ring in all ears as an unanswerable condemnation. It is scarcely a self-evident or sufficient argument, to some hearers, even to prove that the English are as delicate and philanthropic as Sherman, still less that the Irish are as criminal and lawless as Lee.

Nor will it soothe every single soul on the American continent to say that the English victory in Ireland will be followed by a reconstruction, like the reconstruction exhibited in the film called "The Birth of a Nation." And, indeed, there is a further inference from that fine panorama of the exploits of the Ku-Klux Klan. It would be easy, as I say, to turn the argument entirely in favor of the Confederacy. It would be easy to draw the moral, not that the southern Irish are as wrong as the southern states, but that the southern states were as right as the southern Irish. But upon the whole, I do not incline to accept the parallel in that sense any more than in the opposite sense. For reasons I have already given elsewhere, I do believe that in the main, Abraham Lincoln was right. But right in what?

If Lincoln was right, he was right in guessing that there was not really a northern nation and a southern nation, but only one American nation. And if he has been proved right, he has been proved right by the fact that men in the south, as well as the north, do now feel a patriotism for that American nation. His wisdom, if it really was wisdom, was justified not by his opponents being conquered, but by their being converted.

Now, if the English politicians must insist on this parallel, they ought to see that the parallel is fatal to themselves. The very test which proved Lincoln right has proved them wrong. The very judgment which may have justified him quite unquestionably condemns them. We have again and again conquered Ireland, and have never come an inch nearer to converting Ireland. We have had not one Gettysburg, but twenty Gettysburgs; but we have had no union. And that is where, as I have remarked, it is relevant to remember that flying fantastic vision on the films, that told so many people what no histories have told them.

The Diplomatists England Needs.

I HAVE heard in America today rumors of the local reappearance of the Ku-Klux Klan; but the smallness and mildness of the manifestation, as compared with the old southern or the new Irish case, is alone a sufficient example of the exception that proves the rule. To approximate to any resemblance to recent Irish events, we must imagine the Ku-Klux Klan riding again in more than the terrors of that vision, wild as the wind, white as the moon, terrible as an army with banners. If there were really such a revival of the southern action, there would equally be a revival of the southern argument. It would be clear that Lee was right and Lincoln was wrong; that the southern states were national and were as indestructible as nations. If the south were as rebellious as Ireland, the north would be as wrong as England.

But I desire a new English diplomacy that will exhibit, not the things in which England is wrong, but the things in which England is right. And England is right in England, just as she is wrong in Ireland, and it is exactly that rightness of a real nation in itself that it is at once more difficult and most desirable to explain to foreigners. Now the Irishman, and to some extent the American, has remained alien to England, largely because he does not truly realize that the Englishman loves England; still less can he really imagine why the Englishman loves England.

That is why I insist on the stupidity of ignoring and insulting the opinions of those few Virginians and other southerners who really have some inherited notion of why Englishmen love England; and even love it in something of the same fashion themselves. Politicians who do not know the English spirit when they see it at home cannot, of course, be expected to recognize it abroad. Publicists are eloquently praising Abraham Lincoln, for all the wrong reasons; but fundamentally for that worst and vilest of all reasons; that he succeeded. None of them seems to have the least notion of how to look for England in England; and they would see something fantastic in the figure of a traveler who found it elsewhere, or anywhere but in New England.

And it is well, perhaps, that they have not yet found England where it is hidden in England; for if they found it, they would kill it. But the diplomatists we really need are those who can tell the world that England is not heartless, because they themselves have been in the heart of England.

BENSON ORDERS LOWER WAGES ON U. S. VESSELS

Federal Employes Get 15 Per Cent Cut.

Washington, D. C., April 30.—One concrete result came today out of a series of conferences for a settlement of the wage dispute between the American ship owners, the shipping board, and the marine workers. Chairman Benson of the shipping board ordered all operators of government merchant craft to reduce wages 15 per cent, effective this midnight. This applies only to government employés on the ships. Owners of other ships want a larger cut.

William S. Brown, president of the Marine Engineers' Beneficial association, said the engineers had been instructed not to sign for any wage cuts, while Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Seamen's union, said the members voted against such artlcles.

Acts as Harding Confers.

Chairman Benson's order came while President Harding and his secretaries of labor and commerce were consulting on the advisability of appointing a commission of three to mediate the controversy. The suggestion that such a commission be named was made by the union representatives, who agreed to abide by any award it would make. It was supported by Secretary Davis.

Both Mr. Furuseth and Mr. Brown were hopeful tonight the commission would be appointed and a suspension of work by the marine employés averted. On the other hand, shipping board officials declared that Chairman Benson was opposed to mediation by a commission.

Benson for Wage Cuts.

His position from the first has been that at least a 15 per cent wage reduction was necessary and that the responsibility rested with the owners and the men to come to an agreement without burdening the President.

At the White House late today it was said that the President did not intend to appoint any commission, but that such a body might be named by Secretaries Davis and Hoover, in whose hands, it was stated, the whole matter had been placed. Meantime, however, Secretary Davis had left for Philadelphia and did not expect to return until tomorrow.

Secretary Hoover will await the return of Mr. Davis. Chairman Benson left for Annapolis before his order reducing wages was made public. The existing wage agreements, except those with deck officers, expire at midnight.

It was stated that even if the men refused to sign up at the new scale there would not be an immediate general tying up of shipping on the Atlantic, Pacific, and gulf coasts, as many vessels are at sea and the men must serve until they are brought to port. The service, however, will be at the existing wage scale. About 175,000 men are involved in the general negotiations.

Shipping board officers said they had laid plans to keep the government fleet in operation in event of any walkout by the present crews. It was stated that there were some 30,000 seafaring men idle at this time, and that little difficulty in manning the ships was anticipated.

GARY DEFENDS F.O.B. PITTSBURGH PRICES OF STEEL

Denies Practice Works Trade Injustice.

New York, April 30.—Elbert H. Gary today said he welcomed investigation by the federal trade commission into charges that the United States Steel corporation and its subsidiaries practiced unfair competition through the system of having Pittsburgh as a basing point for selling prices everywhere.

Many, if not all other lines of industry, he said, carry out similar practices. These consist of establishing a system of base prices and plus prices. Except for rails, steel, wherever made, is delivered under this system at the Pittsburgh base price, plus what the freight would have been from Pittsburgh to the delivery point. Pittsburgh is known as the basing point in the steel industry.

Mr. Gary said Pittsburgh was designated the basing point by common consent among the general trade long before the United States Steel corporation existed.

The complaints against the corporation and its eleven subsidiaries were instituted, Mr. Gary said, by those who buy steel for remanufacture or fabrication in points located in the west or middle west.

The question of fixing the basic selling point of steel arose two years ago, Mr. Gary said, when the federal trade commission decided that it would not assume jurisdiction in the matter. Since then the personnel of the federal trade commission has changed, Mr. Gary continued, and the majority of members now have decided to assume jurisdiction.

GAS KILLS WOMAN IN HOME.

Mrs. Catherine Anderson, 74, of 1113 Oak Grove avenue, was found dead in a gas filled room yesterday. Gas was escaping from a stove burner.

SHOPPERS SEE WOMAN CAPTURE PURSE GRABBER

Hundreds of shoppers at State and Madison streets yesterday witnessed the capture of an alleged purse thief by Mrs. Roger Dattle, 6601 Minerva avenue. The man was Henry Roser, 19 years old, 1871 Indiana avenue.

As Mrs. Dattle entered a store Roser brushed against her, she said, and a moment later she missed her pocketbook containing $50. Grabbing Roser by the back of the collar, she quickly searched him and says she found her purse in a folded newspaper under his arm.

Spectators applauded her success in capturing Roser. Patrolman Charles McElin took him to the central station.

"I could have laid him out if I wasn't loaded down with bundles," Mrs. Dattle said.

FIREMEN TO DRILL AT CARNIVAL.

One of the features of entertainment at the reunion and carnival for ex-service men to be held at the Coliseum May 3 and 4 will be a pylon drill, a complex ladder scaling maneuver staged by two picked teams from the Chicago fire department.

ARMY CARNIVAL IN GRANT PARK OFF TILL JULY

The military carnival planned for May 20 in Grant park will be transferred to some day in July, probably July 23 or 30. This was announced yesterday by Capt. Frank T. Caspers, secretary of the Military Athletic Association of Illinois.

The change is made to allow for a large number of entries from regular army organizations. May 20 falls in the spring training and target practice season, and the conflict of dates would have prevented many soldiers from entering.

Events for women will be included in the carnival, among them being wall scaling contests for teams of sixteen or more races, signaling, and first aid to the wounded.

Entry blanks may be obtained from Capt. Caspers, 527 Marquette building.

DRUG STORE HOLDUP NETS $125.

Two armed men held up Abraham Meyerson in his drug store at 4101 West Roosevelt road yesterday and escaped with $125.

PREDICT EARLY PEACE AS ROADS CUT LABORER PAY

Wall Street Reports 22% Wage Slash.

New York, April 30.—Unskilled labor, which forms the largest group of railroad employés, is accepting wage cuts approximating 20 to 22 per cent of their present wage scales, and when the railroad labor board hands down a ruling on wages for this class it is expected that the matter will have been adjusted between the men and the roads, according to information obtained in the financial district today.

The actual wage cuts which the bulk of the unskilled laborers have accepted, range from 80 cent to $1 a day, although there have been instances where even more than $1 ay has been accepted as a neces cut in pay. If the average cut is cents a day a saving to the roads of $96,000,000 to $108,000,000 will be effected.

It has been evident that a big majority of the railroad workers themselves realize that a downward adjustment in pay is a vital necessity to the continued efficient operation of the bulk of American railroads. Especially is this true since the decline in general business began to be reflected in an immense drop in the volume of traffic handled.

Layoff First Move.

Unskilled laborers felt the economy axe first. Their wages, established by the railroad labor board, were not affected but great numbers of men were laid off.

In the period of slack work, the roads were able to buy large quantities of ties at prices which were advantageous. There is scarcely a trunk line road that is not ready to start out its maintenance-of-way men in large numbers as soon as the lower wage scales are agreed upon. In many instances this work is already being done where the new pay rates have gone into effect.

So far it has been the unskilled workers on the railroads of the south and the west who have adopted lower wages, most of the opposition to cuts coming from the organizations in the eastern district. That it is only a question of time before the eastern workers accept lower rates is the general opinion among railroad men.

Expect Ruling Soon.

At the same time advices received in the financial district from Chicago have been to the effect that the ruling of the railroad labor board on wage readjustments affecting unskilled workers may be handed down at any time. If this decision comes soon it will establish a precedent for the eastern unskilled workers which they will have to follow, it is said. Representatives of organized railroad labor have said that they would obey the rulings of the board and it is expected that they will do so.

The total of unskilled railroad laborers is at present between 400,000 and 450,000. The total of train service employés is estimated to be 250,000, and that of maintenance of equipment employés 350,000 to 375,000. At the first of last month the estimated total of all railroad employés was 1,800,000.

TRADE COURT TO OPEN TOMORROW; FIRST IN COUNTRY

A trade court, in which business disputes are to be settled, will be opened tomorrow morning in room 548, Otis building. J. Kent Greene, who has been assistant to Judge Harry Olson for several years, will be in charge. This court is the first of tis kind in the United States, although similar institutions are well established in England. The court has been established by the commercial arbitration bureau of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Judges of the municipal and superior courts have authorized the rules under which the trade court will be operated The court is the first of its kind in regards points of fact, but appeal may be taken with reference to points of law. Decisions on the disputed points will be rendered by experts and it is expected that it will be possible to avoid both delays and expense in reaching decisions in this manner. Several cases are awaiting the opening of the court, two of these involving out of town business houses. Walter E. Shoemaker, of the J. W. Butler Paper company, is chairman of the commercial arbitration bureau, which numbers many well known business men among its members.

Writs Halt Cicero 'War' on Street Car Lines

Temporary injunctions restraining Cicero town officials from interfering with street car service was issued yesterday by Judge Brentano. The orders are directed against City Attorney E. J. Carmody, Police Capt. Albert Valecka, and Town Clerk Frank Houcek. The writs are a sequel to a clash last week. The village contended the traction company should repair its lines, and to enforce its arguments ran two steam rollers across the tracks, tying up the service.

The Remarkable Jordan at Astounding New Price

A $600 REDUCTION

GOOD management and good fortune has placed the Jordan Company in an enviable situation today. Inventories purchased on the old price basis have been liquidated. We are buying on the new basis now.

This makes possible a startling reduction in the price of Jordan cars immediately.

Thousands of people have always wanted Jordan cars. They have been waiting for the day when Jordan price leadership would be added to that leadership in style, light-weight, economy, power, comfort and service which has always characterized the Jordan.

This is their opportunity.

A startling reduction like this immediately raises the question as to whether Jordan quality has been maintained. You have our assurance that it has been improved.

Such is the obligation which goes with real leadership.

Again we list those factors which substantiate Jordan quality and explain Jordan service—which is the essence of success.

Jordan beauty has always been conceded. Leadership in body design is now unquestioned—it is a style that will last.

The best balanced car on the road—long, all chrome vanadium springs.

The smoothest, quietest, most economical performing six-cylinder motor.

The lightest car on the road for its wheel base—twenty-eight hundred pounds.

The only American car using a positive, non-rattling, self-adjusting, lubricated spring shackle.

All bodies aluminum—body frames white ash—no rumbles, ripples or rust—no better materials or workmanship obtainable.

Only Jordan owners know Jordan comfort—Marshall cushion springs and backs—position of wheel levers and tilt of cushions—the model of body designers.

Every mechanical unit used recognized as the best standard unit built in the world.

Cord tires were first made standard on the Jordan.

Jordan economy unquestioned. Twenty-seven Jordan cars in national run made 12,546 miles, averaging 24.1 miles per gallon.

Jordan cars have climbed all the famous hills in America on high gear.

Ask any Jordan owner or any shop mechanic about Jordan day-in-and-day-out service.

This car will appeal immediately to those who desire to exchange mediocre satisfaction for permanent service and pride of ownership.

This car will appeal at once to those who wish to exchange heavy, bulky, old-fashioned weight for economy with reliability.

Compare all motor car prices as of these dates—

FRUIT GROWERS TO HOLD WORLD EXHIBIT HERE

First International Show Set for October.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Fruit growers of the United States, Canada, and several overseas countries will hold the first international fruit exposition ever attempted in Chicago next October. Plans were announced here yesterday by representatives of twenty-seven states.

More than 100,000 fruit men in the United States alone are back of this huge show. They will come rumbling in next fall with hundreds of carloads of all kinds of fruit. A truly international tinge will be given by Canadian orchard owners, and a few exhibits are expected from Europe and other foreign countries. Orchardists throughout the entire North American continent are wholeheartedly supporting the exposition.

The fruit producers have chosen Samuel Adams, editor of the American Fruit Grower, to head the movement. Glenn G. Hayes, Chicago, is secretary of the exposition.

Chamber of Commerce Approves.

The Chicago Chamber of Commerce indorses the plan. W. Frank McClure, head of the advertising council of the Chamber of Commerce, says that through the international fruit show Chicago can be made the center of the fruit industry of America. From a business point of view he believes the show would have a tendency to encourage the different fruit organizations to establish offices here and centralize their distributing system in Chicago.

Among the organizations that have approved the plan are: California Fruit Growers' exchange, Oregon Coöperative Fruit association, both associations of the California raisin and prune growers, Virginia Fruit Growers, Inc.; Florida Citrus exchange, Ozark Fruit Growers' association, Michigan Fruit Growers' association, National Grape Growers, Peach and Fig Growers' association, Western New York Coöperative association, Skookum Packers of Washington, and Indiana Fruit Growers.

Other Organizations to Help.

Horticultural societies, manufacturers of orchard implements, and other organizations allied to the fruit industry also indorse the plan. The National League of Commission Merchants and the Western Fruit jobbers will help make the show a success.

Directors of the exposition will include growers and officials of coöperative fruit organizations from all the leading growing sections. The show will be held at the Coliseum or at the International amphitheater at the stockyards, where the farmers gather every year to hold the largest live stock show in the world.

The first international fruit exposition will show every phase of the fruit industry, according to Mr. Adams, president, including evaporation, canning, and preserving, and extracting and preparing fruit juices.

Secretary Henry C. Wallace has promised the support of the United States Department of Agriculture. The government will have an exhibit at the international.

BANK OF KINDNESS

Draw a Check on It for the Unfortunate.

"China Famine week" begins today in all the churches throughout the United States, and will last through next Sunday, when it is hoped that the sum of $1,500,000 already raised by the churches will be duplicated, that the famine may be checked until the spring harvests may ripen. A total of $3,600,000 had been subscribed up to last night by the people of the United States, according to John J. Abbott, through the American committee for China famine fund, but every cent of this money had been expended and the food distributed. Additional gifts are urged by cablegrams from Peking to purchase food to keep the starving Chinese farmers and their families from devouring growing grain during the next few weeks.

MRS. DORIS L. CHAPMAN. [Lewis-Smith Photo.]

Mrs. Doris L. Chapman is general chairman of an all star theatrical benefit for the Chinese famine sufferers, to be held Friday afternoon, May 27, at the Garrick theater, and Lester Bryant of the Playhouse will be stage director in charge of the benefit program, which will include every prominent actor playing in Chicago at that time. Others who will assist in making a success of the benefit are: Mrs. W. J. Calhoun, Mrs. Mark Walton, Miss Mary Waller, and Mrs. Genevieve C. Porter, besides a score of prominent patronesses.

Match Thrown by Chum, 10, Blamed for Girl's Death

Ruth Mackarello, 5 years old, 1375 West Grand avenue, died in the county hospital yesterday of burns sustained on April 28. According to the police, she was playing with several companions when Jennie Larkano, 10 years old, 1355 West Grand avenue, hurled a lighted match at her.

Florida Castaways Back, 13 Hoodoo Gone Forever

The 13 superstition has been dispelled, so far as Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Dashiell of 651 Buena avenue are concerned. They returned to Chicago yesterday still thrilled by their recent experience as castaways on Cat Key, off the Florida coast near Miami, where, with Mr. and Mrs. Webb Jay, they were marooned for more than two weeks.

"Hereafter '13' ranks as my lucky number," said Mrs. Dashiell. "We were not yet in any real danger when, on our thirteenth day on the island, an airship rescued us. But the food was getting low and drinking water was scarce. We were not frightened, but a bit concerned, perhaps."

Mrs. Dashiell said a gulf storm which caught them in their motorboat had swept them onto the island.

When You Buy Your Coal Don't Be "Pound Wise" and "Penny Foolish"

A few "pennies" saved on the price does not always compensate for the many "pounds" of ashes produced by some coal. We have again closed another contract and increased our tonnage 300% with Castner, Curran & Bullitt exclusively, for their celebrated C. C. & B. Pocahontas Smokeless Coal. This means for us only one Pocahontas Coal and that's C. C. & B. This coal always commands a premium. It produces steam quickly; holds the heat, and makes very little ash. It is today being used in the U. S. Navy.

It's a "good buy" right now.

Air-Cooled—Yet the Only Motor Guaranteed Not to Overheat

THE FACT that the Holmes is the only full-sized air-cooled car is enough to rank it with the finest motor vehicles of the world.

To the simplicity and economy always associated with the air-cooled principle, the Holmes has added one great feature—a motor that cannot overheat. For the Aeroduct—used for the first time on Series 4 Holmes cars—not only doubles the efficiency of the Holmes over all other systems of air-cooling, but enables its makers to give an unlimited guarantee on motor performance for the life of the car.

Stripped of almost two hundred parts that are carried by water-cooled cars, this wonderfully flexible six is always mastering the unusual. Yet this is only an obvious result—once you realize that a greater percentage of power under heavy service (when you need it) reaches the rear wheels of a Holmes than with any other car of its size.

Is it any wonder that most Holmes owners average twenty miles to the gallon with a seven passenger car?

We've made the claims—now make us prove them.
A 'phone call will bring a Holmes to your door.

RAY

The Public And the Ray Battery

Recognition by the public of the proven merits of the Ray Battery has resulted in growth of the Ray Battery Company in one year equal to a normal five-year expansion.

The two-year unconditional guarantee of Ray Batteries enables the buying public to know exactly what their battery is going to cost them. The Ray Battery guarantee carries no adjustment clauses. If for any reason, a battery becomes defective a new battery will be given to replace it—and without argument.

Batteries are put on a standard line test. The record of its charge and discharge prove its quality. If it does not come up to the requirements it is considered a defective battery and is replaced with a perfect one.

People are spending as little money as possible at the present time. They must be assured full value for every cent spent.

Because of the fair price of the Ray Battery and the unconditional two-year guarantee, the buyer can figure the exact cost of this battery. That is why the Ray Battery is the fastest selling and greatest money making battery on the market.

Write the factory today for information concerning your territory.

TRAINING CAMPS, CHICAGO AREA, TO TEACH 2,400

Total for Nation Fixed at Only 10,000.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 30.—[Special.]—Only 1,200 applicants for free practical military training of civilians can be received this year at the summer military training camps in each corps area, the war department announced today, owing to the limited appropriations. This means that only 2,400 can attend the two camps in the Sixth corps area at Fort Sheridan and Camp Grant, Ill. There the civilian training period for citizens of Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin will open on July 11.

Ten Thousand Is Maximum.

Throughout the whole country only 10,000 men can be accommodated at the training camps.

According to the plan, the government pays all expense of training. In return the candidate, in consideration of his time, will be taught five of the most essential principles of American citizenship:

First—How to serve his country in peace and war.

Second—How to take care of his body, build up his health, and live a happy, vigorous life.

Third, habits of self-control, resourcefulness, self-reliance.

Fourth—Discipline, precision, and a sense of order.

Fifth—Cooperation and team work.

Chance for Patriots.

"The patriotic young man," the war department says, "eager to serve his country and make the most of himself, naturally will want to take advantage of this opportunity. Candidates must be citizens of the United States, of good reputation, between the ages of 16 and 35 years, and physically able to meet the requirements of normal training. Provision will be made for all necessary uniforms, equipment, arms and ammunition, which will be furnished by the army without cost.

"There is no expense attached to the training. Railroad fare or mileage en route to the camp and the return of the candidate to his home will be provided by the government."

MISS GRACE TEMPLE CHOSEN PRESIDENT OF WOMAN'S CLUB

Miss Grace E. Temple was elected president of the Chicago Woman's club at the annual meeting yesterday in the clubrooms in the Fine Arts building. The other officers named are: Mrs. George W. Dixon, first vice president; Mrs. J. B. Herrick, second vice president; Mrs. Alfred C. Tyler, recording secretary; Mrs. Robert F. Palmer, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George R. Dean, treasurer.

Boy Catching Ball Hit by Auto, Leg Fractured

Darting to one side to catch a baseball, William Dudley, 13 years old, of 6056 Kenwood avenue, ran in front of an automobile yesterday and sustained internal injuries and a fracture of the right leg. The driver, Ray Chamberlain, 5529 Kimbark avenue, was not held.

GUARDSMEN TO HAVE 19 DAYS' SUMMER CAMP

Second to Take Part in Memorial Parade.

Chicago National guardsmen will have an opportunity to spend nineteen days in camp this summer. All this time they will be under the supervision of officers of the regular army and will be paid for their time by the federal government.

The first camp for the city guardsmen will be held at Camp Logan, the national guard rifle range just north of Zion city, June 20, 21, 22, 23. This will be for officers, non-commissioned officers and men selected from the various units because of their soldierly qualities. It will be a preparation for the fifteen days' encampment which will come later in the summer.

Second in Camp July 20.

It was announced during the week that the 2d infantry, the first of the Illinois infantry regiments to approach federalization, will go to camp at Logan on July 20, leaving there on Aug. 3. The regiment will be under the command of Col. William E. Swanson.

Two more units of the 2d infantry are ready for federal inspection and mustering in this week. They are the howitzer company, commanded by Capt. Eugene Morgan, and Company L.

Company I was organized last week with the assistance of the Traffic club of Chicago, and will be recruited from the men employed by the Chicago railroads and the transportation departments of Chicago business houses.

When Company I is mustered in, all of the nine rifle companies of the regiment will be in the federal service. One more machine gun company, the three battalion headquarters companies and the service company have yet to be mustered into the federal service, but the other fourteen units of the regiment have been federalized.

The regimental headquarters company is over-recruited and the transfer of some of the men in it will enable the speedy federalization of the battalion headquarters companies.

Ready for Memorial Parade.

Col. Swanson is confident the regiment will be completely organized in order to participate in the Memorial day parade on May 30, as a federalized organization. The regiment will be the first Illinois one to enter the federal service as a complete unit and as far as is known is the only one in the United States ready for federalization under the provisions of the new army reorganization act.

FREE 16 AFTER MONTH IN JAIL.

Sixteen "hoboes" who had remained in cells at the Desplaines street station for a month awaiting jury trials yesterday withdrew their requests for juries, were arraigned before Judge Schulman and discharged, upon their promises to keep away from their Madison street haunts.

RARE SERAPES OF OLD MEXICO FIND HOME IN MUSEUM

A rare collection of Mexican serapes, gathered during years of travel by Herbert J. Browne of Washington, D. C., is one of the exhibits in the new Field Museum of Natural History which is to open next Tuesday. A serape is a sort of blanket or poncho to be worn over the shoulders.

Good old Mexican serapes are as valuable as good old Navajo blankets and there are few in existence. The best serapes were woven before 1850 and represent a blending of the weaving arts of Mexico and Spain.

One of the serapes in the Browne collection dates back to 1775. It was woven for one of the ancestors of the present president of Mexico and despite its age is in perfect condition.

Funds for the purchase of the collection were supplied by Martin A. Ryerson and Homer E. Sargent.

When the Public Speaks

When the public speaks, the manufacturer has to listen.

For its verdict is final. And by its findings every manufacturer stands or falters.

We all know today how strictly in force is the public decree of economy.

No matter how attractively the manufacturer has proclaimed his wares, how many he has made, how energetically he has distributed them, with the public only one test counts—and that is actual value for every dollar it spends.

The reason why Firestone has passed this rigid test so successfully is simply that for its twenty years of development it has hewed straight to the line of a single standard of quality. And that is the production of tires that should deliver dependably most miles for the dollar.

Time and again in the critical days of the industry public opinion has plainly expressed its evidence of good will toward the name and the product Firestone.

But never has it more outspokenly emphasized Firestone goodness as in this last recent period of thoughtful discernment as to values.

It has validated the signature on the Firestone tire in a way that unmistakably indicates public preference.

And because public support has so soundly ratified its standard of most miles per dollar, the Firestone Organization, with every man and woman in it a stockholder, faces the present market with even greater faith than ever in its future.

RAILWAY BONDS RISE; "Q" ISSUE OVERSUBSCRIBED

New York, April 30.—Today's bond market was in some ways more interesting than the market for stocks. Further advances of ⅜ to 1 point were scored in a substantial number of railway bonds. Transactions were not large, but the evidence of a more favorable attitude among investors in consequence of the Burlington financing being eliminated as a disturbing uncertainty was plain. Subscription books to the Burlington issue were closed at noon with an estimated oversubscription of $25,000,000.

Net changes in bond market prices, as compared with the previous week's closings, display irregularity, but the general trend has been distinctly upward, a fact to which the advance in the United Kingdom issues and in our own Liberty bonds is perhaps the most striking testimony.

Announcements of approximately $50,000,000 new domestic financing are anticipated during the coming week, with probably several smaller issues. The largest of the issues reported on the way is $25,000,000 bonds by the Pierce Oil corporation. Another is an issue of $10,000,000 for the Duquesne Light and Power company, while a third corporation in quest of new funds is Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago packers, whose requirements may necessitate an issue of between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000.

FINANCIAL NOTES

A meeting of the stockholders of the Big Ledge Copper company will be held on May 10 to vote on increasing the capital stock from $15,000,000 to $15,500,000 through the issuance of $500,000 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock, par $5. Stockholders are given the privilege of subscribing for one share of preferred for every twenty-five of common stock now owned at $5 a share.

The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending April 27, by 208 banks in 24 leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $832,030,000, compared with $943,106,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported by 23 clearing houses amounted to $850,012,000 compared with $1,050,986,000 for the corresponding week last year.

The International Harvester company has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred stock, payable June 1 to stockholders of record May 10. The Studebaker corporation declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the preferred and common stocks payable June 1 to stockholders of record May 10.

The preferred and common stock of the Mason Rubber Plantation company will be acquired by the Mason Tire and Rubber company of Kent, according to notices being sent to all stockholders.

Secretary Mellon has authorized the federal reserve banks to redeem in advance treasury certificates of indebtedness dated Nov. 15, maturing May 16.

SHOE TRADE FAIR; PRICES HARDEN

There is more life to the shoe trade and values show a hardening tendency in response to higher prices for hides and leather. Calfskins that recently sold at 13c have advanced to 20c a pound and there is said to be a scarcity of fancy leather for ladies' shoes and of heavy sole leather for immediate delivery. Shoe manufacturers report a fair business, as buyers are timid. A year ago, said a leading manufacturer, it was found almost impossible to prevent retailers from buying heavily at high prices, while now they are afraid to buy at the big decline that has been on.

Seasoned Bonds.

Inexperienced investors seem inclined to resent suggestions favorable to seasoned bonds paying a low rtae of interest, but selling at prices low enough to make their yield high. Such bonds have some advantages over new issues that pay a high rate.

First, the mere fact that they are well seasoned is a great advantage. When a new bond is sold it is given a rating based principally on what is expected to take place. The possibility always exists thta something may arise to disarrange well laid plans. The rating of the seasoned bond is based on some years of experience, during which any weaknesses that were hidden at first probably have been disclosed.

Second, the old bond has an advantage with respect to income taxes. As the law provides that the tax be withheld at the source, the investor pays only on the low rate of the bond, and not on the higher rate of its yield.

When, finally, he takes his profit on the principal, years in the future, the tax rate probably will be lower.

The new bond also has points of superiority. First, it offers a higher rate of immediate return. That is, it pays the full 7 or 8 per cent, beginning with the first coupon, instead of paying only part, and compelling the investor to wait till the bond matures or he sells it to get the rest. To some investors this is an important point. The new bond also offers greater possibilities of a speculative uroft through increase in market value.

The question of which set of advantages is best is one for each investor to decide according to his individual needs.

Brief Answers.

L. K., La Porte, Tex.—Mexican Panuco Oil was formed in 1916 to take over some holdings in the Panuco fields, Mexico. It issued $3,000,000 of stock of $10 par. No dividends reported. Little information made public.

J. R. M.—The Minneapolis General Electric company has $7,403,000 of first mortgage bonds outstanding. The company is owned by the Northern States Power, and its bonds are an underlying issue of the latter company. They are a conservative investment.

J. E. H.—The Sandow Motor Truck company of Boston, against which a petition in bankruptcy was filed last February, has no connection with the Chicago company of similar name. The latter is operating and making good profits.

The Public Is on Strike

The same in every city in the country, building cannot and will not proceed until costs of construction come down.

One hundred million dollars worth of building in Chicago is awaiting the word to go.

Fifty thousand or more homes are needed to adequately house the people.

Rents are high and going higher, more building means lower rents and a better environment for all. The average wage rate to be paid building mechanics, suggested and offered in most cities, is less than one dollar per hour.

Chicago Building Contractors offer the uniform rate to mechanics of one dollar per hour, and to laborers, of seventy cents per hour. The building public, through the press, believes these rates are fair and just.

Our leading civic organization, the Chicago Association of Commerce, publicly, by resolution approves and endorses the rates offered.

The Illinois Society of Architects, the owners' representative, the man who pays, says the acceptance of the offer will immediately start building.

The Chicago Lumbermen's Association says that prices of lumber have been cut and that the wage rate offered by the contractors is equitable.

Other material costs, such as brick, steel, etc., have dropped and will continue to drop.

Unless Chicago starts soon, the building season will be over and work abandoned for this year.

The Contractors want the job, the workmen need the pay. Both are equal sufferers.

Continuous work at one dollar per hour is far better than a few days' work at a higher rate.

The war is over. Prices must come down. Let's get busy and start something before it is too late.

Short stock quotable 50@77c below above quotations.

Average price of good beef cattle last week was the lowest since April, 1915, at $7.65, and the hog average was the lowest since February, 1916, at $8.15.

Closing cattle trade, however, was the best of the week, with the largest week's shipments of export stock of the year at 3,700 featuring the trade.

The hog market closed comparatively strong, yet the day's top at $8.50 showed 25c decline from the speculative top of the year between the top and average. Friday, with the day's average off 13c at $8.27, showing the narrowest spread.

Arrivals of hogs for the week at 149,600 were the largest in nearly two months, while shipments to the east at 17,200 were the smallest since last November. Chicago's prices ruled relatively higher than at outside points, which turned shipping orders to other markets.

There was a gain of 3 pounds in the estimated average weight of hogs last week at 237 lbs, against 234 lbs previous week, 245 lbs a year ago, and 233 lbs for the ten year average.

Sheep and lambs closed the week 25@50c higher than the previous Saturday, with shorn stock showing the most advance. Better shipping orders and export buying added tone to the trade.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 47,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 26,695 cattle, 48,064 hogs, and 20,260 sheep previous Monday and 24,748 cattle, 47,656 hogs and 19,158 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 58,000 cattle, 175,000 hogs, and 75,000 sheep.

R. W. Oake marked 60,000 for next Monday's probable receipts of hogs, with J. M. Waters guessing 35,000; F. R. Burrows, 36,000; Edward Morris, 42,000; E. R. Gentry, 43,000; F. W. Waddell, 44,000; W. H. Overman, 46,000, and F. Gehrmann, 50,000.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—LEAD—In demand at $4.50. ZINC—Slab, steady at $5.00.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

Advances were noted in the majority of local unlisted securities, Butler Brothers improving to sales at 35. Stock was offered at this price at the close, with bids of 34½. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was traded in, ex dividend 50c, between 37 and 38. Goodyear Tire and Rubber common, however, reached a new low in selling at 8½, but rallied to a strong close of 10¾ bid, 10¾ asked. The preferred also declined in the early part of the week to sales at 30½, but closed practically unchanged at 34¼ to 34¾. Moline Plow preferred at 29 to 32 was unchanged, while Creamery Package changed hands at 25. Wahl preferred continued steady at 86 to 88. Glidden common was in demand, improving a point and a half to 14¼ bid, 16 asked. The preferred continued inactive at 74 to 82.

Motor stocks showed strength, Continental leading in volume of trade, advancing to sales at 7⅝. Stock was wanted at 7⅝, with offerings at 7½ at the close. Packard also advanced a point to 11¼, while the preferred showed a substantial improvement, closing at 75 to 78. Reo was unchanged at 21 to 21½. Public utility sales were as follows: American Light and Traction common, 91¾@92¼; preferred, 82¼@83; Cities Service common, 248@252; preferred, 66¾@67¾; Commonwealth Power common, 10¼@11; preferred, 30½@31¼; Northern States Power common, 46¾@47½; preferred, 80½@81½; Standard Gas common, 11¾@12½; preferred, 34¾@35¼; United Light common, 24¾@25¼; preferred, 61@61¾.

Interest in bonds was chiefly centered in the two new offerings, namely, the C. B. & Q. joint 6½s and Goodyear Tire and Rubber 8s. The former was very well received, market was quoted 96½ to 96⅞, while the latter continued in good demand and improved to a close of 100⅝ to 101. The general list was comparatively inactive and fractionally lower. The traction issues, which had advanced for the previous two weeks, showed slight losses. Chicago Railway 5s declined three-quarters of a point to 65¼ to 65⅝, and the Chicago City Railway 5s a half to 66 to 66¾. The Chicago Railways series A suffered the greatest in losing 2 points at 45 to 48.

The public utilities were practically unchanged, Peoples Gas 5s being quoted 71½ to 72, and the Public Service 5s at 73 to 75. Commonwealth Edison 7s were also unchanged at 99¼ to 99¾, but the 6s declined a quarter to 84¼ to 84⅞. The same tendency was noted in the packing house issues, Armour 7s being traded in around 96¼ and the 4½s at 79½, representing a loss of a quarter. Swift 5s and 6s were unchanged at 85 to 86 and 99¼ to 99⅝ respectively. The 7s declined an eighth to 96¼ to 96½. Wilson convertible 6s continued to lose ground, closing at 82 to 83. In the miscellaneous group Sinclair 7½s improved to 93 and Diamond Match 7½s to 101¾ bid. The Sears-Roebuck issues of 1921, 1922, and 1923 were practically unchanged, although they showed a firm tone throughout the week.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, April 30.—Cotton goods were steady with a moderate demand for print cloths. Fruit of the loom, 4-4 bleached muslin was priced at 16 cents as of Monday, May 2. Silk goods were firm with raw silk showing easy spot. Tweeds showed up more strongly for women's wear. A more general demand spread through the knit goods market. Burlaps were easy.

OIL MARKETS.

NEW YORK.—Cottonseed oil closed steady. Prime summer yellow, $7.00@7.50; prime crude, $5.10@5.25; May, $7.10; June, $7.10; July, $7.30; August, $7.60; September, $7.70; October, $7.85; November, $7.85; December, $7.80. Sales, 14,300 brls.

RAILROAD NOTES

The railroads are handling more soft coal. Bituminous production showed a substantial increase during the week ending April 16, according to figures given out yesterday by the geological survey. The total output, including lignite and coking coal, was 6,525,000 tons, an increase of 416,000 over the previous week. Most of the coal produced went into domestic channels.

The United States Supreme court has approved decisions of lower courts which gave the Southern Pacific title to certain lands in Kern county, California. The land was claimed by the McKittrick Oil company.

An inquiry for 10,000 tons of steel rails is in the market from the Argentine government. It is expected the order will be placed in the near future.

The number of cars loaded with revenue freight during the week ended April 16 was 703,896, an increase of 10,000 over the previous week and 37,250 within two weeks, according to figures of the American Railway association. It was also a gain of 102,201 cars over the corresponding week last year, when traffic was interrupted by a strike of switchmen, but 2,100 cars below the corresponding week in 1919.

FIRST MORTGAGE

REAL ESTATE SERIAL GOLD BONDS

Normal Federal Income Tax up to 4% Paid by Borrower

We summarize herewith the principal features of this unparalleled investment, from a letter from Mr. Marcus Loew, President of the borrowing corporation:

Security: The bonds will be secured by an absolute closed first mortgage on the above two theatres now under construction, and by the land at Broadway and 83rd St., New York City, owned in fee simple, and land at Broad and New Sts., Newark, part of which is owned in fee and the balance covered by a highly favorable sixty-three year lease. All theatre seats, drapes, carpets and theatre equipment of both properties are also pledged as security. In addition, prompt payment of both principal and interest is unconditionally guaranteed by with gross assets of over $40,000,000, net assets of over $27,000,000 and net earnings largely in excess of the entire bond issue.

Buildings: Each building will be fire-proof and thoroughly modern in every respect, will include a theatre seating about 2700 people—and in addition will contain four stores and two floors of offices.

Valuation and Income: The combined properties are valued at $3,175,000, or nearly twice the amount of the bond issue. The net income is estimated at $532,000, or about 3½ times the greatest annual interest charge on the entire bond issue.

Borrower: Loew's Incorporated owns all of the stock of the New Broad Company, which in turn owns the Broadway and Eighty-Third Street Theatre in New York City; and the Broad and New St. Theatre, Newark, N. J. Loew's Incorporated owns and controls over a hundred theatres, including those now in course of construction, throughout the United States and Canada, having a total daily average attendance of about 300,000 people, or an annual attendance of approximately 100,000,000 persons.

GRAINS CLOSE ON BULGE; IMPROVED TONE TO MARTS

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

The grain markets finished with a better tone yesterday after showing early weakness and lower prices. Wheat gained ⅝ to ⅞c, and corn ¼ to ⅜c. Oats were ½c lower to ⅜c higher, the former on May. Rye gained 4¾c for May, while other months were unchanged to ½c higher. Barley was 1c lower, lard lost 12½ to 15c, and short ribs 2½ to 5c, while pork was 10c lower to 5c higher for the day.

Wheat prices finished the week ¼c higher for May and unchanged for July, while corn showed losses of 2½ to 4c and oats 1 to 3¼c, May leading in both grains. In rye it was the reverse, with May up 5½c and other futures 1 to 3c higher, while barley lost 1¾c. Provisions were weak, with pork 10 to 15c lower; lard, 47½c, and short ribs, 2½ to 7c under the close of a week ago.

Bulge in Last Hour.

The early depressing factors in wheat that led to the day's lower prices were prospects of a seamen's strike at seaboard and reports that Germany was out of the market as a buyer due to fears that the allies would occupy more territory.

Exporters bought 575,000 bu corn in all positions in the west. Montreal paid 11c over May for No. 2 mixed c. i. f. there.

Milling demand for cash wheat was brisk with premiums ⅛@1c higher, a house that usually acts for a Buffalo mill taking hard winters. No. 1 hard sold 16@16¼c over; No. 2 hard at 13@15c over with 14½c over bid to arrive. No. 1 red was 12@13c over the May. Receipts 19 cars. Domestic shipping sales were 5,000 bu wheat, 43,000 bu corn, and 208,000 bu oats, the latter included 70,000 bu c. i. f. Buffalo. Montreal was inquiring after hard winter wheat but there was none available.

Outside wheat markets were unsettled with St. Louis 3c higher and Omaha unchanged to 2c higher. Hard winter at Kansas City was unchanged to 1c lower and red 3@5c higher.

Demand for cash corn was good with the basis very firm as compared with the May. Spot prices were ½c lower early, and unchanged later with No. 3 yellow ⅝c under to ½c over; No. 3 white May price to ¼c under, and No. 2 yellow 1¼c over May. Receipts 160 cars. Outside markets were unchanged to 1c lower.

Cash oats gained ¼c on the May No. 2 white selling mainly at 1½c and No. 3 white at ½c over May with shippers good buyers. Prices were ¼@½c lower. Receipts 79 cars.

Evening Up in Corn.

A huge evening up movement was on in corn, with May liquidation regarded as thorough. Elevator people were active at buying May and selling July, while many longs sold out May and bought July and September. The May-July spread widened to 3¾c, nearly the best of the season, and indications are for moderate deliveries of May contract on Monday. The week's shipments from Chicago were 3,189,000 bu, and about 1,000,000 bu were reported loading during the day.

Elevator people were active at buying the May and selling July and September oats, the May-July spread widening to 2¼c and 3c at the extreme. May was depressed and closed ½c lower at around 35c, while distant futures finished near the high prices of the day, with gains of ½@¾c, July leading.

It was hard to trade in May rye at times, and prices advanced 5¾c over Friday's close at the last.

Provisions Close Lower.

Provisions weakened under sales by liquidators and packers, and closed around the inside prices, lard leading. Prospects are for deliveries of around 20,000,000 lbs on May contract within a few days. The week's shipments of lard and meats greatly exceeded last year's. Packing here since March 1 aggregates 976,000 hogs, or 171,000 more than last year. Prices follow:

CASH-GRAIN NEWS

No export sales of wheat were reported at the seaboard. Germany was out of the market as a buyer due to fears that the allies would occupy more territory.

Exporters bought 575,000 bu corn in all positions in the west. Montreal paid 11c over May for No. 2 mixed c. i. f. there.

Milling demand for cash wheat was brisk with premiums ⅛@1c higher, a house that usually acts for a Buffalo mill taking hard winters. No. 1 hard sold 16@16¼c over; No. 2 hard at 13@15c over with 14½c over bid to arrive. No. 1 red was 12@13c over the May. Receipts 19 cars. Domestic shipping sales were 5,000 bu wheat, 43,000 bu corn, and 208,000 bu oats, the latter included 70,000 bu c. i. f. Buffalo. Montreal was inquiring after hard winter wheat but there was none available.

Outside wheat markets were unsettled with St. Louis 3c higher and Omaha unchanged to 2c higher. Hard winter at Kansas City was unchanged to 1c lower and red 3@5c higher.

Demand for cash corn was good with the basis very firm as compared with the May. Spot prices were ½c lower early, and unchanged later with No. 3 yellow ⅝c under to ½c over; No. 3 white May price to ¼c under, and No. 2 yellow 1¼c over May. Receipts 160 cars. Outside markets were unchanged to 1c lower.

Cash oats gained ¼c on the May No. 2 white selling mainly at 1½c and No. 3 white at ½c over May with shippers good buyers. Prices were ¼@½c lower. Receipts 79 cars.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

A winter wheat crop of 624,000,000 bu, compared with 577,000,000 bu harvested last year was suggested by a report given to J. E. Bennett & Co. Condition is 89.8, against 91 by the government on April 1. Abandoned acreage around 4 per cent. Rye condition 89 to 90, against 90.3 on April 1. Spring wheat acreage promises to show a decrease of 10 per cent. Oats acreage will probably be unchanged, the decreases in the big states offsetting the increases in the south. Condition is rather low in the southwest. Corn acreage in the states of largest production is expected to decrease 5 per cent, while in the south increases range from 10 to 22 per cent.

"Southwestern Missouri and southeastern Kansas wheat is uneven," wired John Inglis to Logan & Bryan from Cherryville, Kas. "Many poor fields losing color on account of excessive moisture. Soft wheat heading short. General condition throughout this territory promises about an average crop. Dry weather and sunshine needed."

R. O. Cromwell wired E. W. Wagner & Co. from St. Louis: "A few grain men here believe that wheat out of the valley was hurt by freezes, but a majority say it is all right. Valley wheat said to be fine. Missouri shippers in convention here say wheat condition over state is very good and recovering from setback due to freezes."

WORLD'S-GRAIN MARKET-NEWS

A good many wheat and corn traders were more friendly to the buying side of the market at the close yesterday. They regarded May liquidation as over and said the market was due for a little advance. A few were quite positive conditions had improved. They said there was a large short interest and looked for a big decrease in corn stocks for the week, possibly 2,000,000 bu. The week's shipments were 3,189,000 bu, compared with receipts of 1,232,000 bu, and nearly 1,000,000 bu were said to be loading out on Saturday.

Owing to the activity of elevator interests in changing their hedges from May to July corn and oats, the trade is not expecting large deliveries on Monday, as carrying charges have widened to the best of the season, or nearly so, with oats 2¼c to 3c and corn 3¼c difference between May and July, which gives the carrier a profit. There is no wheat here to be delivered and cash premiums are too high to think about it.

"Sufficient wheat has been sold for export throughout the crop year to deplete our reserves materially," say Thompson & McKinnon, "and this condition is now being reflected in the cash and May wheat, but the European buyer is slow to follow advances; therefore, the market makes only an irregular response to the cash situation."

Minneapolis reported it had sold cash wheat offered to Chicago yesterday at May price and intimated more could be had at that figure. Four cars of No. 3 dark northern spring wheat from Minneapolis sold at May price here, and one car was held at a premium.

Bids of 19c over Chicago May c. i. f. Buffalo were made for No. 1 hard wheat here yesterday. There were 50,000 bu wheat loading into vessels, and a good reduction is expected in stocks for the week, although receipts slightly exceeded shipments.

John W. Radford has retired from the Pope & Eckhardt company after having been associated with it since 1893. The remaining stockholders will continue the business.

Australian exports of wheat the last week aggregated 2,944,000 bu, against 4,528,000 bu the previous week, and since Jan. 1 are 42,888,000 bu. Indian wheat shipments were 368,000 bu, against 112,000 bu the previous week, and so far this season it has shipped 8,768,000 bu. Clearances of 208,000 bu are expected next week.

Japan was reported after cash wheat at the Pacific coast, but refused to follow the advance in prices. Reports that Japan had been trying to resell wheat bought recently were denied.

British commission holdings of wheat at Liverpool and Manchester aggregate 2,472,000 bu, compared with 2,776,000 bu the previous week, a decrease of 464,000 bu.

GRAIN RECEIPTS INCREASE

Chicago received 2,937,000 bu of grain last week, an increase of 347,000 bu over the previous week and 1,647,000 bu as compared with last year. The arrivals, however, were about 700,000 bu below the average for this time of the year. Wheat receipts were 278,000 bu, a small loss for the week and a gain of 56,000 bu over last year. Corn receipts were 1,232,000 bu, gaining 169,000 bu for the week and 910,000 bu over last year. Oats showed 1,283,000 bu, or 234,000 bu gain for the week and 777,000 bu over last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 5,195,000 bu, a loss of 675,000 bu for the week and a gain of 1,560,000 bu over last year. Corn showed 2,779,000 bu, an increase of 664,000 bu for the week and of 823,000 bu over last year, while of oats the run was 2,653,000 bu, with a gain of 553,000 bu for the week and of 163,000 bu over a year ago. Total receipts of all grains at primary markets were 11,527,000 bu, or 567,000 bu more than the previous week and 2,586,000 bu over last year.

Eastbound shipments of grain and flour were larger than last year's and provisions were nearly 16,000 tons more than a year ago.

The New York Times.

New York, April $0.—[Special.]—In view of the status of the German negotiations, with the period of grace allowed in the entente ultimatum expiring on Sunday, the strength of European exchange was the noteworthy incident of today's financial markets. Sterling advanced again above the previous high point of the year to $3.96½, at which it was nearly 42 cents above the year's lowest figure. Exchange on Paris similarly crossed the previous high mark of 1921; today's rate of 7¾ cents per franc compares with 5¾ cents at the opening of January.

The persistent recovery in these rates since December is explained by the decrease in our own surplus of merchandise exports to the European markets and by the large gold shipments made to us by them. But the exchange market has from the first shown itself sensitive to every shift in the European diplomatic situation.

Stocks Are Irregular.

On the stock exchange the movement of prices was irregular and advances in the early trading were offset by somewhat general reaction toward the close. This left the general market fractionally higher than at Friday's closing. The motor and rubber shares were strong. The heaviest dealings were in Pierce-Arrow, which rose 4¾ points. Chandler, International Motor, and White Motor gained a point or more, but Studebaker declined 1¼ points. Goodrich rose 2⅝ and United States Rubber and Keystone gained more than a point. Stromberg, Bosch, and Stewart-Warner advanced 2 points or more. The oil issues were featured by wide fluctuations in Mexican Petroleum, which closed with a point gain. Endicott-Johnson advanced 4⅜, while Famous Players declined 2¼ points.

Comparison of the week's final prices with those of the preceding week shows great irregularity, but with net advances predominating. The really essential consideration is that such resisting power should have been shown in the face of the Steel corporation's poor quarterly statement and the cut in the Pennsylvania dividend.

Associated Banks' Status.

The weekly statement of the New York associated banks showed a deficit of $8,455,360 in legal reserves, compared with an excess of $9,590,320 in the preceding week. This explained the advance in call money rates to 7 per cent toward the close of this week. The current deficit is the third this year, and on all three occasions the primary cause was a reduction of reserve credits at the New York Federal Reserve bank. This week such reserves receded $8,821,000. Loans increased $4,341,000, while net demand and time deposits expanded $32,003,000 and $4,070,000, respectively. The figures follow:

INDIANA'S MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL

SHE WINS $1,000 AND TITLE OF PRETTIEST GIRL IN INDIANA—Miss Flora Mae Hackett, Monon, Monon county, Indiana, awarded first prize for her state in The Tribune's $20,200 contest to determine the most beautiful girls in the central west. Miss Hackett does office work. She is 19. Her appeal to the judgment of the three celebrated artists—Pauline Palmer, Albin Polasek, and J. Wellington Reynolds—was her youth and charm and obvious temperament, or, as Mr. Reynolds put it: "Because she is darn good looking." In addition to receiving the $1,000 award Miss Hackett will be a candidate for the $10,000 prize to be given the most beautiful of the sixty prize winners. Pictures of the other Indiana beauties will be found on page 3.

"More silk in Kayser's is the reason for their lasting"

IT'S the pure, unweighted silk in KAYSER Silk Gloves that makes them wear longer and look better than other silk gloves. PURE silk is the STRONGEST of any textile fabric. KAYSER Silk Gloves may be washed again and again, and still retain their beauty of lustre and perfect fit.

KAYSER Silk Gloves always cost less in the end than cheap unknown gloves. They are truly economical.

The name KAYSER is in the hem of the glove and with each pair is a guarantee ticket that the tips will outwear the gloves.

If you long for more color—
Use this famous treatment for rousing a sluggish skin

Just before retiring, wash your face and neck with plenty of Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water. Rub a generous lather thoroughly into the pores, using an upward and outward motion. Do this until the skin feels somewhat sensitive. Rinse well in warm water, then in cold. Whenever possible, rub your skin for five minutes with a piece of ice.

If your skin has lost its fine texture—
Use this famous treatment every night

Dip your washcloth in very warm water and hold it to your face. Now, take the cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap, dip it in water and rub the cake itself over your skin. Leave the slight coating of soap on for a few minutes until your face feels drawn and dry. Then dampen the skin and rub the soap in gently with an upward and outward motion. Rinse the face thoroughly, first in tepid water, then in cold. Whenever possible, finish by rubbing the face with a piece of ice.

To make your skin noticeably lovely—

Give it the regular care it had when you were a baby

WHEN you were a baby your skin was exquisitely soft—clear—delicate; daintily rose-pink and white. People loved to touch your rose-petal cheeks, your soft, smooth little hands.

Do you ever stop to think what kept your skin so fine and soft? What is keeping it now from being as fine and soft as it can be?

No matter how you may have neglected your skin, you can make it exquisite in texture. You can have the glorious color of youth. You must begin at once to give your skin the tender, regular care it received when you were a baby. Every night before retiring, cleanse it thoroughly—just as thoroughly as a baby's skin is cleansed every night. If your skin has lost its delicacy and clearness, use the particular Woodbury treatment indicated for its needs.

Do you want more color? Are the pores enlarged? Have you disfiguring blemishes or blackheads? These conditions are the result of neglect and the constant exposure to which your skin is subjected. The right Woodbury treatment, used nightly, will correct them.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and have your first treatment tonight. The feeling the first two or three treatments give your skin will tell you how much good its regular use is going to do you. In a week or ten days you will begin to notice a decided improvement—the greater clearness, smoothness, fineness and color you long for.

Woodbury's is for sale at drug stores and toilet goods counters throughout the United States and Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

"Your treatment for one week"

Send 25 cents for a miniature set of the Woodbury skin preparations, containing your complete Woodbury treatment for one week. In it you will find the treatment booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch"; a trial cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap; a sample tube of the new Woodbury Facial Cream, and samples of Woodbury's Cold Cream and Facial Powder. Write today for this special outfit. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio. If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Co., Limited, Sherbroeke Street, Perth, Ontario.

LOOK WHO'S HERE! Almost ever'body! Anyhow, many, many of your favorites have been rounded up to appear in the coming Cecil B. DeMille production, "The Affairs of Anatol," the scenario of which was written by Jeanie Macpherson from the Schnitzler drama of the same name.

Seeing the chance of a lifetime to photograph all these folks together, the photographer caught them thus at the Lasky studio in Hollywood the other day. Pick them out if you can. If you can't, here's who they are:

Seated, second row: Lorna Moon, Beulah Marie Dix, Jeanie Macpherson, Wallace Reid, Wanda Hawley, Bebe Daniels, Gloria Swanson, Agnes Ayres, Elliott Dexter and Clare West.

On floor: Ruth Miller, Shannon Day, Ann Bauchens, Maude Wayne and Ruth Dickey.

Comb away those gray streaks

Trial Bottle Free

That unbecoming "grizzled" hair which makes you seem old before your time can be restored to the natural color in from 4 to 8 days. A clear, colorless liquid works the magic—applied by combing through the hair—results are certain—no danger of streaking or discoloration. Your hair is soft, clean and fluffy, lovely to curl and dress. Shampoo as usual—there is nothing to wash or rub off.

Mary T. Goldman perfected this scientific preparation to restore her own gray hair. Fifty years have passed, but she hasn't a silver thread. Don't experiment with "just-as-goods." You want the reliable, one-and-only

Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer

Mail coupon for trial sized bottle and application comb. Test as directed on a single lock—prove beyond a doubt that your gray hairs, whether few or many, can be restored in this simple, easy way—then buy a full-sized bottle from your druggist, or order direct. Only—don't take imitations.

ONCE MERELY PRETTY—NOW A GREAT BEAUTY: Once merely a "pretty girl" with nice eyes, skin and charming smile, she transformed herself in a day to a great beauty. Her hair had become dull in tone, gray streaked, faded, sun bleached and lifeless. She tinted it to its original color with "Brownatone." Instantly she was transformed. Eyes and complexion were enhanced ten fold. Her face, now harmoniously framed with a mass of radiant hair, was irresistibly beautiful. Any woman or girl can do likewise.

"Brownatone" tints gray, streaked or faded hair instantly to any shade of brown or black. Absolutely harmless—will not rub off. Odorless and greaseless, clean and easily applied.

Two colors: "Golden to Medium Brown" and "Dark Brown to Black." Two sizes: 50c and $1.50, at drug and department stores. Sample bottle sent on receipt of 11 cents. Address The Kenton Pharmacal Co., 546 Coppin Bldg., Covington, Ky.

Those who prefer having their hair Brownatoned by a specialist or who desire advice will visit the Brownatone Shop, 1033 Stevens Building, Chicago.

For Neuralgia and Headaches

THE first swift, agonizing pain of Neuralgia finds the wise woman checking its tortures with her ever-handy Sloan's Liniment!

Sloan's for thirty-nine years has been a first-aid necessity in thousands of homes. Its popularity is due to its ability to bring prompt, comforting relief from the most persistent external aches and pains.

Neuralgic Headaches, Sciatica, Rheumatic Twinges, Lumbago Sore Muscles, Stiff Joints—how quickly Sloan's Liniment penetrates without rubbing, scatters the congestion, and relieves the throbbing, stabbing torment!

Keep a bottle handy. All druggists. Three sizes—35c, 70c, $1.40; the largest for ultimate economy.

Beautify Your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dfy, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

35c bottles. All drug stores and toilet counters

WHEN LEEDS MEETS GREEK—Princess Xenia (above), second daughter of Princess Maria of Greece and niece of King Constantine, and the youthful William B. Leeds, known to fame as "America's richest boy," who, it is announced, are soon to become man and wife. William's mother, now the wife of Prince Christopher, is known in Athens as the "dollar princess," and this second alliance of Greek royalty and the Leeds millions has been hailed by the monarchists with unbounded satisfaction. Young Leeds arrived in Athens by aeroplane one day recently to visit his mother. The next day he proposed to the princess and was accepted.

Every morning in Chicago

ALL over the city, the day is started with coffee—

In hotels, in clubs, in millions of homes, the essential part of every breakfast is a hot and fragrant cup of coffee.

The people of Chicago are particular about coffee. They know what a vast difference there is in coffees and they have tried them all to find the one that truly satisfies.

Today more Chicago people are drinking Yuban than ever before chose any one brand of coffee.

At first, because Yuban was so exquisite in flavor, so unusual in its richness and strength, women served it only for guests or on special occasions—just as John Arbuckle reserved it at first for his friends.

But other coffees seem very dull after you have tasted Yuban. And soon in thousands of Chicago homes Yuban was served every morning for breakfast.

The popularity of Yuban is still growing. The story of its flavor is spreading further and further. Your nearest grocer carries Yuban. You can get it from his store tomorrow.

More Yuban is served in Chicago homes than any other packaged coffee

In clubs and hotels breakfast means coffee. In one hotel two hundred gallons of coffee are served every morning

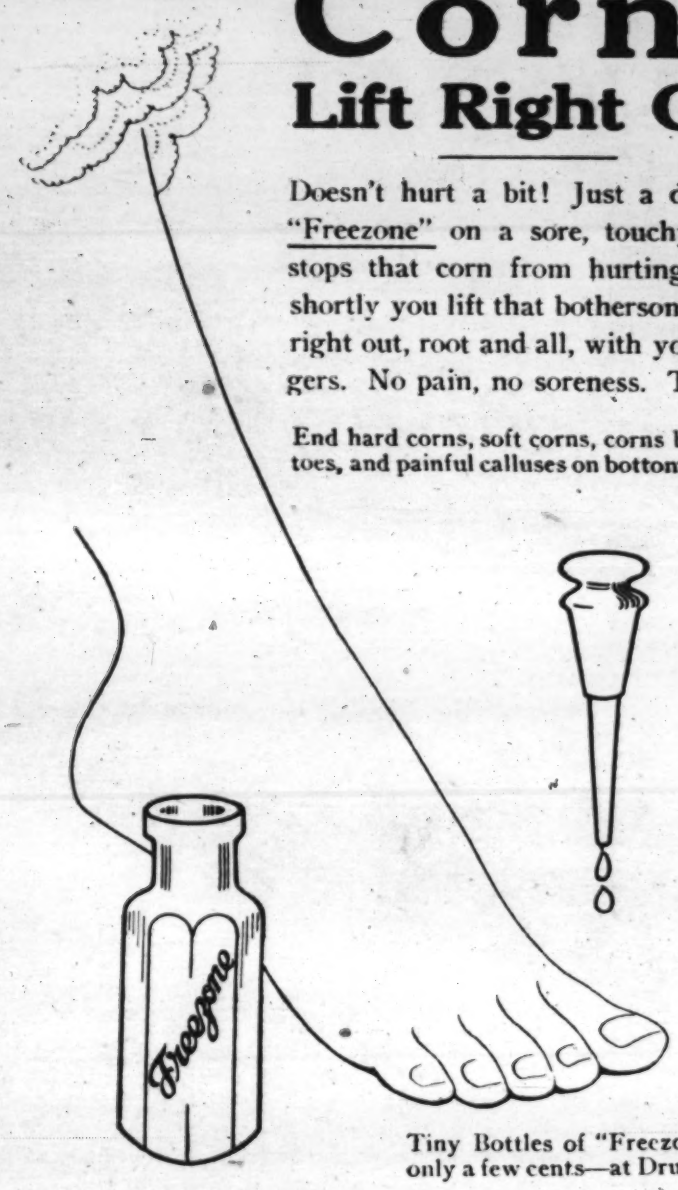
HE DIED 100 YEARS AGO NEXT THURSDAY—Napoleon Bonaparte, from the famous painting by Paul Delaroche. The great Corsican's career really ended with his defeat at Waterloo in 1815, but he lived six years thereafter on the island of St. Helena, a figure comparable to that of the ex-kaiser in Holland, and his death occurred May 5, 1821, when the fallen emperor was 51 years old. He was buried first on the island, but in 1840, in accordance with his own wishes, his remains were removed to Paris, and there, under the dome of the Hotel des Invalides, they found their final resting place.

Corns
Lift Right Off

Doesn't hurt a bit! Just a drop of "Freezone" on a sore, touchy corn stops that corn from hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn right out, root and all, with your fingers. No pain, no soreness. Try it!

End hard corns, soft corns, corns between toes, and painful calluses on bottom of feet.



Tiny Bottles of "Freezone" cost only a few cents—at Drug Stores.

"California Syrup of Figs" Laxative for Children

Hurry, mother! A teaspoonful of "California" Syrup of Figs today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If your child is constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good "physic-laxative" is often all that is necessary.

Children love the "fruity" taste of genuine "California" Syrup of Figs, which has directions for babies and children printed on the bottle. Ask the druggist for "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup. Beware!

Dye Right!

Don't Spoil Your Material in Poor Dye that Streaks, Fades or Runs

EACH package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can diamond-dye old, faded garments, draperies, coverings, everything, whether wool, silk, linen, cotton or mixed goods, new, rich, fadeless colors.

Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—then perfect results are guaranteed even if you have never dyed before. Druggist will show you Diamond Dyes Color Card.

An offense so personal no one dares speak the truth

So evident in others—so unbelievable of yourself!

HAVE you ever told anyone—even your closest friend; has anyone ever told you that you offended against a certain law of daintiness?

Probably not, for that is so intimate, so personal a thing you cannot trust your best friend to be frank about it.

The deplorable part, the insidious danger of perspiration is—you may so easily offend unconsciously.

How to safeguard your daintiness

YOUR standards of personal daintiness cannot be maintained by soap and water alone. Immaculate cleanliness is not enough. A perspiration corrective is needed.

More than a million people now use Odorono regularly as a means of maintaining perfect personal daintiness.

Because it is a liquid, it is as easy and pleasant to use as a toilet water. And the joy of it is that one application assures daintiness for at least three days.

Then Odorono gives assurance on another point. It is antiseptic in action and perfectly harmless.

Odorono is scientifically correct. The ablest chemists have spent years in research work to improve the original physician's prescription, until now it is as perfect as science can make it. If any further improvement were possible, they would find it by the constant testing done in the Odorono laboratories.

Odorono used twice a week will insure complete personal daintiness. Apply to underarms at night, allow to dry, then dust with talcum. Bathe with clear water the next morning—or any time, for water will not affect it.

By correcting the cause of excessive underarm perspiration, Odorono saves the discomfort of perspiration-soaked clothing, the expense of stained and ruined gowns. And it makes you absolutely sure that you never offend with the slightest trace of perspiration odor.

Men also find Odorono indispensable for toilet use. Send for our booklet, "The Assurance of Perfect Grooming."

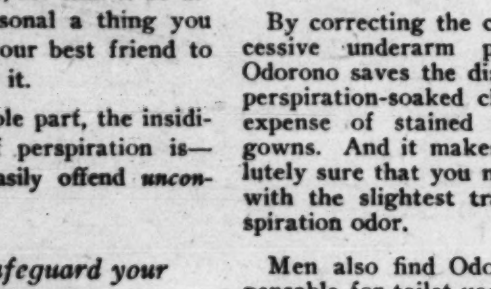
Odorono may be obtained at all toilet counters, 35c, 60c and $1.00. By mail, postpaid, if your dealer hasn't it.

The Odorono Company's popular new Depilatory

AFTER long experiment and endless testing in the Odorono laboratories, we have achieved another toilet delight for the friends of Odorono.

The Odorono Company's Depilatory is the new really pleasant, feminine way to remove hair. Gentle and harmless as a toilet cream, dainty and fragrant as a French talc, one application leaves the underarm as smooth and white as the face.

Let us send you our new booklet of information on the toilette of the underarm, "The Double Meaning of Daintiness." Address Ruth Miller, The Odorono Company, 141 Blair Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.



The Charm of a New Spring Straw Hat

You can also buy Colorite Fabric Dyes—little dye tablets to renew your gowns and other garments, and give them any desired shade. Ask your dealer.

WHY go to the expense of buying a new straw hat to match your gown, and perhaps, after all, be disappointed in the result?

It's much more sensible and safer, too, to take your old favorite "straw," that you know suits you so well, and "Colorite" it just the shade you want.

16 colors from which to choose:

JET BLACK (Gloss)	NAVY BLUE	LAVENDER	BROWN
DULL BLACK	CADET BLUE	OLD ROSE	VIOLET
CARDINAL RED	VICTORY BLUE	CERISE	GRAY
YELLOW	SAGE GREEN	BURNT STRAW	NATURAL

Get Colorite from your drug, dry goods or department store, in U. S. 25c., Canada 30c. If offered a substitute, send us 30c. and we shall send you Colorite postpaid; in Canada 35c. BRUSH for applying included. Be sure to name the color you want.

The MARRIAGE THAT WAS ARRANGED by Berta Ruck

"Now, sir, what do you mean by that?" He tapped the paper in his hand, folded at the obnoxious paragraph. "What do you mean by that?"

Having Your Engagement Announced Is Thrilling Enough, But When It's to a Girl You Don't Know . . !

AGHAST, a girl sat staring at the morning's paper. The breakfast table at which she sat was bright with yellow narcissus blossoms, afloat in a shallow crystal bowl. Full of sunshine, the room! Full of dainty appointments; empty of anything that would speak of a man in the house.

The girl was twenty-five, well but unexcitingly dressed, and good looking. She might have been extremely pretty had there been any one to notice it. Notice, to beauty, being even as sunlight to the narcissus. Can't bloom without it. Sometimes the girl herself fancied that her eyes were nice, though nobody had told her so . . .

As for what they were now staring at, these eyes? This announcement:

> A marriage has been arranged and will shortly take place between Sybil, daughter of the late General and Mrs. Ashton of the Lower Reach, Maidenhead, and niece of Miss Ashton of 013 Basil street, and Arthur Wye, Esq., eldest son of the late Colonel and Mrs. Wye, Thorton Hall, Shropshire.

"Good heavens," gasped the girl. "Auntie!"

For the other woman in the house was one of these meek maiden aunts left over from the nineteenth century. Gray hair net and gray satin skirt, silver gleam of eyeglass chain, library catalogue.

She put down the list of the latest fiction and in her characteristically nervous voice inquired: "What is it, Sybil, dear?"

"Look!"

And Sybil Ashton, with an indignant gesture, handed over the paper. Her thumb marked the announcement of her own forthcoming marriage—the first the girl had ever heard of it.

At that same moment and at a breakfast table in bachelor rooms some streets away a young man sat equally aghast staring at his own copy of the Post.

"Good Lord," he muttered. "What the——" Then louder, "I'm dashed!"

Then, "Or am I imagining it? . . . . Girlie, my only love, will you listen to this?"

He proceeded to read aloud, slowly and distinctly, the notice beginning "A marriage has been arranged——"

His invariable breakfast table companion was curled up in the lazy chair opposite to him, her ivory satin coat, rose lined, gleaming over all her shapely curves. Girlie, best bred and most infatuate of bull terriers, kept one triangular white ear cocked for every note of the beloved's voice; both jeweled eyes fastened upon him.

Good to look upon, certainly, was this young master of hers, lounging graceful and big limbed in the type of bathrobe with which men compensate themselves for the drab and dreary vesture of their business lives. (This garment was of lemon-yellow silk, patterned in swirls of impudent jade green, petunia pink, and cinneraria purple.) A slacker? No . . . Just taking things a little easily, perhaps, these days—after those strenuous years!

Not much incentive to work at present. No responsibilities now—but his mercilessly groomed brown hair was streaked with the premature white that's so often seen among the young ex-fighters of our generation; shrapnel souvenirs. The possibility was there that since the twenties of this young man had been all too full of action, the thirties might find him lazing—the forties would see him fat, disillusioned, unfulfilled. . . .

No hint of middle age, though, as yet, in his pleasant, laughing voice . . .

"Girlie, how on earth has this happened?" it demanded, when the announcement had been read through to the end. "A marriage—mine! After I've told you—' not once and again, but again and again'—that you're the one member of your sex who's ever going to be allowed to sit opposite to me at breakfast, here's some wicked person, girlie, trying to oust you from your lawful place. Mistake, of course. But how the deuce did it get in? Somebody must have——"

Here he broke snap off. His good looking face froze into blankness again as another aspect of the question broke upon him. A serious one.

"Good Lord!"

"In the Post . . .

"Everybody'd see the dashed thing . . . everybody who knew him would——"

"Pp . . . . rrrrring!" sounded the telephone bell on his writing table.

The young man stretched out a long, gaudily sleeved arm to pick up the receiver. Then checked himself abruptly.

"Frith——" he called aloud.

"Sir," responded the voice of his man from the meticulous back kitchen, and there entered, in faultless civies (the late sergeant) Frith.

"Answer the telephone, will you?" requested his master. "I don't think I'm here."

"Very good, sir."

Then Frith, at the telephone, "Yes, madam, Mr. Wye's man speaking . . . Yes, it's Frith . . ."—in a loud tone, as to the very deaf—"I am sorry, madam, Mr. Wye is not here at present. . . . "

Impassive face of man meeting eyes of master.

" . . . Gone into the country, I believe, madam. He . . . pardon?"

Pause. The impassivity of Frith's mask

After the Wind and Rain

HOW untidy you feel, what a wreck is your hair and complexion — the skin raw and chapped, the hair wet and stringy. Instinctively you seek something that will rest and refresh you — something you feel is best —

For the Hair and Complexion

KIRK'S JAP ROSE SOAP

Golden Transparent

NOTHING is so refreshing for the complexion as JAP ROSE. Its pure oils and c. p. glycerine soothe and heal the rawness and take away the tired, strained feeling in the face, that so often is present after having been out in the wind and rain. And it leaves the skin soft, healthy and beautiful.

And how wonderful for the hair too, is JAP ROSE — such masses of pearly bubbles, so little effort needed and so quickly and completely does it rinse — leaving no sticky, stringy strands, the dread of every woman who washes her own hair — but the hair so soft, fluffy, and lovely.

JAMES S. KIRK & COMPANY, CHICAGO, U. S. A.

tinged here with a gleam of amasement. Then—

"I could not tell you, madam, I am expecting a wire, any moment, to let me know when Mr. Wye will be back, and will request him to ring you up . . . I could not tell you, madam, indeed . . . Mr. Wye has said nothing to myself . . . Very good, madam. Good-by."

Then—

"Mrs. Anstruther, sir, wishing to congratulate you upon your engage——"

"Good Lord, my grandmother," grunted young Wye in dismay. "None so sharp as those who can't hear. She got it first of all, did she——"

"Yes, sir." Frith took this as a question to himself. "A little upset madam seemed, not to have heard the news from yourself direct, sir." Slight hint of reproof in the tone of this confidential family servant of a rapidly disappearing school. "If I may say so——"

"Prrring!" again, urgently.

Interlude by Frith on telephone.

"Who the dickens was that?"

"Col. Philips, sir, left a message for you. His heartiest congratulations, and he and Mrs. Philips are delighted to see your news, and——"

"Are they," broke from the exasperated subject of congratulation. "I suppose every soul I know will be ringing up about it for the rest of the morning? Anyhow they'll see it contradicted in all the evening papers!"

"Do I understand, sir, that the report of your en——"

"'Grossly exaggerated,' Frith! I'm not engaged nor ever will be!"

"Sir!"

"O, go to the—to the door, Frith. There's somebody knocking. Say I've gone out, of course."

But the voice of the visitor was raised at the door of the flat; loudly, blithely and confidently.

"O, no, you don't, Frith, y'old villain. I heard him . . . Wye! Wye, you rascal, I heard you . . . Hullo, Girlie—aha, she knows I'm coming in to see her master all right. Morning!"

And there entered, carrying hat, gloves, cane, and morning newspaper, the tenant of the rooms above, Mr. George Hope.

He was a couple of years younger than young Wye, of his old regiment; he was a smaller-made man, and he bounced. Men liked "little Hope"; men delighted in his flow of talk, his practical jokes, his chirping spirits . . . Men pronounced him "a thoroughly good little chap." He was, in short, a man's man. Which does not always mean a man whom women loathe.

In this case, however, it did. You could not find a woman who would not instinctively wrinkle up her nose at the name of "that little horror, Mr. Hope." Pathetic? Not at all. To this type has been granted by the mercy of providence the unshatterable illusion that all women like and that many women love him.

"Aha," he began as he faced the attractive figure in the bathrobe. "Here we are, attired as a bridegroom cometh forth, eh? I've come to trouble you, Wye, for that fiver!"

"Fiver?" repeated his friend blankly.

"Yes, the fiver you owe me on that bet. You've lost!" Little Hope tapped the paper he held. "Just saw it here! Splendid! Hand it over, old thing!"

"What d'you mean——"

"Hoh, y'old humbug. You know perfectly well," exulted little Hope. "Bet you on Armistice day that you'd get yourself engaged to be married before you'd been out of the army two years. Now what about it? What meets my astonished gaze this morning over the bacon and eggs?" He whisked open the paper and began to read—"'A marr——'"

"O, shut up, man, shut up. Haven't I just seen it myself?."

"Seen it? Well, I should jolly well hope you had. Expect you've been gloating over your bliss ever since you leapt out of your bath this morning. Kept it quiet, old thing, haven't you?" little Hope rattled on. "Dark horse touch, eh? . . . But seriously, my dear old basket of fruit, I was thundering glad to see it. Old Wye fixed up, I thought. Jove! That's fine. Unexpected, really; but still. Just what he wants. Something to buck him up a bit. Put some more get into him. Bring out the best that's in him! A ripping good husband for any girl, if—What you looking so hard-boiled about?"

"I'm merely waiting," said young Wye bearing patience, "until you finish and I get a word in."

"That's all right, tell us about her. Sob it all out on my shoulder!"

"You ass, there's nothing to sob. Anyhow, not what you think," retorted young Wye vigorously. "Some idiot's been trying to be funny, that's all. There's too much chapter and verse about it for it to be just a mistake."

"Mistake, what do you mean by mistake?"

"This dashed announcement." The glossy head with its grey streaks was jerked towards the newspaper in Hope's hand.

Hope's jaw dropped. "Mean to say you aren't engaged after all?"

"I'm not thinking of it."

Hope eyed him. "Just a rumor, then?"

"Rumor? Just a lie!"

"No smoke without fire," suggested little Hope. "How did it get about? Surely we've passed the dear old days when one couldn't sit out every dance with the same girl without being asked one's intentions——"

"Lord," flung out young Wye, "I don't even know the lady these people have fixed me up with!"

"Don't know her," incredulously from little Hope. "D'you mean you've never even seen this young woman of yours?"

"I have just seen her." Young Wye stared frowning at the name coupled in that paragraph with his own. "Sybil Ashton . . . Miss Sybil Ashton . . . I met her at a dance in the country at a house where I was taken down by some people. Just once. I'd forgotten . . . "

"Not pretty, then?"

"O, yes, quite. A nice girl, too. Particularly nice girl, I thought. Pretty voice, good neck and shoulders in evening dress; soft blue eyes; that sort of thing. But——! I never saw her again from that day to this. And now here's this!" He kicked his own copy of the paper that lay on the carpet. "A bit extraordinary, isn't it? Dashed if I know how——"

Little Hope gave his loud, unvarying laugh. "What are you going to do about it?"

"Do? Contradict it at once, of course. I——"

"Pp—RING!" went off that bell again;; again the interlude in which the impassive and invaluable Frith told his accustomed tale to yet another congratulating friend.

"Delighted, are they? Shows what all your pals have been praying for you! And what," asked little Hope, who was ever a mass of that seething curiosity only found, we are told, in the feminine sex, "what about the lady? What will she have to say about her unsuspected fiancé, d'you suppose?"

The driven fiancé put forward no theory, merely grunting, "My boots, Frith."

Little Hope grinned. "In such a rush to see her?"

"Ass. It's the manager of that paper that I'm in the rush to see . . . Quick as you can, Frith—please . . . And if anybody else rings up . . . "

(PPP-ring!"- from the telephone bell)—let 'em ring!"

To those at the Post offices who informed him that they did not know if the manager were to be seen, Mr. Arthur Wye replied curtly, "He'll see me."

On he strode, and to the innermost sanctum, where, his knock being unanswered, he found himself in the presence of a big roll-top desk and of two persons so engrossed that they did not for a moment notice the intruder's entrance.

The manager, a man of the large, overbearing type that almost inevitably turns timid as a hare in the hands of any woman, was acting true to type. There he sat, quailing. In front of his desk a young woman was standing up to bully him.

Her back was towards young Wye as he entered. A shapely back; supple, straight-shouldered, well-fitted by a light grey coat—and expressive, in every line, of indignation. The tensest anger rang out, too, in the girlish voice that was exclaimnig:

"Infamous, I call it! You ought to be ashamed of yourselves——"

"But——" deprecated the manager.

The girl ran on, "And I'm astonished that a paper of your repute should have permitted itself a piece of such—such criminal carelessness."

"Cheers!" thought young Wye, appreciatively. "Here's somebody else been let down somehow by these rotters. 'Infamous!' That's the stuff to give 'em. What a stunning girl. I wonder who she——"

She wheeled, giving him a full view of her face. An uncommonly pretty face; cheeks aflame with pink fire, eyes like blazing sapphires . . . O, topping . . .

For an instant the young man did not realise that he'd ever seen the face before. Then a quick further flame lighted it up, and she exclaimed, aghast—

"You?"

At the same time young Wye gasped, "Good Lord, it's Miss Ashton herself. . . ."

The manager, beholding a man to deal with, here ceased to quail, prepared to hector. Glaring at young Wye he rapped out,

"I said I was engaged!"

"You said," took up the girl swiftly, "that I was engaged!"

"That we were engaged," amended young Wye, taking a step forward. "Now, sir, wnat do you mean by that?" He tapped the paper in his hand, folded at the obnoxious paragraph. "What do you mean by it?"

"Mean——"

"Yes! D'you know that all my—her—our friends will have read this? D'you realize that every soul who knows this young lady or knows me will have food for gossip for a month of Sundays? Already my telephone's got worn out with idiots trying to congratulate me——"

"So has ours!" burst in the lady, obviously far too indignant still to feel any embarrassment. "And people have telegraphed! And my relations in the country will all be sitting down and writing reams, all on account of this——"

"But—but—but——" began the manager, requailing and lifting a hand. "My dear young lady——"

A glance from the blazing sapphires seared him as he sat.

Slightly more temperately, young Wye took up the tale. "We shall be the laughing stock of London. Great Scot! I'd like to know—we'd both like to know what you've got to say for yourself? Personally I don't see that you've a leg to stand. What explanation can you possibly offer——"

"Explanation!" retorted the manager, purple to the collar. "Why—why, you yourself, madam!" He turned to that girlish incarnation of fury. "You yourself apparently sent the notice in to be inserted."

"I?" Petrified, the girl gazed from him to the young man. "He says I sent in the announcement?"

"How dare you make such a suggestion about a lady?" young Wye burst in impetuously. "You'll be saying next that I put it in!"

"I haven't the pleasure of knowing your name, sir!"

"You seem to know plenty about my business anyway. My name is Wye, Mr. Arthur Wye. And I advise you to be careful what you say about my—my friends sending things in to your rag of a newspaper."

"But—my dear sir! It's surely customary for the lady's people to insert any announcement of a forthcoming marr——"

"That's not going to help you, so don't sit there arguing and splitting hairs with me," retorted young Wye, spurred by the look of helpless indignation that lighted up the lovely face so near him. "How ever it happened, you've managed to cause very serious annoyance to a lady——"

"But——"

"To say nothing of the position in which you've placed me by this precious announcement of yours!"

"I——"

"You'll apologize, and pretty handsomely, too, when you publish the contradiction of this—this malicious rumor. Further, I've a dashed good mind to bring an action for libel against you!"

"And I," declared the girl, "shall bring another!"

With which curtain line she made a not ineffective exit, young Wye holding the office door open for his alleged fiancée. Together they reached the top of the stairs. Together they paused, each with a look of deprecatory appeal. Together they began, "I say, I'm so dreadfully sorry——" Then, together, they burst out laughing.

He exclaimed: "Well, who'd have thought where we'd meet again, at that cheery dance when we did meet! Have you seen anything of those people lately, Miss Ashton?"

Miss Ashton said: "No; they were only friends of my friends who took me. It was just a chance, my going to their house——"

"And they're sure to write and say how glad they are it was at their house we met!" he laughed ruefully. "Good Lord, there's no end to the aspects of this awful mess that I've landed you into——"

"You haven't landed me——"

"Somehow I feel it's my fault——"

"O, it's the newspaper's fault," said the girl.

Said the man: "If there were only anything I could do! . . . Anyhow, if you'll tell me the form you'd like the contradiction to take in the evening papers—I say, we can't discuss that here on these steps. . . . Is it too early for lunch? Well, then, if you're not doing anything for the moment can't we get hold of a taxi and find some quiet spot where we can sit down and talk this over?"

If young Wye had not been thoroughly disgruntled by all this extravaganza he would not have selected, as a quiet spot for talk, the park on a fine morning of midseason.

To his horrified mind it appeared that the park immediately became populated by all the people who knew him, her, or both.

They, these friends, all saw. They all smiled—meaning smiles and full of approval. "Such a delightful young coupe!" could be read in every glance. And how like fate to arrange that, on this day of all others, those people who had given that dance and whom they had not seen since then should appear in the flower walk and should bear down upon the couple before they had so much as paid the pennies for their chairs.

"Look, look! They're coming to speak to us. Pretend you didn't see them," whispered Sybil Ashton to her companion, who had, as a matter of fact, not seen. "Let's pretend that we're going—O, yes—to talk to that old lady over there."

She hustled him in the direction of a white haired dowager with black lace dripping off her Victorian mushroom hat—who immediately lifted a shrewd, startled face upon the two young people racing toward her down the path and exclaimed arrestingly:

"Arthur!"

Out of the frying pan into the fire.

"Granny!" muttered the young man, turning sealing wax red as they pulled up.

"Good-morning, bad boy," said the old lady brightly. "I'm glad to see you've the grace to come up and apologize at once. What manners! Letting your poor old granny see it in the Post before she'd heard a word! Then telling your village idiot Frith to say you'd fled the country! Well, perhaps he didn't say quite that, but that's the way he mumbles. Deplorably stoopid fellow! Change your man, Arthur. Change your man. Not worth while before you're married, I suppose? And this"—with a keen, approving glance at the flushed girl before her—"this is the young lady. My dear, I am delighted to see you." Two little black gloved hands clasped Sybil's. "You're so like that wonderfully handsome young man, your grandfather. We had rather a flirtation even in Simla—O, some years ago. When are you coming to see me? Come and have lunch in Mount street. Come now——"

Young Wye broke in desperately, aware that this was neither the time nor the place to enter into long winded explanations with deaf old ladies.

"Awfully sorry, grannie . . . another day . . . tomorrow if we may, perhaps. . . . Promised to have lunch with—er—her people . . . hate to break away like this, but as a matter of fact we're behind time now. . . . Good-by, grannie . . . forgive us, won't you? . . . If we can just grab that taxi . . . "

He grabbed it. He got in beside the girl. "I'll see you home, Miss Ashton, of course! . . . And if you don't mind I'll ask if you will allow me to come in and see your people for five minutes. I'd like to explain to them that this whole blessed affair had absolutely nothing to do with—I mean, I mean, I'd hate them to think I'd been trying . . . I'd hate them to imagine that there was anything in the nature of a practical joke——"

"Joke!" blankly from the girl. "You don't suppose any human being would do a thing like that for a joke, do you?"

"Er—O, I suppose not," returned the young man all the more hastily because a sudden suspicion had just assailed him.

A practical joke . . . if it were that? . . . On the part of some one he knew? Who was always full of booby traps and "scores"? Whose chaff was occasionally—yes, occasionally—on the "off" side? Who had come in this morning specially to rag about that announcement of the engagement? . . . Surely he could not have been such an unmitigated bounder?

Good Lord!

How frightful if it did turn out to be all the doing of little Hope. . . . Impossible! Yet—who else could it have been?

"Here we are," cried Sybil, more nervously than she had yet appeared, as the taxi pulled up.

"Auntie, this is Mr. Wye, our fellow sufferer in the matter of that—that ridiculous canard in the newspaper," the girl introduced her companion bravely to the flustered looking lady who stood in the middle of a pretty drawing room as if she wondered how she'd got there. "We met at the newspaper office."

night," the girl said, smiling, and watching him with delight in his wonder at the instrument. She was a child—or a native—in her simplicity. She stood there erect, smiling; so beautiful, and young, and budding.

Twyford looked at her.

that there were no modern manics. It was as though music had stopped somewhere about 1820 for this house.

There were two other pictures, a print of Naples, and another of Francis, the king of Naples, whom Garibaldi overthrew. Twyright outside anything that he had ever known.

He saw the stir she would create if she appeared suddenly amid the peoples of the civilized world. He could picture the shock the world would experience when this strange, barbarous genius came out from the deeps of the solitude and displayed her uncanny power amid the jaded commonplace of the ordinary concert hall. The immensity of the contrast would have an effect like a clap of thunder. She would sweep the whole world with her strangeness and her power.

He dwelt upon this for days. He saw himself producing this musical thunderbolt from the secret silence of the vine-hung forests. He turned the emotion on his palate. What an effect, what a sensation it would be!

His mind, apart from his delight in her music, was obsessed by this thought until, imperceptibly, he began to be aware of her singlar beauty. He began to realize how exquisite she herself was in her peculiar way. Her youth, her slimness, the quality of her free and spontaneous vivacity, so natural and untramelled as to be almost that of a young, spirited, and playful animal, captivated him. She was unconscious of her charm, and in her unconcern was altogether alluring. Her grace, her swiftness, the play of a thousand emotions on her fine and delicate face, the glow of delight, of laughter, of reverie, of mystery, in the dark wells of her superb eyes became things to be watched with the avidity of personal delight and adoration.

She was beautiful, she was alluring, she was desirable. She moved like a goddess. She was a princess of the solitudes in which she had her being. She captivated him by the high austerity of her simplicity; her naturalness, her ingenuousness gave her a charm against which his heart could not stand. And about her always was the magnificent aura of her gift of music. Herself, her genius wove about him a spell that was both delicious, beautiful, and binding.

The excitement that her appearance would cause amid civilized men and things began to wane. The picture of her with the world at her feet soon became to him a thing actively unpleasant. The regard, the worship of the world would take her from him, would set about her a barrier separating her from him. He felt that here, amid the solitudes he had her; there, over there in the world of civilization, he would lose her amid the multitudes. The wonder of a strange world would swamp in upon her, obliterating him. She would be filled by a thousand new emotions to the exclusion of any emotion she might feel for him.

And then from his love for her, he began to feel that it would be wrong to transplant her, to remove her from her native soil, and set her amid the arid artificialities of the human world. What would be the effect of the change on her nature? He knew natives, he knew civilization. Civilization strangled her kind always. He saw in his mind's eye all the races who were dying out under the inexorable atmosphere of progress. Yes, under the suffocating pressure of modern life she might go under.

He saw the crushing effect of towns upon her. Here she had the width of the world wherein to walk as a goddess half clothed; her method of eating, living, sleeping were barbarous. He pictured her in the crushing confines of a town. Roof over head, walls frowning down on her. She would have to crush those thin, flexible feet into shoes, and she had never worn shoes. She would have to clothe that virile, pliant body. She would have to sleep in a bed, sit at a table, use unaccustomed knives and forks if she took but the lowest level necessary to conform to those around her. And there would be all the stifling, confining air of life—the baffling habits of the civilized, their jealousies, meannesses, refined cruelties.

Shock upon shock to her, yoke upon yoke for her free spirit. Would she endure it? Would her spirit and her gift survive? Would she not decline into something, nerveless, spiritless, flat? He had seen the effects of such a transplantation before. Would not civilization be death and hell to this free living, untramelled sprite of the untamed forest?

As he looked at her as she played one night, he thought with something of a personal pain of these things—a personal pain because if he decided that it would be a crime to introduce her to this foreign air, then he must lose her. He did not mince matters with himself. He was of civilization—that was his home and he must take his part in it. He could not stay here. He thought of these things and even as he thought, she played to him something she had not played before—and it seemed to him that this was an answer to his questionings.

Playing she had swung from a soft melody of Bach's into an air strange and unrecognizable. Twyford was lost for a moment. His sense of values was all at sea. She had, he recognized at once, departed from the old music forms into something she had invented for herself. Her method was new, and at first he thought it uncouth and ugly. Then in a flash the meaning within her music gripped him. He heard silence.

Yes, strange though it may seem, he heard silence. The curious, intense, almost textile silence that comes to the great forests at certain times. He heard the quiet growing up. The massed life noises of the forest—that eternal whispering, and whistling, clashing, chirruping, rattling, and growing which goes on in a life unseen behind the mysterious veilings of vines and trees—died down. Quiet grew up like a black cloud filling the room. How she managed to convey this sensation he did not know; she was using a music entirely strange to him, but the sensation was unmistakable.

The quiet grew. It flowed slowly, gradually into the world. It rose like a deep, dark tide in the room. The noise of insect and beast died down and down. The sounds of the underbush fluttered out as candles fluttered out. The trees became awfully still. Silence, tremendous silence; a silence that was something more than silence. Quiet that was a breathless, a brooding thing; utter stagnation that was quick with the ominous. An uncanny, discomposing, tingling quiet. A quiet that oppressed the soul, before which the heart cowered in fear of the leashed terror that this black and waiting noiselessness held. Silence tremendous, bated, crawling with suggestion.

Twyford could scarcely breathe under the wonder of that miracle of playing. He looked towards the girl, whose hands fluttered slowly, like moths, on the keyboard, filling the world with silence, pregnant silence. He whispered:

"The 'Hush Night.'"

"The Great Quiet," she whispered back, giving the local name for this phenomenon that came to the woods before a storm.

But the music was going on.

Away—miles and miles away through the terribly silent woods—a frightened dog howled. How in heaven's name did she manage that? Silence and then that heart chilling howl once more. Almost at once there was the first whisper of what was approaching among the trees of the infinite distance. Just a crepitation caught by the ear from an immense distance. Then that whisper growing and growing; building up, massing up; becoming a thing of tossing and hissing and clashing, becoming massy and menacing; becoming solid and tumultuous, and wild and cruel. In the distance sound grew and developed and advanced upon them leaping, leaping nearer like a fire in the forest.

A storm was sweeping toward them. It could be heard marching toward them, ranked, tremendous, and irresistible, like an army in line. He could hear it conquering the silence mile by mile with its swift and terrific rush. The steady, thunderous downpour of the distant rain formed a background to the whistling crash and crack of the dry branches as the advance guard of the wind charged the tree tops and set the palm fronds tossing in wild torment. There were crashings and hissings, reports like the discharge of guns as high branches gave under the thresh of the wind. There was a roaring of tumult as the storm swept down upon them.

The storm grew, expanded, and became titanic as it rushed down upon them—those virile and magical fingers at the piano struck out this chant of the advancing hurricane in a way authentic and marvelous. It rushed across the leagues of trees, accumulating a monster spate of sound. And then with a crash that seemed to split the whole world, it was upon them.

Its rage was about the house—in it. Its mad wind tore at the roof and lashed at the walls. It stamped and thundered in the trees about the village. It was a cyclone of frenzied noise. It whirled about them in an unspeakable uproar. It blew into the very soul, whirling it about in unspeakable terror. The mind was flung hither and thither, buffeted, flung down, and spun over by this gigantic whirlwind of tropic fury. The body winced and blenched under this gargantuan upheaval of nature. The mind seemed about to crack under the force of this unspeakable noise.

And then the rain came down. Drumming torrents pounding down with a beat and a roar that filled the world, that grew in steady immensity until all sounds merged into it and vanished. Only the world filling rush and thrum of the dense mass of rain remained.

Elena laughed at him and stopped. Twyford heard the frogs croaking in the river and the whirring of the insect life in the woods. He heard the natives talking quietly in the village. He had to pinch himself to convince his mind there had been no storm, that the rain had not some—that only Elena and her magic hands had conjured up this marvel.

He gasped at her. She was sitting, swinging her thin legs, laughing at him. She was stuffing her barbarous little mouth with alligator pear.

"Who taught you that?" Twyford gasped at her.

"That is nothing," she laughed at him. "It is what happens in the forest. I make the piano do it, too. It is just a game."

Twyford stared at her. He had a flashing picture of what civilization might think of this marvelous thing she thought just a game. This miracle of composition. But he stopped thinking of that. He saw instead this girl who was so welded to the forest, who was so much a part of this primitive wild life that she could express their emotions in this manner, thrust into the dry bosom of civilized life.

That wondrous rendering of the "Hush Night" and the storm had revealed the essential Elena to him, had answered the questions he had been asking himself. It told him poignantly how much she was a part of this primitive land. She was native to it, wrapped up in it. It was in her very blood, part of her very fiber. To transplant her would be a crime. It would be wrenching up a forest flower to plant in dry, alien, and uncongenial soil. She could only live in this wild place of which she was an essential part. To take her elsewhere would be to starve her of the things that were life and living to her. He could not do it.

He slipped away with his men that night, struck out for the Madeira and the work he had to do before returning to the life he had to live. He covered up his tracks well, and doubled on them, so that if she had the desire to follow, she could not do so. He was a good woodsman he knew how to hide his line of march.

Did she desire to follow? He did not know. But the next evening, as they camped, there came to him through the silence of the forest, across the ten miles they had covered, the sound of a song.

The music of "Aida" struck through the leafy and mystical darkness of the bush, calling to him, clutching at his heart with eager, pathetic fingers of melody. It seemed to call and call. "Come back! Come back!" it seemed to say. But he set his teeth and sat on.

The melody, played with incomparable genius in the heart of that lonely land, went on, incongruous, bizarre, entirely out of place. He sat, not moving. Incongruous it was, but it was better so. He sat on listening to the piano striking out from the heart of the untramelled forest from that fold of Nowhere.

He did not answer its call.

He did not return.

NOT STRANGE AT ALL

from their owner, to drive him hurriedly out to the chautauqua tent on the edge of town. Tom agreed, but the horse took his time, and Old Tom, hunched over in his seat, struck his whip at all protruding vegetation along the way. The man at his side was absorbed with his own thoughts and had nothing to say.

There was no intention on the part of Old Tom to take in the chautaqua, but just outside the tent there grew some toothsome blue grass, and he loosened the bridle and permitted the faithful horse to graze.

Thus Old Tom heard the speaker on the platform inside the tent introduced to the audience that included practically everybody in town; heard him go back to the beginning of the world and lead ponderously down to the present age of unrest and its need for strong men. Old Tom was about as much interested in the flow of oratory as the congressman had been in the old fellow who had driven him to the tent. Until—until—

"And, ladies and gentlemen, what we need in public office today is men of honest character—men, I might say—along the type of that gentleman who has long lived in your midst—Old Tom Austin!"

Needless to say, as these words vibrated there was somebody outside that tent who perked up his ears. Doubtless, ears inside the tent perked up, too. Old Tom ran his hand thoughtfully through his white hair. There was no mistake about the speaker actually having uttered the words. Old Tom grew limp as he thought about his dead spring, his wasted summer, his soured years of autumn. And yet, by jove!

Old Tom put back the bridle on the horse and drove home. His wife had gone, white waisted and black skirted, to the chautauqua. He was alone in the little house. First he went to the glass above the kitchen sink and peered into it for some time. The longer he looked the firmer he decided that he had a distinguished appearance if only his whiskers were trimmed. And on stepping back and squaring the droop in his shoulders, he could see that there was framework there for a Prince Albert coat and a white vest. He wondered if Goldberg Bros. would stand him off for the coat.

A rainstorm threatened before the congressman finished his address at the tent, and the crowd, absorbed in what the clouds might have in mind, scurried home. Thus there was no forming of groups on the way home, no altering of the impression that the speaker had left when he had eulogized a fellow townsman.

That the town had been puzzled goes without saying. But the speaker had leaped from the local eulogy to problems in a far-away part of the globe, and the audience had followed along. Just what was said at four hundred different supper tables is not recorded.

But at the Austin supper table, Mrs. Austin, while helping herself to some of the cold roast, remarked, with set lips:

"It's about time folks was seeing you in your true light at last, Thomas. There ain't a man in this town better posted than you are on the league of nations. And you had every one of those battles figured out before they was fought."

After that, getting the whiskers trimmed was but the matter of a few strokes of the scissors by the barber under the bank, and Goldberg Bros. took a note for the Prince Albert and the white vest. There were arguments, but they resulted in the consensus of opinion that in all his thirty years in the town Old Tom had never picked a pocket nor committed any midnight burglaries.

Thomas C. Austin was elected to the state legislature that fall by an overwhelming majority. He was standing in front of the Revere hotel when the returns came in. In the language of the newspaper reporter, "he received the news calmly."

And when Thomas C. Austin came back home after that first term he was full fledged. Beneath the white vest he had filled out. His manner was reserved and condescending. The porter at the hotel allowed him a chair by the window and permitted him to cock his feet on the radiator.

He was sitting thus one night when Bert Hall came back to town. It was a rainy night and Bert had his coat collar turned up. Mr. Hall peered furtively into the dimly lighted hotel office and then, apologetically, he entered. Even then he did not turn down his coat collar. His shirt beneath was soiled. The big business deal out west had not panned out. Finally Hall's eyes wandered to the gentleman in the hotel by the window. He started.

"Why, it's—it's!" he began, confused.

"Glad to see you again, Hall," greeted the Hon. Mr. Austin, crisply.

And then, as they engaged in conversation, what had happened during the months that Hall had been away came out. After a time Hall cleared his throat, a new light came into his eyes, and, with an attempt at his old bravado, he caught himself just as he was about to slap the gentleman on the neatly trimmed beard on the back.

"It was me that give that fellow your name that day, Tom. Sure it was me. I can prove it." Then, after a pause: "Could ya—could ya lend me a couple of dollars?"

tinged here with a gleam of amusement.

Then—

"I could not tell you, madam, I am expecting a wire, any moment, to let me know when Mr. Wye will be back, and will request him to ring you up . . . I could not tell you, madam, indeed . . . Mr. Wye has said nothing to myself . . . Very good, madam. Good-by."

Then—

"That's all right, tell us about her. Sob it all out on my shoulder!"

"You ass, there's nothing to sob. Anyhow, not what you think," retorted young Wye vigorously. "Some idiot's been trying to be funny, that's all. There's too much chapter and verse about it for it to be just a mistake."

"Mistake, what do you mean by mistake?"

"Good Lord, it's Miss Ashton herself. . . ."

"You?"

At the same time young Wye gasped.

The manager, beholding a man to deal with here ceased to exist. He was only conscious of a quick further flame lighted it up, and she exclaimed, aghast——

"O, Sybil, you've been there? gasped the aunt, withdrawing her hand with a start from that of young Wye—who had never yet seen any one so completely panic stricken. "My dearest child, you went?"

"Yes, and not much satisfaction did we get out of the fellow, though I think we put the wind up him rather," young Wye tried to carry it off with a laugh. When I told him that I intended to bring an action for libel——"

This word broke off on a staccato note. A surprising change had come into the meek face under the gray hair net and the elder Miss Ashton gasped again.

"Libel? O no, you can't do that. You mustn't do anything of the kind. You can't—can't bring any action!"

"But, auntie, certainly. Why not?"

Auntie, breathless and crimson; auntie, clutching at the silver chain for her eyeglasses; auntie of all people, brought out this paralyzing announcement.

"B-b-because, you see, I sent that announcement to the paper myself!"

A second's indescribable pause.

Blank anguish on the face of the girl.

In the eyes of the young man, a dawning and dismayed sympathy.

Poor lady! He saw it all. Of course! This, the only relative apparently, belonging to this particularly attractive girl, Miss Sybil Ashton—this aunt—why, she ought to be in some home!

But she had still enough wits about her to guess his thought.

"I'm not mad," she announced, with a queer tremulous dignity holding her own. "It sounds mad. But I'll explain. Do sit down, Mr. Wye. I shall have to tell you all about it now. Of course, it all began with that—that——" she cleared her throat, "that young man on the fruit farm——"

Sybil Ashton demanded blankly, "What fruit farm?"

"In some place where there were no nice girls for the young men to get to know, you know," the spinster went on tremulously. "So one day when he was packing up apples for a cargo to England he scratched his name and address with a needle on the rosy peel of the apple and put underneath. Please write!

"But, auntie——"

"The rosy cheeked English girl who unpacked that apple began a correspondence, Sybil. And—and it ended in her going right out to California or wherever it was and getting married and living happ——"

"Auntie," coldly. "I fail to see what that has got to do with this; a story you read in a book?"

"It was so pretty and pathetic," from the incorrigibly romantic spinster, turning to the bewildered guest, "and so like Sybil——"

"Like me?" her niece protested in a small scream.

"Dearest, I couldn't help being reminded of you. Not the Californian part. But, really, some nice girls at home here do seem to see no more young men than if they were buried alive in apples on fruit farms somewhere. No, do let me finish, dear! There are girls who have no brothers and no sort of beginning to get men to come to the house! Pretty girls, too! I was one myself . . . such pretty browny-gold hair . . . all gray now . . . and no romance at all, except out of . . . of library catalogues . . . I think it's horrible . . . but O Sybil, it does run in families!"

"Auntie——"

"Just let me finish," hurried on the mischief maker, tremulously. "I thought if I could only . . . only stop that in time! . . . If I could turn it, somehow. . . . Even if it were all contradicted tomorrow the idea would have been brought into this house!"

She turned from the girl—a monument of embarrassment now—to the young man with unreadable emotion behind his honest eyes.

She fluttered on. "It—it looked so dreadful in print, though. This morning. . . . It was all different. I didn't dare explain to Sybil when she looked so furious——"

The gentle fraud turned again—to a Sybil looking more furious still.

At the sight of it that tremulous flow of excuse died away. The Victorian aunt faltered . . . she took refuge in the weapon of her times—a weapon even now not without efficacy.

Tears!

With a choking little apology, and fumbling in the breast of that gray silk shirt for a handkerchief, she sidled out of the drawing room.

"I say——" exclaimed young Wye, panic stricken at this sight of an unfamiliar arm. "I say, I'm so mad sorry, I——"

"It's you I'm sorry for," retorted the flushed and distracted Sybil. "Auntie is a—a disgrace!"

"But, good Lord, she was crying!" urged the warrior, gazing miserably at the door of exit. "I say, Miss Ashton! Go to her, won't you? Explain to her that as far's I'm concerned. . . . Heavens above! It's only you ladies I was worrying about! As for the darned old action—libel, indeed! I was pulling that manager's leg the whole time. There won't be another word said, of course!"

His eyes met the girl's eyes, met, lingered. . . . An odd thing happened; an abrupt and unexpected and unexplained thing; out of his eyes there glanced for a second the deep down subconscious personality of the young man, seeing ahead. . . .

It was the essential Arthur signaling to the sweetheart of his sudden choice. "Don't you know me? This is to be our last meeting, is it? . . . After I've seen you? I'll never leave you now! . . ."

It was the essential Sybil that signaled back in a look, "Why should I let you go?"

Then every day took command of them again and it was as if that instinctive flash had never been. The conventional Mr. Wye explained, "If we let this go on for, say, a fortnight, Miss Ashton . . . d'you think you could stand it? Officially, of course; then, when you—er—jilt me, it won't be such a shock or seem as if one of us had treated the other badly. . . . A girl could quite decently change her mind in that time, couldn't she?"

"Quite," said the conventional Miss Ashton.

"Then that's understood. But I—I really can't go until that's explained to your aunt. If you don't mind——?"

Miss Ashton the younger found Miss Ashton the elder sobbing her heart out into her elderdown.

"Auntie, don't! It's quite all right. Don't, don't! Here, take this nice clean handkerchief of mine. He—Mr. Wye—is being most awfully kind about all this . . . that's better . . . but O, auntie! I do wish you'd tell me one thing——"

"Wuh—what, dearest——?"

"Why, why did you fix upon him"—she found herself blushing for no reason—"of all people, as the subject of this—this appalling experiment?"

"Because," sighed the spinster aunt on the back-tow of a sob, "because I knew his uncle. . . . I mean I danced with him, once. He wuh—was as good looking as this one. Perhaps all Arthurs are, rather. . . . And somehow, Sybil, when you just mentioned, casually, this one's name after you'd been to that house, it bub-brought it all back. A silly old woman's dream, dearest. I—I—I thought I'd like to see what those two names looked like in print . . . together. Don't scold me, Sybil."

The girl of a sturdier type was melted now. "You absurd old darling—I'm not going to scold——"

"Then," took up, diffidently, the woman of a generation that did sometimes gain its ends, against odds, "then will you, dearest, please ask this Mr. Wye to stay to lunch?"

After all, you see, the marriage was arranged! . . .

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

If young Wye had not been thoroughly disgruntled by all this extravagance he would not have selected as a quiet spot for tête-à-tête a place where a taxi was waiting at the door. Good Lord, what a place! Where the commissionaire was a personage and the lounge lizards were in full force. Where the head waiter was a dictator and the cabaret was in full swing. Where the dinner was a banquet and the wine list was a work of art. Where the women were dressed to kill and the men were dressed to be killed. Where the music was a jazz band and the floor was a dancing platform. Where the lights were dim and the shadows were deep. Where the air was heavy with perfume and the atmosphere was heavy with cigarette smoke. Where the noise was deafening and the confusion was worse confounded. Where the waiters were rushed and the patrons were pushed. Where the checks were large and the tips were larger. Where the food was expensive and the drinks were more so. Where the entertainment was high class and the prices were higher class. Where the cover charge was a crime and the check was a calamity. Where the bill was a shock and the tip was a knockout. Where the whole thing was a mistake.

Young Wye had not been thoroughly disgusted by all this extravagance. He would tell me the form you'd like the contradiction to take in the evening papers—I say, we can't discuss that here on these steps. . . . Is it too early for lunch? Well, then, if you're not doing anything for the moment can't we get hold of a taxi and find some quiet spot where we can sit down and talk this over?"

The BURNT CHILD

by Jack Lait

DAN, in his growing aptitude for defenses against "what must be," has barricaded and intrenched himself against the elements.

But when they smite him in the frenzy of might that will not be manacled or dammed, or stemmed, man, the mean atom, is flung by winds, whelmed by waters, consumed by fires, his feeble and futile obstructions as straws before the gale, the flood, or the flames. He lifts his helpless hands aloft in wild wonder and reverential supplication and cries, "Lo, it is the hand of God!"

It is the hand of God when torrential waters engulf the earth; it is the hand of God when mad winds uproot and pulverize; it is the hand of God when the bowels of this ball whereon we creep and crawl belch forth and mountains shake and cities quake; it is the hand of God when the typhoon tears, the avalanche descends, the cataclysmic crash of the tornado cracks its crushing lash.

But when fire destroys and kills and exterminates it is—more often—the hand of a mischievous child or of a careless cook.

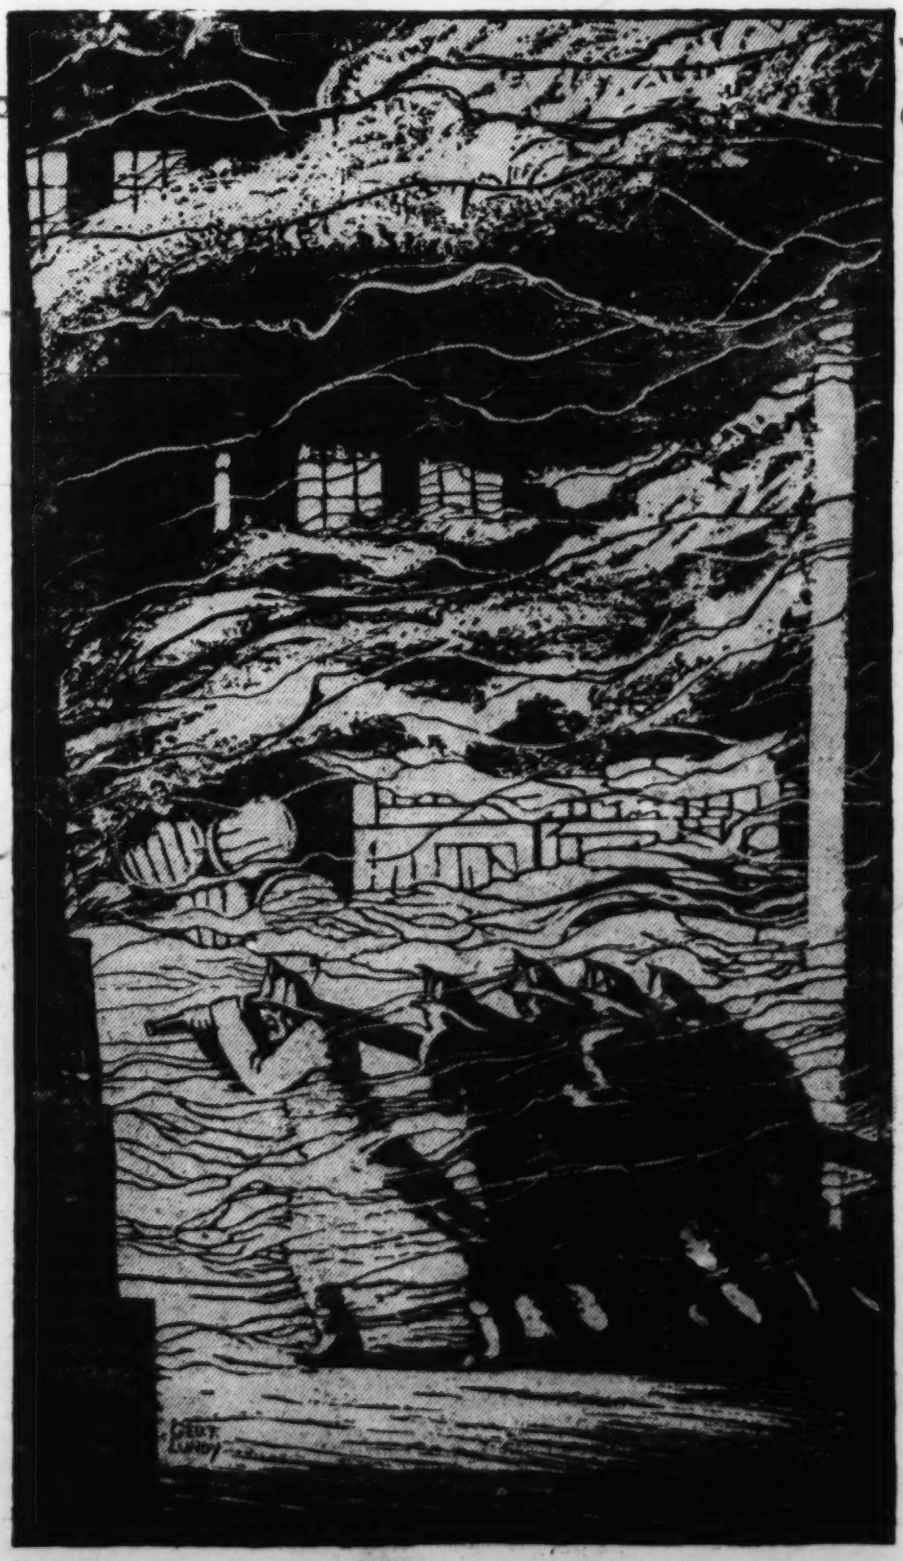
Dynamite is as a baby's sneeze compared with lightning or with seismic holocausts, yet every ounce is guarded from heedless hands. A loaded revolver which might at most endanger half a dozen lives is locked away, legislated against, fearfully fingered with gingerly touch. Yet infants and imbeciles have open access to any number of matches, any of which can by a slight maneuver create a conflagration. The youngster playing with a lucifer starts the deadly tenement house fire, and the records call it an "accident"; an ember from a hunter's breakfast kindling sets the vast forest fire, and the records call that "carelessness."

Fire has caused more horrors than all the other catastrophic consequences of chemical and physical phenomena combined. Yet schoolkids spend their pennies for matches and light bonfires and clap their hands.

There are a million agencies to fight fire, thousands to indemnify against loss from it, and almost none to prevent it.

Fire is the only hand-made man-made visitation of all the destructive manifestations of nature, controllable, uncontrolled.

Fire has entered into judicial and legislative and executive deliberations and considerations in the ratio of perhaps 1 per cent with firewater, though it has impoverished and slain, wiped out and maimed, razed and ruined.



She could see that fire now.

This is the story of a fire.

Edna Holden feared fire like the proverbial burnt child.

Clint Holden, her father, hated fire as fiercely as she feared it. He was a fireman, captain of a hook and ladder company in a more than good sized town. All his adult life he had spent in the service of the municipality and in the livery of its fire department. He had seen so many fires, from flickers to conflagrations, that he had learned to know, beyond most men, what this thing meant.

And he pursued his vocation with the palpitating passion of an avenging crusader rather than with the lackadaisical and spiritless application of other public jobholders, who gave to their work that perfunctory compliance with the printed book of rules which marks the attitude of the average man toward his daily routine tasks.

Clint Holden had been a husky young pipeman when Edna's mother became Edna's mother. A succession of unusually perilous and frequent fires had struck the city shortly before the child's birth, and the anxious wife had approached the crisis in panic and quivering trepidation over her husband's continuous dangers. Maybe this left Edna with a prenatal horror of fire. However it was, as she grew, and after her mother passed away and she became the sole caretaker and the sole living love of the fire-fighter, she continued to dread his calling.

The sound of engine bells chilled her veins. While other children ran gleefully as near as they were permitted to the doors of the fire house to see the men slide down the polished pole and into their red lined blue jackets in one motion, to see the complex harness fall and buckle as though by magic upon the backs of the blooded horses who appeared in their proper places as though by miracles, to see the shiny engine and the long hook and ladder truck, and the dumpy hose cart bump and whizz out, Edna, the daughter of the most famous fireman in town, adopted daughter and mascot of the company, envied by every youngster for a mile, covered her eyes and ears with her little hands—and prayed.

After Edna's mother died the girl spent much of her time with him in and about the fire house. As he rose in rank his duties required more and more of his presence there. The motherless girl was lonely, and Holden could scarcely afford servant night," the girl said, smiling, and watching him with delight in his wonder at the instrument. She was a child—or a native—in her simplicity. She stood there erect, smiling; so beautiful, and young, and budding.

Twyford looked at her.

"We heard it last night—"

"Yes," she cried; she clapped her hands in joy. "Yes, I thought you would hear. I played to you. Listen."

She scurried to the piano a vision of slim, of brown, nimble loveliness, then her face turned to him laughing; his eyes were arrested by the lift of her small brown chin, the sweep of her thin, fine glowing throat. Her great eyes shone with a glory of laughter. She played to him.

She played to him, and it seemed as if she had flung into the air a handful of gems. Jeweled notes of song flashed and shone, trembled and danced in the very air. She looked at him and smiled and about her there seemed to shimmer a glittering and radiant mist of perfect melody. It was something from Bellini, he recognized the melody. But Bellini infused with rapture. It was magical. It was wondrous. This girl, half savage, and almost entirely uncivilized, wrung from the heart of her song a fire that was authentic and divine. Twyford, no musician, but a cultured appreciator of music, could only stare at this miracle manifest to his eyes.

She stopped and laughed childlike at the wonder in his face.

"Magnificent," he cried, outside his calm self. "It is wonderful—beyond words."

"It is genius," she said startlingly, with the unconcern of a child.

He gasped at her exact definition.

"It is. But how do you know? Who gave you that word?"

"My father. He said that when I play it is genius. He said that his playing was wonderful. He had played all his life. But he could not play as I play. He told me that. It is genius when I play—different to his playing. That is what he said.

Twyford stared and laughed.

"What is genius, then?" he demanded to test her.

"When I play," she smiled back with the simplicity of a girl of 6. "That is what my father said."

Obviously, she did not know what genius meant. It was a word, a label to distinguish her playing from her father's.

An amazing girl. A girl who put brown, naked legs under the keyboard, whose bare foot pressed on the fortissimo pedal—a native, a savage, who played as the masters played. Certainly an astonishing girl. Twyford stared at her and about him, trying to get to the bottom of this mystery.

Their meeting had too much of the dramatic in it for him to have found out much about her. He had been astonished at her unexpected Italian. They had not talked much in the short walk to the village.

He had gasped: "Who are you? What are you doing here?" And she had answered with the baffling directness of the simple and the young. "I am Elena. I live here. This is my house."

"But I mean—what are you doing here, right away in the forest?" he had cried.

"It is my home," she had repeated. "I live here; I always have. You will see a village presently. I live in it."

That was all. She had answered his questions exactly, as a child would, and he had found out nothing about her.

He looked now about the big, bare room, trying to find a clew to her identity. It was plainly furnished, as all bush houses are. Some Para chairs of cane, a table, and the rest. All the furniture was strikingly usual; a thousand settlers' huts had the same stuff, and it had probably been bought from the same Brazilian stores. Only the piano was an oddity. Yes, and the pictures.

Twyford strode to the walls and looked at them, the smiling eyes of the girl following him. There were not many pictures. They were old steel or wood block engravings, all [illegible]led by the damp. Nearly all were [illegible]ans—Rossini, Cherubini, Sarti, Scar[illegible]er, Meyerbeer, Beethoven, Haydn, [illegible] others. Twyford noticed at once that there were no modern names. It was as though music had stopped somewhere about 1850 for this house.

There were two other pictures, a print of Naples, and another of Francis, the king of Naples, whom Garibaldi overthrew. Twyford paused before them. Did they give the clew?

"Who is this?" he asked, watching the girl.

"My mother is there." She pointed to one of the unwalled shanties.

"It is the king," she said.

"What king? Why?"

"My father called him the king."

"Ah," said Twyford. "What did your father tell you of this king?"

"It was cruel," she said, her eyes flashing. "Men who knew nothing and who only thought of themselves would not have him as their chief. They drove him away. My father hated those men. He came here. He said to me: 'Remain here always, Elena; mankind has become evil.'"

Twyford saw it all. The father had been a follower of royalty. Perhaps the king of Naples had been his patron—since he seemed to have been a musician. When the revolution came to Italy, and his king was deposed, he fled his native land in disgust. Italians did seem to turn to the new world. South America was full of them. And, no doubt, in anger of his brother men, the royalist musician had pushed deep into the heart of the wilderness. He wanted to escape from brutal civilization. With his piano he had shut himself away from the contamination of a hateful humanity. Yes, no doubt that was the story.

He questioned the girl to find out if his deductions were right; if she could give him details. She could not. Her father had come up the river in a big canoe away from mankind. He had done nothing, he had sat all day thinking or making music on the piano, nothing more. That was all she could tell. He had done nothing but live and brood and play. His marriage with a woman of the village had, perhaps, only been an incident, he must have needed a housekeeper. It had been an incident that had begot a marvel—Elena.

He found her more marvelous as time went on. He did not push towards Madeira. He remained with this wonder of a girl and with her music. She was a continual astonishment, a continual puzzle. One moment she was all primitive savage; a laughing, care-free, soulless thing with barbarous habits; a proper companion to the half-naked aborigines about her. A creature fitted to the wilderness, belonging to it, part of it. And then, at a touch of her thin fingers on the keyboard, she was a genius. She ceased to be a wild, untutored thing. She became something tremendous and sumptuous. She became a thing almost divine. She seemed to tower above the universe by means of her tremendous and unfaltering gift.

She swept Twyford away. A lover of music, he had heard most of the great pianists of the world. He had sat at their feet in the concert rooms of New York, London, Berlin, Munich, and Vienna, adoring their indubitable magic. But he felt that whatever the magic of those mighty ones, this slip of a girl, this uncivilized barbarian, had within her soul that which would make her a giant among them—more, would make them acknowledge her supremacy.

She had a tremendous technical skill and that something more, a mighty unfettered spirit that seemed to lift her when she played into regions immense, splendid, almost preternatural. There was a soul, a fervor, a fire, an emotion, a glow about her music that seemed to make it fill the very arch of the sky with its intimate and disturbing wonder. The meanest melody under her touch became as immense as the stupendous forest about her, as immense as the vast tropic solitude that environed her.

The vastness of the still forest and the empty lands—Twyford caught at this to explain her unique gift. She had gained her great technical ability from her father. He had taught her carefully, studiously, patiently, all the mechanics of piano playing. He had taught her all he knew—but already the immensity of primitive nature, the vast scale of life all about her was in her veins. It had come to her with her mother's blood, with the blood of her forefathers. The marriage of the civilized and uncivilized had unlocked the age-old magic in her veins. The blending of diverse bloods means genius frequently. She had been born a genius.

She had grown up in a fashion to stimulate genius. About her had been the tremendous exuberance of nature calling to the tremendous exuberance of life in her veins. And while she felt this, drank it in, her father had concentrated, with the discipline of the technician, this fervor; had directed it and conserved it so that its force should be expressed with such marvelous power.

He had taught her from examples of the masters who lived before the day of his exile. She knew all the old, melodious masters of Italy, Germany, and France. She had a repertoire of some 250 pieces—and not a single sheet of music!

Twyford had noticed that always she played without score, and that very frequently she was departing by some slight yet exquisite variation from the original melody as he remembered it. He had asked her where was her music, partly to make sure that she had interpolated a variation, partly because it occurred to him that her father's name—which she did not appear to know—might be written on the flyleaf of the song scores. He had difficulty in explaining what he meant. And in the end she said with a smile, "Oh, those. They have gone, they have fallen to pieces. But it matters little; I remember always." Wear and tear, tropic damp, and the work of ants had done their work; there was not a single sheet of music in the house.

He learned that in the beginning, when she was very young, her father had taught her to read and play from music. But her splendid memory had soon made reading unnecessary and the neglected music books had gone the way of all printed paper in the tropics.

And then there was another point. The piano was in beautiful condition and perfectly in tune. How was that, Twyford had asked. The girl had said: "I keep it so. My father taught me how."

She showed him a large tin box. It contained piano making tools and piano tuning tools. There was a store of piano strings, and there were spare parts, striking keys, piano maker's felt, and the rest. Her father had prepared for isolation in the bush. He had provided everything for keeping his piano in trim condition for years. He had learned how to effect repairs, and he passed on his knowledge to his daughter. Elena was the best equipped genius in the world. She was entirely self-supporting.

Twyford, rubber and orchids forgotten, stayed in this unknown village in the fold of Nowhere, enraptured by the girl's playing—allured by her personality. The magic of her music had already won him. He had on the first day felt as a man who had discovered an eighth wonder of the world might feel. He was tingling and excited by his discovery. The bizarre quality of this unexpected happening gave it an atmosphere of strangeness and mystery that placed it right outside anything that he had ever known.

He saw the stir she would create if she appeared suddenly amid the peoples of the civilized world. He could picture the shock the world would experience when this strange, barbarous genius came out from the depths of the solitude and displayed her uncanny power amid the jaded commonplace of the wherein to walk as a goddess half clothed; her method of eating, living, sleeping were barbarous. He pictured her in the crushing confines of a town. Roof over head, walls frowning down on her. She would have to crush those thin, flexible feet into shoes, and she had never worn shoes. She would have to clothe that virile, pliant body. She would have to sleep in a bed, sit at a table, of the leashed terror that this black and waiting noiselessness held. Silence tremendous, bated, crawling with suggestion.

Twyford could scarcely breathe under the wonder of that miracle of playing. He looked filling rush and thrum of the dense mass of rain remained.

or tutors or companions. So, when she was not at school, she was usually in the headquarters of No. 1.

The other firemen made much of her. They got her a little uniform and a helmet of tin, and on parade she rode with "Gimpy" Galligan on the seat of the hook and ladder wagon. Gimpy had been crippled in a factory fire, falling two stories off an icy window ledge, and had been retired to the driver's throne. He could climb there like a monkey in spite of his short leg, and he was a wizard with horses, was Gimpy.

He had a son, a boy a year or two older than Edna. But he kept the lad away from the engine house, for he knew the fascination it exercised on boys, and he wanted his Ned to cultivate inclinations for other, better employment. His own plight, his own shabby wages after he had given the best of his life to public fire-fighting, had taught him what a precarious and thankless business it was. He wanted his Ned to be a lawyer or an alderman or a veterinary or something profitable and high-toned like that.

Ned champed and bit his lip, for he longed to mingle with the men and hitch on the hose cart and go to fires. And here he was, sentenced to play ball with insipid youths whose fathers were nobody—physicians and merchants and clerks—he, who by heredity was entitled to swell himself around No. 1. And his wounds grew deeper and saltier when he saw a girl, a pug-nosed and freckle-faced female, disqualified by her sex from being a legitimate member of that charmed squadron, elevated to mascothood, profaning a fire uniform, riding in state on the seat of his father's red truck—the seat to which he had been born.

A fine enmity was engendered between Edna and Ned. And when Ned stuck out his tongue at her, and called her a tomboy and a red-head, Edna threw away her tin helmet, took off her unie, and resigned as mascot. Captain Holden reluctantly accepted the abdication. That night Ned begged his father to let him succeed Edna, promised to study his catechisms faithfully, and to never play truant from school again. Gimpy shook his head.

Edna still frequented the firehouse because she wanted to be near her father. But her presence was now entirely unofficial. Whenever an alarm rang in she remained, all a-tremble, until the sound of the horses returning brought her flying to the door, watching feverishly. When her father jumped from the lead stand on the truck and started unbuttoning his reefer she was around his neck as he reached the ground.

There was always present within her that dread that he would not return. At home, where the alarm gong was on the wall beside her father's bed, she never missed it at any hour, and all the time he was away on emergency night duty she spent with her hands clasped, often on her knees, and slept not a wink until he had returned safely.

She knew every signal, every bell-tap; and she could judge by the nature of the call and the general location of its origin the comparative danger of the fire.

The spectacular phases of the game never registered on the girl. What looked to Ned to be glorious and gallant seemed to the girl only to be grisly, hazardous, and threatening. Ned, in his waking dreams, longed for the terrible business of sending challenges into the teeth of the flames, looking toppling walls out of countenance, swerving about street corners on two wheels with a ten-ton truck rocking and reeling and skidding a hundred feet behind him. To Edna it was all painful—necessary, but harrowing.

In her father's room at home there were the implements of the fireman; a big gong, which she couldn't reach, but which as a child she threw buttons at, and which she would watch for hours waiting for the hammer to hit when an alarm "struck in." And there was the "joker." That was a telegraphic receiving instrument which stood on a little shelf near the big bell. It used to click and clatter cryptic messages, which her father understood in some mysterious way, though it talked no Christian tongue, as Edna often mumbled when its tidings meant that her father's hot dinner was going to the dogs, or he would have no ham and eggs that morning. And beside the joker stood the department telephone, one of the ungainly old sort, on the wall.

Now, all these gimcracks worked simultaneously with similar ones in the fire house, [illegible]d in each engine station in the division. [illegible]hen a "box" was "pulled" somewhere on the outside, it registered automatically by repeated whangs on the gong [illegible]ach place—"one-two-three-four-one-two-one-two-three," for instance, counting out 423, which was the number of the alarm at the rolling mills.

The joker was a pony telegraph service radiating from an operator at battalion headquarters. It sent messages of limited but varied significance. It spoke not in Morse code, but in special language of simple etymology. There were no dashes, only dots—snappy little clicks. It counted by the same system as the bell-taps. There was 2-2-3, for example, the call for the Holden home, and a message following that was intended for there only. On the other hand, there was 3-3, which meant "Attention, engine house," and "3-3-3-3," which meant "Attention, department," upon which every one on the lines must take cognizance of what would follow.

Born a fireman's daughter, raised with a fireman's dangergraphs as her playthings, hungrily asking questions for hours on her big daddy's stout proud knee about these puzzling implements, Edna grew to know them—know them backward, straight on, in the daytime, in her sleep.

And as she grew to be a hazel-eyed young woman of mature sense she began to fathom not only what the signals said, but what some of them meant. They had to do with death and with danger. If not, why was it that each company always "reported in" when it had returned from th[illegible] response to an alarm? Her father told her it was to give notice that the company was ready to go to another fire. But Edna always felt it was to assure her that her daddy had come safely back. She would have it no other way. And it grew to be a thrilling, clutching pastime with her, sitting under the joker after the gong had struck, to wait its message that the company had come home—the message which ended with "3-3-4," Captain Holden's signature.

The captain counseled her not to sit up nights at this game. Especially of late there had been some nasty blazes in the stockyards, that bugbear region all over the world for firemen, and he was sleeping in the engine house most all the time now because he wanted to give quick service. Edna always bobbed up at the f[illegible]t sound of iron upon brass, just as he [illegible] in the dormitory. And she huddled with her bare feet up on a chair—for hours sometimes—and, half dazed, waited for "328," which meant "Back at the engine house," signed "3-3-4," which meant that Captain Holden himself was sending the bulletin.

It was Sunday morning. Edna's father had been home for supper on Saturday, had spent the early evening with her, had kissed her as he put on his cap and coat to go to the firehouse for the night, promising to come back early and wake her in time to go with her to church. No strike disturbed her perceful slumber until, like an oath in a sanctuary, the fire bell burst forth with vibrant clamor at just about daylight.

Edna came up like a jack-knife blade; "6-5-6-8," she heard the knocker wallop on the trembling gong. That was a stockyards call—all the 6's were from "the yards." Edna glanced at her clock; it said past half past 6. Pshaw! Now daddy probably wouldn't be back in time for the breakfast they had planned together. She rose, threw on a kimono, stepped to her window, glanced out.

Flying by like a rocket was her father, seated in the low red racing car of the battalion chief, for he was now in charge of the division. Besides him sat Roger McCarthy, his chauffeur, whose teeth was set and whose eyes were squarely front as he sped in the van of the shiny engine and the hook-and-ladder that would come plunging by in a moment.

Edna smiled through her disappointment—smiled with pride. For Roger was a driver as sure as certainty was sure, as fast as gasoline could spark, as daring as became the charioteeer to the fleet, fearless captain of the fire brigade, for whom speed laws were never written, who had the right of way over all, who clanged with his foot at every twenty feet the brazen warning, "Here I come"—which none but he dared to sound!

It is a grand sight, the scarlet auto of the fire squad commander burning up the pavement, sending the touring car of the wayfarer, the limousine of the luxuriant and the rickety roadster of the plodding plebeian to the curb or down alleys in frantic and respectful yielding of the highway to the king of the road. Full many a man who might have commanded millions or directed armies has envied that driver for the fire chief, who could "let 'er out," who never even glanced at crossing police, who banged a gong, whizzed on like a carmine comet, and left a streak of exhaust and a flash of glory to tell that he had come and gone between winks, and was on his way to carry combat to that dread scourge, fire.

The man in the passenger seat was her father—her hero, her adored, her pal, her guardian angel, and her earthly deity. The boy beside him at the wheel was Roger McCarthy, the square-shouldered stripling with the nutbrown curls who had looked into her eyes and who had made her heart thump as never it had thumped before—not even for her father.

Edna bent over to see the scarlet car with its precious jewels as long as it was in sight. She saw it pivot around a corner. Then she saw the gallant horses belting after it with the spark-sprinkling engine, and behind that the three-abreast fullbreeds straining lightly on their collars as they thundered on with the careening hook-and-ladder. On the seat Gimpy Galligan, the light of a battler in action in his eye, held the six reins between the fingers of his one hand as he buckled his belt with the other.

Running along the walk was Ned, fast losing ground. He halted when he came about opposite Edna's window. He was winded. He had been to early mass and had stopped at the engine house just in time to hear the alarm come in. The lad's blood boiled to enter into it. He would—and perhaps he could—have "hitched" on the truck, but he feared his father, the father who was willing to give everything he had to the fire-fighting cause except his son. Edna slid behind the curtains so that he would not see the look of pity on her face, for she knew what was eating at his heart now that he was a young man, just as it had gnawed there when he had envied her the toy helmet and the estate of the insider years before.

Edna turned from the window. Slowly she started, as was her habit, through the long corridor toward her father's room. And her thoughts went back to the "6-5-6-8," the stockyards cry for help. She didn't like that. The uncanny peace of the Sabbath morning, too, was a gray background against which came up in jumping relief forebodings that she could not shut out by closing her eyes. Those packinghouse fires were troublesome always and dangerous usually. For maybe half an hour she sat, her knees drawn up, the hand that supported her chin resting on them. She was not only listening to the joker—she was watching it.

Thus she saw the little arm rise before she heard it fall and begin to blab: "6-5-6-8—2-11." O, this fire was no peanut; the "2-11" was calling out the whole battalion. Edna shuddered. Two-elevens were not unknown in her life. Her dad had weathered dozens. But—what was that? The joker again. "6-5-6-8—4-11." The whole department!

Edna sat stiff. This daylight four-eleven from the stockyards tinderboxes was no friendly salute. It meant at its lightest that her poor father would stagger in, besmoked and grimed, wearied and worn out after hours of strain and struggle. His company, she knew, never called for help unless it was sorely needed. His battalion, she knew, never called for help unless it was desperate.

She could see that fire now, engines and hose-wagons and ladder-trucks pouring in from all avenues, huge hoses networking the streets, brave men scurrying around with axes and with nozzles, climbing up against flaming walls, shouting and swearing, hacking and aiming the thick streams of sizzing water. She could see her father, trumpet in hand, his rubber boots drawn to his hips, wading through the knee-high water in the sopping streets, braying at a novice handling a hose as though it were a camera instead of angling it so that the volume of water would plunk into the heart of the flames. She could visualize him scaling a ladder and pushing into a burning room, roaring at men he could not see, damning and deviling like a demon. She had never been "on" a four-eleven, but in her mascot days she had been to fires. She had seen him work when he and his dozen men had a treacherous blaze strangled and on its knees in jig-time. She could imagine him under the stress of one that he felt was stealing beyond his control. She knew how he hated fire, she knew the frenzy with which he wrestled it. And she was fearful.

Hour after hour she sat, numb. Why did not something come over the wires? All hands were off on that great fire and there was nothing to send and there was scarcely any one to send it. The department did not use its communication system for gossiping.

She heard the slight whirr and she saw the arm of the ticker tremble, and she sat rigid.

"One-two-three — one-two—one-two-three-four-five-six-seven-eight"—328—it was No. 1 reporting in. Thank the good angels for that. "One-two-three—one-two—one-two"—322—why, that was Lieut. Egan's signature. Why was he reporting the company in? Why wasn't her father, the battalion chief——

The joker kept on with its grim joking: "One-two-three — one-two-three — one-two-three—one-two-three—one-two-three" — 3333—meant "Attention, everybody." "One-two—one-two"—22—that signified "Use telephone." It was a call to every one on all lines to listen in for a spoken message.

Edna sprang to the wall and picked up her black receiver.

In every engine-house and in every fire-department official's home some one picked up a receiver. And all heard, clear and clarion over the tremulous wires, the voice of the operator at headquarters:

"Fire at X-Z warehouse now under control, all companies in and ready for duty except No. 9 and insurance patrols. Damage estimated at over a million dollars, fully covered. Flames spread to U-T and V-T warehouses, the wind being in a northwesterly direction and——"

Why these prolix details? Edna only half heard them. Stockyards losses mattered little to her. What meant these figures and the velocity of the wind to her? The men—her father—was every one safe?

"——blowing briskly. Company No. 1 was first on the scene, directed by Captain Holden, who led his men into the burning warehouse. They were doing heroic work when the walls——"

Edna felt a shiver run down her spine and she held her breath.

"—collapsed, the roof fell in, and Captain Holden and seventeen of his men were buried under the burning débris."

"Good God!" gasped Edna into her transmitter. It carried over every line. The operator gulped. In broken voice he began again——

"Company 7 worked hard and fast, clearing the wreckage from the imprisoned men. It was burning fiercely. They reached the men and found Captain Holden unconscious and — and fatally hurt. All the injured were taken to Mercy hospital, where——"

The receiver slid out of Edna's nerveless grasp. And mercifully she did not then hear the rest, the tragic paradox of heroes' lives of courage in the actuality of action, given to atone for the thoughtlessness of some unworthy fool:

"—where Pipemen Foley, Kranz, and Finucane and Lieutenant Kline died. The cause of the fire was a careless watchman at the X-Z warehouse, who had fallen asleep on duty with a lighted pipe in his mouth. The pipe fell to the wooden floor, and the whole wing of the building was blazing when a passerby saw the flames and turned in a 'still.'"

Jim. Not on your life. That's the way you always eat my supper."

"You eat too much, Henry—it will kill you, some time," observed Laramie, losing no time in his initiative. He ignored Sawdy's he lighted and shielded in his left hand. he found the cabinet and with his key opened the door. The flame of his match, too carefully guarded, flickered in his fingers, failed, and went out. He thrust it hastily into one

At present, it's just us two. What do you want to do, surrender to me?"

"No!" she snapped the word out furiously. "I won't, not if you kill me."

"Suppose I surrender to you? What do will fall to get home!"

Ignoring the door, he stepped to the open window by which he had entered and, springing through it, was gone.

Laramie, disdaining any further attempt rapidly toward the hiding place of Hawk.

It had been well chosen. On a high plateau of the Falling Wall country, so broken as to forbid all chance travel and to be secure from accidental intrusion—a breeding place for grizzlies and mountain lions—there had once been opened a considerable silver mining camp. Substantial sums had been spent in development and from an old Turkey Creek trail a road had been blasted and dug across the open country divided by the canyon of the Falling Wall river. In its escape from the mountains the river at this point cuts a precipitous gash through a rock barrier and from this striking formation, known as the canyon of the Falling Wall, the river takes its name.

Where the old mine road crosses the plateau across the river an ambitious bridge had been projected. It was designed to replace a ferry at the bottom of the canyon but with the ruinous decline in the value of silver the mines had been abandoned; a weather beaten abutment at the top of the south canyon wall alone remained to recall the story. The earth and rock fill behind this abutment, had been washed out by storms, leaving the framing timbers above it intact, and below these there remained a cave-like space which the decaying timbers served to roof.

Laramie on a hunting trip had once discovered this retreat and had at times used it as a shelter when caught in its vicinity over night. During subsequent visits he found an overhang in the rock behind the original fill that made a second smaller chamber and in this he had as a boy cached his mink and rat traps and the discard of his hunting equipment.

To the people coming in the Falling Wall country with cattle the existence of all this was unknown. Nothing visible betrayed the retreat and to men who rarely left the saddle and had no occasion to cross the bad lands of the Falling Wall, there was slight chance to stumble on it. It was here, a few miles west of his home, that Laramie had carried Hawk.

Making his way in the darkness toward the dugout, Laramie whistled low and clearly, and planting his feet with care on a foothold of old masonry swung down to where a fissure opening in the rock afforded entrance into the irregular room.

A single word came in a low tone from the darkness: "Jim?"

Laramie, answering, struck a match after a little groping, lighted a candle and set it in a niche near where Hawk lay. He was stretched on a rude bunk. The furnishings of the cave-like refuge were of the scantest. Between uprights supporting the old roof, a plank against the wall served as a narrow table; the bunk had been built into the opposite wall out of planking left by the bridge carpenters. For the rest there was little more in the place than the few belongings of a hunter's lodge long deserted. A quilt served for mattress and bedding for Hawk, and his sunken eyes above his black beard showed how sorely he needed surgical care. Laramie provided more lights, opened his kit of dressings and with a pail of water went to work.

What would have seemed impossible to a surgeon, Laramie with two hours crude work accomplished on Hawk's wounds. In a country where the air is so pure that major operations may be performed in ordinary cabins, cleanliness and care even though rude, count for more than they possibly could elsewhere. The most difficult part of the task that night lay in getting water up the almost sheer canyon wall from the river 300 feet below.

Leaving Hawk when the night was nearly spent, Laramie returned to his horse, retraced his blind way through the bad lands and got to the road some miles above where he left it. He started for home but left the road below his place and picking a trail through the hills came out half a mile northwest of his cabin. Here he cached his saddle and bridle, turned loose his horse, and going forward with the stealth of an Indian he got close enough to his cabin to satisfy himself, after painstaking observation, that it was neither in the hands of the enemy, nor under close-range surveillance.

When he neared the house he disposed of his rifle, slipped inside and struck a light. On the stove he found his frying pan face downward and the coffee pot near it with the lid raised. From this he knew that Simeral in his absence had cared for his stock; and being relieved in his mind on this score he laid his revolver at hand and threw himself on the bed to sleep. Day was just breaking.

The Story of a Wonder Girl Who Made Miracle Music in the Heart of the Amazon Forest

BY DOUGLAS NEWTON

WHEN the "boys" finished their game of sticks the thing came. You know how the West Indian Negroes play that interminable game. They squat in two lines facing each other, their hardwood sticks in their hands, and they chant. They chant anything, a Moody and Sankey hymn, a comic song, a sweet indecency from the Moulin Rouge down the river at Para—all melodies come equally well. And at the beat of the tune their sticks clash. They rise solemnly; solemnly they hit the stick opposite.

The song, the high, flat negroid voices, the ringing clash of the hardwood sticks in the quiet clearing amid the tremendous and silent trees, had an effect. Twyford sat smoking and watching. The wood fire wove a strange dance pattern of vermilion on the vulcanite black of the round heads; it shone wetly like blood on the big, grotesque eyes. Behind the squatting boys the light touched the severe columns of the tremendous trees; they seemed as shafts of massive stone supporting the immense vaulting of a dark temple.

The fire smoke rose up in a straight, writhing pillar; turning from scarlet to gold, from gold to gray, until it faded into the night of the sipos that hung like stagnant smoke from tree to tree. It had an air ritualistic, sacrificial. And the dark men about the fierce fire were not hired boys, but priests of a black rite, and the song was of that rite.

Yes, the effect was bizarre, uncanny, monstrous even. This camp in the clearing of the Amazon forest seemed no longer a camp. It was a sanctuary upon which some old and awful ceremonial was being offered.

The boys stopped playing sticks. There was an immense quiet. Then athwart the strange and mysterious atmosphere there came the clear shining notes of a piano—unbelievable thing, a piano. There shot across the darkness the bright movement of the dance music from "Aida." Amazing, almost absurd, to hear the notes of a civilized opera in the primitive wildness of the forest. It was absolutely incredible. Yet it was an absolute fact.

Twyford was startled. The boys had stopped. They were not even talking. The immense hush of the deep bush had settled upon them, the silence was so solid that one could almost finger its texture. Into it, light and glancing, darting, and altogether astonishing, swept the vivid skein of crystalline melody.

A piano playing in the heart of Nowhere, well, that was a thing astounding enough—so astounding as to seem all wrong. Twyford sat rigid in his surprise, sure that his mind, or his memory, or his nerves were playing him a trick. He thought, "perhaps it's fever—the beginning of it." Fever affected one curiously sometimes. He sat up, stiffened his will. The dance from "Aida" continued.

It was not hallucination, it was real. He looked at the boys. They heard it. They were listening. He could see that they had been startled as though by some fright. Their great eyeballs rolled in the red light. He could see that they were looking at him, some grinning, their teeth agleam, others scared, as though his attitude was to decide them whether to be confident or terror-stricken.

He smiled with mechanical unconcern for their benefit, while his mind was bewildered by the breathlessness of the thing. The mind absolutely refused to believe there could be a piano here in the midst of this wilderness of forest. And the piano went on stringing out the sharp, fine notes of the opera.

They were hundreds of miles from the nearest trace of civilization, and the traces of civilization on the river can be very faint. They had traveled deep in a land thick with the forest, following tracks of their own, over an area that only courtesy could call mapped.

This tropical area was all but virgin; that was why Twyford was probing deep into it. He was looking for rubber. He was looking for certain other things, rare orchids, for instance, but rubber was his main concern. He had fitted at Manaos and with his outfit had pushed up the river to the affluent of the Purus. The Purus had led him to anywhere. He had gone on picking up clews from villages, working up the ingarapes [canoe paths] that seemed likely; taking to the hunters' tracks as he had now, until only compass bearings and information from the natives would get him back to humanity again.

There were villages about, villages existing almost incredibly in the vast starkness of the forest. There might even be a village near, hidden away under a fold of the immense emptiness. Such inexplicable morsels of life in this vast unpeopled space did occur. But if these collections of primitive natives living under thatches were marvels in this land, the piano was then a miracle.

She played to him, and it seemed as if she had flung into the air a handful of gems.

And the piano sent the song of "Aida" dancing through the unfathomable deeps of the virgin woods, and in the womb of the age-grown woods they sat and listened. The music came stealing through the tremendous and empty land, through the deep and mysterious curtain of trees; it had a mystical, an eerie quality. It was as a memory of civilization taunting the minds of men shipwrecked on an uninhabited island set in the midst of vacant seas.

It came disembodied, intangible from out the very air. Where did it come from? Twyford's native hunter made a gesture of ignorance. Who could tell? It came from perhaps a league away—or perhaps twenty. In these deep and silent woods sound comes like light in the darkness. Who could tell, indeed? It was a mystery. But somewhere in the southwest in the unpeopled tracts that ran in mystical emptiness towards the high lands of Cuzco, a modern piano was playing a modern song.

Southwest—Twyford was going towards the Madeira. He was pushing east and south. That was his considered plan. Next morning he marched southwest.

So he met the girl Elena.

A slip of a girl with a golden skin; half native, half European, and entirely lovely. A free moving, pliant girl, thin and young, and with the quickness of a boy, yet with that sense of splendid budding that the tropics give to youth.

He met her walking on the forest path they followed. She came, moving superbly, a Doric maiden, clad in a whitish chitron of woven bark cloth, and wearing in the night-dark masses of her hair a jewel flower of jasmine. Her eyes were large, dark, and flashing; and the laughter of racial blood other than that of the moody Amazon natives gave them an unexpected and astonishing vivacity.

She appeared suddenly in the path before them; and she stopped and gazed at them with wonder. They halted, too, looking at her. Twyford's native hunter hesitated and then spoke to her, using a dialect which he had found was the nearest to that of this district.

But the girl did not look at the hunter. She looked at Twyford. A frown of concentration mingled with her smiles, she said: "We expected you. We heard you last night. We heard the men singing."

Twyford understood, and did not answer. The shock of understanding her bewildered him. She said it all again, and then he realized why he understood. She spoke in Italian.

"Italian," he answered, and his own Italian was as slow and as rusty as hers. "You speak Italian?"

"You understand," she used a native word for "understand" at first, and then substituted an Italian. "You understand. I speak it because I am an Italian. I am as my father."

Twyford glanced at the slim, hard beauty of her limbs and figure, and the bony structure showing beneath the bright soft skin of her cheek. Italian her father might have been, but certainly not Italian her mother.

They went with her into the village; a small, seedy village existing heaven knows why and how on the bank of a slow stream. It was the abiding place of a few hundred natives living in the usual homes, a thatch supported on corner poles, with here and there a mud wall on the windward side of the house for protection. It was a veritable village of the aborigines. The men and women who lived there did not know civilization. They were almost as completely removed from it as though the foot of the white man had yet to tread their land.

In the midst of this primitive colony, Elena's house was raised; an unexpected, modern note. Not entirely modern to be sure. There had been an attempt to build an entire house of adobe and planks. The main structure had been completed in this fashion. But the effort appeared to have exhausted itself, and apart from the living rooms the remainder of the house, the wings shooting rearward, were merely shelters of palm leaf thatch on corner poles. Yet it was a modern house in the center of primitive dwellings.

"Your father built that?" asked Twyford.

"Before I was born—when he first came to this place. He has grown up with walls about him. He could not live otherwise. Italians, he said, cannot live outside walls."

"And is your father there now?"

"He is dead," she said it without grief. "My mother is there." She pointed to one of the unwalled shanties. A lean woman was squatting before the shallow roasting pans preparing the inevitable farinha. She did not mind living without walls, but then she was not Italian.

In the big, bare living room of the house, there was the piano. A grand piano, an incongruous and monstrous beast in such a place amid such surroundings. Twyford was fascinated by it.

"That is my father's," she said, laughing up at him. "He brought it with him when he came here."

"From where?" asked the bewildered Twyford. She did not know.

"When he came here," she said again, "he brought it up the river in his great ubas [a canoe hollowed from a tree trunk]. He brought it when he came away from mankind."

She said "mankind." It sounded like a quotation. Many of her words sounded as though they were quotations from the speech of her dead father. Perhaps they were. Twyford did not ask if the piano had come from Italy. He had asked very few questions, for he was stunned. He saw that it had not. It had probably come from Para. It had been built of special wood to defy the tropic insect and the tropic damp; he saw that when he examined it.

"My father made music on that day and or tutors or companions. So, when she was not at school, she was usually in the headquarters of No. 1.

The other firemen made much of her. They got her a little uniform and a helmet of tin, and on parade she rode with "Gimpy" Galligan on the seat of the hose and ladder cart. "Gimpy" had been crippled in a fire one-two-three," for instance, counting out 423, which was the number of the alarm at the rolling mills.

The joker was a pony telegraph service rendering from an operator at Ballston sanctuary, the fire bell burst forth with vibrant clamor at just about daylight.

Edna came up like a jack-knife blade. "6-6-6-3," she heard the knocker wailop on the trembling gong. That was a blockyards call—all the ex-mate from "the Yards" friendly salute. It meant at its lightest that her poor father would sharper in, besmudged and stunned, wearied and worn out after hours of stealth and struggle. His company, she knew, never called for help unless it was sorely needed. The battalion she knew never called for help

For one moment Edna stood staring at the blank wall and at the dangling receiver through which came unintelligible and guttural sounds. Then the blood gushed back to her head, she whirled and ran, and she was tugging on a skirt and calling on the saints.

At the hospital the solemn sisters looked more solemn as they led Edna to the room.

She saw him on the bed, that mighty man who had choked fires with his bare hands, who had driven wide-eyed into horrors, who had felt and fought the heat of the hinges of hell. She saw him lying there, his eyes closed, and on his scarred and battered face, its eyebrows burned away, its flesh raw here and seared there, was the perfect peace that comes with the passing of pain. He stirred. His hand reached over. His eyes opened. He half sat up. A nurse gently pressed him back. He threw her half across the floor with one sweeping swing of his iron arm.

"C'mon, there," he cried. "C'mon there with that hose. Can't you lift the nozzle, you blunderin' bunch of fumble-fingered fish? C'mon there, I say. Hey. What's this? What are you doin' here? Edna! Girl! What are you doin' inside the fire lines? Roger! Hey, Roger McCarthy, take Edna out o' here, pas' the lines; don't let 'er stand where the bricks is fallin'—take 'er——"

The girl moved sidewise, up and out of his range of sight.

"That's right, take my li'l girl past the ropes. Now, c'mon there. Up an' into it, boys. Get a wiggle on. C'mon! What's that? You can't. Well, I can. Gimme that hose. Gimme that nozzle. I'll go in there myself. I don't give a damn how hot it is—gimme that nozzle before I bend this trumpet over your skull, you—you. Hand me that lantern. Hand 'er to me. Get away—I'm goin' in. I'm goin'—I'm—Hey! the light! the lantern! where is it! It's out, out—oh, God, it's dark, it's dark—I can't see, it's dark—I can't—the light—it's—the—oh, my God, it's gone, gone——"

The grizzled gray head, with its hair charred and its scalp smutted with soot and matted with blood and cinders, fell back. The hand toppled across the closing eyes as though to shut out a ghastly visitation. A tremor passed through the giant frame. Then he lay still. His hand curled limply and wabbled to the pillow.

And Edna sank to her knees and her head dropped upon her arms upon the cover, and her body shook with soundless sobs.

Thus and there he found her—not Roger McCarthy but Ned Galligan, the civilian, the boy who had no business there among the victims and the mourners.

He had no business there save to comfort Edna. And it took a brave heart within him to offer consolation, for, in a ward below, his father, game Gimpy Galligan, had passed away some thirty minutes earlier. Galligan had limped into the furnace beside his chieftain. When the timbers crashed in he was among the score of dauntless men laying upon the altar of duty their lives as the sacrificial offering to atone for the criminal recklessness of a moron who had no respect for fire, pouring out their blood as sacrificial wine to pledge their faith and send a toast into the eyes of death.

Edna felt a hand upon her shoulder. She looked up as from a dream.

"Oh, Ned," she choked, "my daddy, my daddy."

He nodded. He understood.

"My daddy, too," he moaned.

"No—no—not——"

He bowed his head.

"He wouldn't let you be a fireman," sighed Edna. "He knew."

"He broke my heart," said Ned. "I know he meant it for my good. But here—now—with all this before me and around me—it's calling me! But it's too late now—there's mother and the kids—and you, if you want me."

She did not comprehend.

"You'll be all alone now," he said.

"Yes. All alone—all except——" she straightened with a sudden thought. "Where's Roger?"

"Here!"

"Saints spare me." She gripped him by both lapels of his coat. "Is he—tell me—is he——"

"Not bad, they say. He's on the floor above. He's——"

But she was flying. Ned looked after her. Tears came into his eyes. The day had cost him his father and all his hopes.

Roger's arm was in a sling. A criss-cross of plaster closed a gash on his cheek. He reached over his good hand and laid it in Edna's.

"They tell me he's—your father——"

She nodded gravely.

"God rest his soul. I was with him—in there—in that hellhole, that fire trap. I'd have died for him. But I couldn't reach him. The rafters broke my arm. I tried to battle through 'em, but there wasn't a chance, not a chance—we never had a chance."

She sat down on his bed and he told her the story:

"By the time we got there the building was pretty well shot. The flames were up to the third story in the rear and going like hell.

"Captain Holden was out of the car before it stopped, and he dashed in. He heard screams and couldn't locate them for a moment; then he took his hand axe that he carried in his belt and battered down a wall. A half crazy man shot out past him, hysterical with fright. It was the watchman that was to blame for it all. The fire had surrounded him before he could get out, all except that one wall that Captain Holden busted through.

"He was running around like a crazy man, that raving murderer, yelling that he had a wife and children and begging us to save him—to save him, when he was saved. One of the boys had to belt him on the jaw to keep him from tripping up half a dozen of us in his panic.

"Well, Captain Holden was calling on us to come in with the extinguishers. I had no hose or ladder to work, neither did Gimpy, so we followed in with the tanks. We were getting some headway going, but the flames were breaking out from all sides with that wind whistling and the dry timber meeting the fire before it reached them. Man after man joined us. It was our only chance, those chemical streams. A few of the boys were shooting in the water, but they couldn't reach the heart of it that way.

"Captain Holden was cussing and commanding and chopping away and playing a stream himself, when there was a sudden creaking and straining, then a tearing and a ripping, and grinding, and down it came, from everywhere at once."

He shuddered.

"Just as it went I heard Captain Holden shout: 'Look out, boys—run!' But he didn't run. He stood pat, though he was the only one of us that felt what was coming.

"The plaster and the ceiling timbers floored me. I couldn't move one limb one inch. Everything was burning. I heard men coming, heard yells, and heard the axes and the picks and crowbars tearing away the junk. Then I passed out. Forgive me, dear—I couldn't help it—God knows I tried to keep my head—but I went cold. I thought of the captain. Then I thought of you. Then the next thing I knew I woke up here, on this bed."

She stroked his hand and said nothing.

"Edna, you'll be all alone now," he whispered.

It was the second time since her father had died that she had heard that. She, herself, had not been thinking of her future. But it was so—she would be all alone now.

Roger was a driver as sure as certainty was sure.

"You'll be needing some one to protect you and to—to look out for you."

Indeed she would. Her heritage would be negligible. The millionaires whose property the firemen had fought to save were insured against misadventure; but the families of the firemen were but scantily bulwarked against the needs of tomorrow. Brains come high, but courage is for sale dirt cheap.

"You'll be lonesome, too, now that——"

Lonesome! That was the worst of it all. She would return to that little home, with its million memories, with its gong and its joker, its telephone, and its pall of mourning.

"Look at me, Edna, dear," he asked. She gave him her eyes.

"Tell me—after what has happened, after the fears that you have lived and after the great grief that you have known—would you be afraid to marry a fireman?"

She closed her eyes and thought of her bridal boudoir—with a joker at her elbow, with a gong over her head, with a black telephone on the wall, with a picture of her dead father framed with a certificate of a hero's death signed by the mayor.

"Afraid?" she said, slowly. "Afraid? Me afraid? Why—I am a fireman's daughter. I'm the daughter of Clint Holden—Battalion Chief Holden."

At about the hour when Roger McCarthy was raising his sound hand to bring it slowly down upon a Bible in sanctification of his oath to love and honor, to cherish, and to keep Edna Holden, the district attorney was sitting at his desk, facing an attorney for the insurance companies.

"It has been clearly established," said the lawyer, "that this watchman, Vladislav Bodzynski, who was a professional watchman, who had been given a star as a special policeman, and was therefore sworn to protect property and lives, not only fell asleep when he should have been on guard but did so with a lighted pipe between his teeth in a wooden building in the heart of the most dangerous fire zone in the city."

"So I read in the papers," said the district attorney. "That sort of thing ought to be stopped, somehow."

"That is my mission here today. I have consulted with my clients, and they regard it as a public necessity to seek the indictment of this man, Bodzynski, on grounds of malfeasance, criminal carelessness, manslaughter, or even second degree murder. Eleven men are dead, four others are maimed, and three others badly wounded. About a million dollars has been taken from the pockets of the insurance companies, some 90 or more per cent of which, of course, comes out of the pockets of business men who pay the premiums which such lax handling of fire makes excession and almost prohibitive.

"There is no chance of civil action against this man, because he has nothing, as is usually the case in such instances. But it seems to me there should lie criminal prosecution on the presumptions of the basic law as well as the statutory provisions against endangering life and property."

The district attorney bit his pencil and thought, then he half smiled.

"You propound an interesting idea," he answered. "Very interesting, indeed. But not practical, sir.

"In the first place, the grand jury would probably laugh me out of chambers if I proposed to hold a man for dropping a pipe, no matter how pointed his duties.

"In the second place, the average man cannot digest the unquestionable fact that the insured pays all insurance 'benefits,' but is rather inclined to smile with pleasure over the fact that the companies have to disgorge some of what is commonly viewed as ill-gotten thousands.

"If this Bodzynski had handled a gun carelessly the process would be simple, and the precedents would support us. Had he abused or neglected his trust as the guardian of explosives, the same would obtain. Had he been a taxi driver, who had run down a pedestrian, the charge of criminal recklessness would be prima facie on the facts.

"But with a fire? Law! Why, nobody takes fire seriously. It kills and it wipes out, but it's a household article.

"No. This must go down as a case of plain carelessness, but there's nothing this office can do about it. Too bad. Good day."

An hour later Vladislav Bodzynski had a new job, watchman in a lumber yard.

A week later Roger McCarthy was well enough again to drive his new battalion chief to a fire caused by a man who used a lighted match to help him see how much gasoline he had in his tank.

NOT STRANGE AT ALL

By ONEY FRED SWEET

THE middle west small town that depends on the farms surrounding it has a way of growing drowsy during midsummer. If the corn is being made, that is enough. And corn calls for hot days and sultry nights. Even the trains that pass through such towns get into leisurely habits.

Old Tom Austin, sitting on the shady side of the depot, didn't care much whether No. 2 ever came in or not. He wasn't going away. He expected nobody.

Bert Hall, who was expecting a business friend from "down the line," strolled over to Old Tom:

"Well, who do you think's going to be elected?"

Old Tom peered indifferently over the top of his glasses, peered indifferently out over the fields that stretched close. For forty years Old Tom had been a familiar figure on the streets.

"I ain't interested in election," he finally answered. "You go and vote for a feller, and after he gets in office he forgets all about you. Met a feller the other day, and he spoke to me for the first time in twenty years. He says: 'Hello! How are ya? Glad to see ya!' I says: 'Ya saw me plenty of times before ya filed for office, but ya didn't think it worth while to speak.' He says: 'I'm sorry ya feel that way. At least if ya can't do me any good, ya won't do me any harm.' I says: 'No, I won't do ya any harm. If any one's damn fool enough to vote for ya, they can.'"

Hall laughed patronizingly, as an elderly person would laugh at the remark of a child. Hall was a snappy man, well under middle age. Folks called him "well fixed" financially. It was apparent that he and the town had long looked upon Old Tom as a doddering no'er-do-well. Hall considered himself something of a wit, and the old man's cynicism amused him. He was about to engage in further humorous repartee when No. 2 jangled in.

Among the passengers to get off the train was a stranger to Hall who dropped his grip to the depot platform and, pushing back his straw hat from his sweaty brow, thus introduced himself:

"I beg your pardon, but I am Congressman Manning, who is to speak this afternoon at your chautauqua here. I must be driven out there right away. My subject is political, and, if possible, I like to make a local reference. Could you give me the name of some man in your town who has lived here a long time and who is a representative citizen?"

It occurred to Hall, offhand, that one Bertrand C. Hall was a name that met all the requirements; but on second thought came the desire to give his wit full play.

"I see what you mean," he answered, struggling to keep his face straight. "Well, the name you want to use to give a punch to your point is Austin—Old Tom Austin."

"I thank you very much," said the speaker, glancing at his watch. "I judged you were a resident here."

The twinkle left Hall's eyes when his business friend got off the train a moment later. He had been chuckling. Tom Austin's name had for years been a community byword for shiftlessness. It would give the audience a big laugh. He intended to be on hand. But the business friend rushed toward him, excitedly.

"I can't stop here, Hall. Didn't you get my wire? You've got to get on the train with me. We've both got to go west right away. We've got to look over this deal out there right away, before some one beats us to it."

And when No. 2, after taking on water, pulled out, Hall was aboard with his business friend. And as his partner of the red plush seat poured into his ears the details of the big deal pending he forgot all about his town, the chautauqua that was there that day, and Old Tom Austin.

But Congressman Manning had his chautauqua date to fill. He was late, and he asked Old Tom Austin, whose weary horse and dilapidated buggy were never far distant

Jim. Not on your life. That's the way you always eat my supper."

"You eat too much, Henry—it will kill you, some time," observed Laramie, losing no time in his initiative. He ignored Sawdy's stare and the big man, disgusted, sat dumb. "Don't surrender, Sawdy," counseled Laramie. "Keep going."

Sawdy paused with his knife and fork firmly clutched in his hands but pointing helplessly in the air. "Bring the other end of that ham, Belle," he said, as one whose hopes have been dashed. "This is the first square meal I've had for two days."

"First I've had for ten days," returned Laramie, keeping up his pace.

"What are they doing up there, Jim?" asked Sawdy peremptorily.

"Killing their horses."

"They won't find him," Sawdy predicted in words inaudible six feet away.

"I hope not."

"How's he holding out?"

"Hard hit, Henry."

"Will he make it?"

"You can't kill a cat."

"Well—" Sawdy resumed his supper. "It's your game, Jim, not mine; but I'd think twice before I'd get that range bunch after me on any man's account."

Laramie's eyes flashed; then he was under control again, and he spoke quietly: "I couldn't see Abe killed like a rattlesnake."

"What are you down for?"

"I've got to have a couple of needles, a little catgut, and some gauze."

"Where are you going to get them?"

"Going to steal them over at Doc Carpy's."

"Nervy."

"You can do it for me, Henry."

"Me?"

"I'll give you the key to his cabinet."

"Where'd you get that?"

"Met him on my way in. He was going up to Pettigrew's to look after the wounded. The window in the end of the wing opens into the operating room, where the supplies are."

"I'd look fine climbing into a window at two hundred and forty pounds."

"It's on the ground floor," returned Laramie, unmoved.

"What will the family be doing while I'm burgling?"

"Mrs. Carpy and the girls are in Medicine Bend. The house is empty. When you're through, leave the key in the head of the skeleton behind the door."

Sawdy stared without much enthusiasm at the little key that Laramie slipped him; then he slipped it, without comment, into his pocket. The talk went on in low, leisurely tones until the second portion of ham had been served, when both resumed their supper as if nothing had been eaten or said. Afterward Laramie spent an hour getting together some things he needed at home. He met Sawdy later at Kitchen's barn. Sawdy, with abundance of grumbling at his assignment, had the gauze and the catgut, but he had brought the key back. He could not find the surgeon's needles. There seemed nothing for it but for Laramie to go to the office and make the search himself. He thought of Belle. She would do it for him, he knew, but he felt it would not be right to mix her up in what might prove a tragic affair. After brief reflection he started for Carpy's himself.

The doctor's house stood back of Main Street, a block and a half from the barn. Laramie walked a mile to reach it, choosing unlighted ways for the trip. The night was dark, and by crossing a vacant lot he reached the rear of the house unobserved. The office, divided into a consulting room and an operating room, consisted of a one-story wing connecting with the residence. The consulting room adjoined the residence, the operating room occupying the end of the wing. This was the room Laramie sought. The window that Sawdy had already burglariously entered opened easily, and Laramie, standing alone in the dark room, felt in his pocket for a match.

He had been in the office more than once before and knew about where the cabinet containing the surgical instruments stood. A connecting door led from the room he had entered to the office proper. He tried this. It was unlocked and he left it closed. The curtains of the windows were drawn and he took a match from his pocket, lighted it, and looked around. The first thing he saw was the articulated skeleton suspended near the door from the ceiling. It would have been a shock had he not seen it before and been familiar with the label fastened to the breastbone reciting that this was Flat Nose George, an early day desperado of the high country.

from the relic, Laramie set about isdaining to inspect various gruenens in alcohol ranged along a l by an occasional match which he lighted and shielded in his left hand, he found the cabinet and with his key opened the door. The flame of his match, too carefully guarded, flickered in his fingers, failed, and went out. He thrust it hastily into one pocket, drew a fresh match from another, and was about to scratch it across his leather wristlet when he heard a door open. The next moment he saw under the door leading from his room to the consulting room a flash of light.

Awkward as it was to be interrupted, he faced the surprise with such composure as he could muster. Who could it be, he asked himself? The family was accounted for; the house locked. He scratched the match again. As it flared up he looked into the cabinet, found the packet of needles, tore a card of them in two, slipped them into a waistcoat pocket, and closed the cabinet door. He turned to listen to the office intruder. Laramie hoped that nothing would bring the unwelcome visitor into the operating room, but as he stood awaiting developments the unlocked door was thrown open and a tiny flashlight was thrown into the room in which he stood.

Fortunately Laramie, outside the circle of light, was left in the dark. The intruder was a woman. He shrank back and she turned her light from him, but only to encounter, as she stepped forward, Flat Nose George, as forbidding now as he had ever been in life. The woman with the light started back in horror, and a sharp little exclamation betrayed her identity. Laramie was at once aware that he was facing Kate Doubleday.

Nothing could have pleased him less. In so small a room it was impossible to escape detection. He could almost hear her breath and would have reveled in her presence but that the apprehension of frightening her terribly weighed on him like a mountain. Hardly daring to breathe, he cursed the erratic doctor's skeleton pet—hung, of all places, where every little while he was cutting people open

The skeleton had already set the girl's nerves on edge. What would happen if she discovered a live man as well as the ghastly remains of a dead one—not to mention alcoholic clippings from other subnormal notables of the mountains? With the flashlight she was evidently searching for something and Laramie surmised it must be the electric light switch.

"I think," he suggested in as steady a tone as possible, "you'll find the light button to the right of the door behind you."

He was prepared for a scream or a swoon. Insead, the flashlight was turned directly on him. "Who are you?" came sharply and quickly from behind it.

"I might ask the same question. You can see I'm Jim Laramie. I can guess you are Kate Doubleday."

"I am, and I've come here for dressings for wounded men at Pettigrew's. What are you doing here?" she demanded, peremptorily.

His lips were sealed for more reasons than one. Least of all would it do for him to expose Doctor Carpy's friendliness and embroil him in a feud which Laramie knew he ought to face alone.

Kate held the light excitedly on him. It was an instant before he had his answer in hand: "I've lied to a good many people at different times about different things," he said, deliberately. "I've still got my first lie to tell to you, Kate. And I certainly won't tell it tonight. Don't ask me what I'm doing here. Turn on the light by the door, or let me do it so I can see you. You here alone?"

"No, there are plenty of men outside, with me," she exclaimed abruptly.

"I shouldn't have asked that question," he continued, in the same tone. "I know you're alone. You say 'men' because you're afraid of me—"

"I'm not the least afraid of you. And don't deceive yourself. There are men here."

"But they are mostly in bottles, Kate—and in pieces. Live men don't ride up to a place like this without making a noise. Flat Nose George is the only man here besides me, outside the alcohol, and I can claim him as well as you can."

"I'm sure you would feel perfectly at home with Flat Nose George," she retorted swiftly.

If the words stung Laramie kept his temper. "Probably there's a good deal I deserve that you haven't heard about me," he said, slowly. "But from the way you talk you've heard a few things maybe I don't deserve. Nobody's got any right to class me with Flat Nose George or anybody else in Carpy's museum."

"You've classed yourself with him," she exclaimed, vehemently. "Defending cattle thieves and harboring them! Every one knows that."

"I did talk rough to your father this morning. I was pretty angry. Just the same, don't believe everything you hear about me. At present, it's just us two. What do you want to do, surrender to me?"

"No!" she snapped the word out furiously. "I won't, not if you kill me."

"Suppose I surrender to you? What do you want me to do—stick up my hands? So far, they haven't been up—if I remember right. But I expect I'll have to learn some time how to surrender."

"I want no surrender, no parley with you. The doctor told me his house was empty and directed me here for the dressings. When I come, I find you. I'll get away at once. Before I go——"

"No, I'll go. But let me turn on the light." He stepped to the door and pressed the button. "I wanted," he continued, as a light flooded the queer room, "to have just one look at you before I go." She stood before him quite unafraid. Her eyes flashed as if she were actually mistress of the situation instead of really helpless in the presence of her father's most resourceful enemy.

Laramie half-smiled at her serenity. "Why don't you go?" she exclaimed.

Still regarding her, he shifted his position a little and replied with entire good nature: "I only live along, from one sight to another of you. I'm just filling up, like a man at a spring—till I reach the next water hole in the desert. You don't object to my only looking at you for a minute?"

"I object to being delayed and annoyed," she declared in a blaze. "I've come here for dressings needed for wounded men—"

"Well, so have I, if you must have it."

"I was sent here by Dr. Carpy for things he wants tonight; you have no more right here helping yourself to his property than you have taking other people's."

"Don't say I take other people's property!" Laramie spoke fiercely. "Don't call me a thief." His words burned with anger. "My hands may not be as white as yours—they're just as clean! What would you think if I called you a thief with no more ground than you call me one? God!" he exclaimed, catching at a chair beside him, "has it come to this, that the daughter of Barb Doubleday calls me a thief?"

Stunned as she might well have been at the outburst, Kate stood her ground. "Did Doctor Carpy give you permission to come here tonight?" She shot the words at Laramie without giving him time to breathe.

Laramie checked the flood of anger he had loosed. "I don't need permission from Doctor Carpy to come here night or day. Ask him if you want to," he said, with a scornful disgust. He sank down on the chair at his side in complete resentment of the whole situation and leaning forward with a hand spread over one knee and one fist clenched on the other, he stared not at Kate's eyes, but at the floor, with only her trim boots in his field of vision.

"What's the use?" he exclaimed, drawing the words up seemingly all the way from his own disorderly and alkali-stained foot coverings. "What's the use?" he repeated, in stronger and more savage tones. "I've treated her from the first instant I saw her, and every instant since, as I thought a woman ought to be treated—would like to be treated. Now I get my reward. She calls me a thief—and my God! I take it. I don't ride out and kill her father, who taught her to do it, quick as I can reach him; I just take it!" he exclaimed.

He hesitated a moment. Then he flung a question at her like a thunderbolt: "What do you want here?"

She was frightened. His rage was plain enough; who could tell the lengths to which it might carry him?

She kept her dignity, but she answered and without quibbling: "I want some gauze and some cotton and some medicines."

He strode to the cabinet and, concealing the movement as he unlocked it with Carpy's key, he threw open the glass door: "You'd be all night finding the stuff," he said, curtly, taking the supplies from various cluttered piles on different shelves. "You say he wants this tonight," he added, when her packet was complete: "How are you going to get it to him?"

"Carry it to him."

"At Pettigrew's? What do you mean? It would take an experienced horseman all night to ride around by Black Creek."

"I'm going over the pass."

He could not conceal his anger: "Does your father know that?"

"He said I might try it."

Laramie flamed again: "A fine father! to send a tenderfoot girl on a night ride into a country like that!"

She was defiant: "I can ride anywhere a man can."

"Let me tell you," he faced her and his eyes flashed, "if you try riding 'anywhere' too often, some night your father's daughter will fail to get home!"

Ignoring the door, he stepped to the open window by which he had entered and, springing through it, was gone.

Laramie, disdaining any further attempt at concealment, rode angrily over to Kitchen's barn; anyone that wanted a dispute with him could have had it, and promptly. McAlpin got up his horse, and, cutting short the barn boss' attempt to talk, Laramie headed for home.

The sky was studded with a glory of stars. He rode fast, his fever of anger acting as a spur in his anxiety to get back to dress Hawk's wounds.

His thoughts raced with the hoofs of his horse. Nothing could have galled and humiliated him more than to realize how Kate Doubleday regarded him. Plainly she looked on him as no better than the ordinary rustlers of the Falling Wall country. This was distressingly clear. He knew in his own heart that hers was the only opinion among her people that he cared anything about. Furious waves of resentment alternated with the realization that such a thing was inevitable—how could it be otherwise? She heard the loose talk of the men about her—Stone, alone, to reckon no other, could be depended on to lie freely about him. Van Horn he was as sure would blacken an enemy; and added to Laramie's discomfiture was the reflection that this man, whose attentions to Kate he most dreaded, held her ear against him and could, if need be, poison the wells.

To these could be added her own father as his implacable enemy. This last affair had cut off every hope of getting on with the men for whom he had no respect and who for one reason or another hated him as heartily as he hated them.

Under such a load of entanglement lay the thought of Kate. What downright foolishness even to think of her as he let himself think and hope! Clattering along, he told himself nothing could ever come of it but bitterness; and he cast the thought and hope of knowing her better and better until he could make her his own completely out of his heart.

The only trouble was that neither she nor the bitterness would stay out. As often as he put them out they came in again. The first few miles of his road were the same that she would soon be riding after him. Again and again he felt anger at the idea of her riding the worst of the Falling Wall trail at night to Pettigrew's. More than once he felt the impulse to wait for her and even slackened his pace.

But when he did so there arose before him the picture of her as she flung the hateful words at him; they came back as keenly as if he heard them again, and he could feel his cheeks burning in the cold night air. Self-respect, if nothing else, would prevent his even speaking another word to her that night. His hatred of her father swelled in the thought that he should let her attempt such a ride. Her only safety would lie in her giving her horse its head; if she attempted to guide it she would get lost.

For several miles beyond where he knew Kate must turn for the pass Laramie rode on toward home; then, watching his landmarks carefully, he reined his horse directly to the right and headed for the broken country lying between the Turkey and the mountains. At some little distance from the trail he stopped and, sitting immovable in his saddle, listened to learn whether he was followed. For thirty minutes—and that is a long time—he waited, buried in the silence of the night and without the slightest impatience. He heard in the distance the coyotes and the owls, but no horseman passed, nor did the sound of hoofs come within hearing. Then, reining his pony's head again toward the black heights of the Falling Wall range, he continued his journey.

Soon all semblance of any trail was left behind and he rode of necessity more slowly. More than once he halted, seemingly to reassure himself as to his bearings for he was pushing his way where few men would care to ride even in daylight. He was feeling across precipitous gashes and along treacherous ledges esteemed by the bighorn but feared by man and beast; and through huge masses of rocky fragments that had crashed from dizzy heights above before finding their resting place, and had then been heaved and tumbled by the fury of mountain storms.

Laramie was, in fact, nearing the place—by the least passable of all approaches—where he had hidden Hawk. And at that, he did not hesitate to stop to listen and to double on his trail more than once. Maneuvering in this manner for a long time he emerged on a small opening, turned almost squarely about and rode half a mile. Dismounting then near a grove of lodge pole and lifting his rifle from its scabbard he slung his bag over his shoulder and walked

FOR some time the weather had been warm and pleasant, and the Teenie Weenies spent most of their time gardening.

The little folks raised most of their vegetables, and it took a great deal of work to plant the various things they would need during the summer. They had to raise enough to last them through the winter too, for Teenie Weenies eat in winter as well as summer.

"Well, folks," announced the General one evening as he stepped out onto the front porch of the shoe house where most of the little people had gathered. "We've been pretty busy lately, and I think we ought to have a little vacation. What do you say?"

The Teenie Weenies said a lot. They made so many suggestions and all talked at once so rapidly the General could not make out a single word.

"One at a time! One at a time!" cried the General. "How in the name of pepper seeds do you expect me to hear with all of you chattering at once."

"Let's make ice cream," suggested the Dunce.

"Let's have a game of baseball," cried the Clown.

"How about a dance?" shouted Paddy Pinn.

"Wouldn't it be nice to have a picnic," suggested the Lady of Fashion.

"Yes! Yes!" cried most of the little folks so loudly it was quite plain that the idea of a picnic was most popular.

"Where will we have it?" asked the Turk.

"I know! I know!" cried the Dunce.

"Well, where?" asked the Lady of Fashion, turning to the noisy Dunce.

"Let's have the picnic over on that little island down the creek near the old boat."

"That's a good suggestion, Dunce," cried the Doctor. "That little island is pretty, and we could have a pleasant time there."

"How'd we get over to the island?" asked the Old Soldier.

"We c-c-c-could swim over," suggested the Dunce.

"How'd we get the sandwiches and cake and other good things over?" asked the Cook."

"W-w-w-w-w-why, w-w-we c-c-could eat 'em before we swam over," answered the Dunce.

"We could get that old duck who lives down there by the barn to take us across," said the General.

"Yes, yes! That's it. We'll get the Duck to take us across on his back," cried the Teenie Weenies.

"All right," smiled the General. "I'll go down the creek tomorrow and see if I can make the necessary arrangements with the Duck."

It was a long time before most of the Teenie Weenies went to sleep that night, for the little people were so excited over the picnic they could do nothing but lie in their tiny beds and plan for the good time.

The next morning the little folks tumbled out of their beds earlier than usual, and while the General and the Policeman walked down the creek to make arrangements with the Duck to take the picnickers over to the island, the rest of the little folks busied themselves baking cakes, and making tiny sandwiches.

The General and the Policeman made arrangements with the Duck to take the party over to the island for ten grains of corn and the Duck agreed to meet the Teenie Weenies the next morning near the old boat.

The next morning the excited Teenie Weenies were out of their beds before sunrise, and by half past six they had packed their lunch into half an English walnut shell and were all ready to start.

When everybody was ready the little folks set off towards the creek singing as they moved along through the high weeds, and an early bird or two smiled at the happy little faces as they passed by.

The Duck was waiting at the boat, and in a few minutes the little people climbed up on to his back and gave the word to start.

The Duck swam out into the creek and headed for the tiny island, but the little picnickers never reached the place that day, for something happened.

The Duck had only gone a short distance when he suddenly dived head first into the deep water spilling the poor Teenie Weenies into the cold stream.

Most of the Teenie Weenies were good swimmers, and they soon came spouting to the top of the water and made for a board which happened to be floating near.

The Lady of Fashion had trouble swimming in her clothes, but the Turk caught her around her slender waist and soon helped her to the board, where most of the little folks had crawled.

Two or three of the Teenie Weenies who sat near the tail stuck to the Duck's back, and presently the big fellow came to the surface of the water. He raised his big head high in the air, and the little folks saw the legs of a frog as it slid down the Duck's long bill.

"Oh, my dears!" exclaimed the Duck as he gulped down the frog. "I beg your pardon. I forgot all about you folks. I saw a frog swimming along in the water and I-I-I, why I just couldn't let him go. I never thought about you at all. I'm so sorry."

The Teenie Weenies were pretty angry. They did not dare to say much to the Duck for fear he might get ugly, but they gave him many nasty looks, which made the thoughtless fellow feel guilty.

The lunch had sunk like a pebble, and as the little folks were soaked to the skin there was nothing to do but go home and get into dry clothes.

The Duck towed the board, on which the Teenie Weenies had climbed, back to shore and bowing stiffly to the Duck's apologies they hurried home and changed their clothes.

The Teenie Weenies were much disappointed over having their picnic spoiled, but the next day they set out again for the island, and this time they made a raft and all paddled over in safety.

LARAMIE HOLDS THE RANGE

by FRANK H. SPEARMAN

ILLUSTRATED WITH A PAINTING BY HERBERT MORTON STOOPS

"Hold on, Doubleday," Laramie said bluntly. "You can't put your abuse all over me first and then run away with it."

THE STORY.

KATE DOUBLEDAY has journeyed to the far west to visit her father.

BARB DOUBLEDAY, who deserted her mother years before, and whom the girl has never seen. This strange father she finds engaged in certain dubious enterprises which he does not see fit to explain, but he shows a furtive affection for the girl and establishes her in a cottage at Sleepy Cat Junction with

BELLE SHOCKLEY, a woman of the neighborhood whom he has engaged to run his eating house in town. Kate hears mystifying references to her father's affairs from

HARRY VAN HORN, a dashing cattleman, whom she likes, and

TOM STONE, foreman at Doubleday's ranch, whom she does not like at all. Also she hears much talk of one

JIM LARAMIE, about whose character there seem to be sharp differences of opinion. Laramie, she gathers, is a figure of some importance in a war which is being waged between cattle thieves and the big ranch owners of the country. One day at the eating house, meeting a stranger whom she believes to be a marshal with papers to serve on her father, Kate lures him away into the plains on the pretext of taking a ride with her, only to find to her chagrin that the man is not a marshal at all but Jim Laramie himself. Subsequently she learns that the real marshal is a man named

JOHN LEFEVER, a likable character who has been maintaining an impartial attitude in the cattle wars. Soon after Kate's first encounter with Laramie, Doubleday closes his eating house at Sleepy Cat Junction and the girl goes to her father's ranch. She tries to avoid Laramie, but meets him on several occasions and, in spite of herself, begins to be interested in him. Meanwhile Laramie has been approached by men from the Doubleday outfit with a proposal that he line up with them in the feuds that are under way. This he bluntly refuses to do, and thus he has no part in a raid that is organized presently by Doubleday and others under Van Horn's leadership with the avowed purpose of "cleaning out" the cattle rustlers in the Falling Wall country. The raid is directed chiefly against ABE HAWK, known both as a "bad man" and as a friend of Laramie's, and three of his associates—Dutch Henry, Stormy Gorman, and Yankee Robinson. The raiders first lay siege to Dutch Henry's cabin, and in the fighting that follows Dutch Henry, Gorman, and one of Van Horn's men are killed. Abe Hawk has been in the cabin with the others, but escapes after setting the shack afire, and makes his way, wounded and desperate, to Laramie's home. Here the two men are found by Lefever, the marshal, who agrees to go out and hold off the raiders while Laramie helps Hawk get away. Doubleday and Van Horn insist on going to Laramie's cabin, but Lefever delays them considerably with his talk, and when they finally see Laramie riding in the distance Hawk has disappeared.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT.

Hawk's Hiding Place.

LEFEVER waved his hat at the distant horseman, who also rode with a rifle slung across the pommel and carried his lines high in his left hand. The horseman continued for some moments toward the creek, then looking, seemingly by accident, toward the house he saw the signaling, stopped his pony, paused and, reining him around, headed at an easy pace for the group before the cabin. It was, as Lefever had said, Laramie.

A few minutes later he trotted his horse across the field and slowed him up in front of Van Horn and Doubleday. His greeting to his visitors was dry; their own was somewhat strained, but Lefever took the initiative. "Jim," he said bluntly, "we're looking for Abe Hawk."

Laramie's response was merely to the point. "He's not here."

"Has he been here?" demanded Van Horn.

"Yes," answered Laramie. Lefever at intervals looked virtuously from questioner to questioned.

"How long ago, Jim?" continued Van Horn.

Laramie regarded him steadily. "Several times in the last two or three days."

"Was he here yesterday?" asked Van Horn suddenly.

"I was on the Reservation yesterday."

"Has he been here this morning?"

"Yes."

"Jim, we're cleaning up the rustlers," said Van Horn. "Things have got so bad it had to be done. We want Hawk. We've got Gorman and Henry. Now, if it's a fair question, is Abe here?"

"He's not."

"Not in your shack?"

"No."

"Are you willing we should search it?"

"Search hell! What do you mean?" asked Laramie curtly. "Isn't my word good as to who's in my shack?"

"Jim!" Lefever held up a peacemaker's hand. "We thought maybe he might have come in since you rode away."

"Well——" Laramie cooled somewhat, "if it'll do you any good I'll look inside myself."

Van Horn sarcastically demurred: "Don't take the trouble, don't take the trouble, Jim."

"Still he might be there," urged Lefever, "in the way I say—he might 've walked in since you went into the hills—what? No objection to my looking in there, is there, Jim?"

"No man can search my cabin," snapped Laramie. "Have you got a warrant for Dave Hawk?" He threw the question sharply at Lefever.

With Lefever's disclaimer Doubleday interposed a savage rejoinder: "A rope'll fit Abe's neck better than a warrant."

Laramie eyed the old cattleman unmoved: "And you're here to get me to help you slip the noose, are you?"

"We're here to clean out these cattle thieves," stormed Doubleday, profanely.

"There are no cattle thieves here," retorted Laramie undisturbed. "You're wasting the time you'll need on your job. Move on!"

Even Van Horn was taken aback at the blunt rudeness; he pulled his horse around: "Look here, Jim; let me talk to you a minute alone."

Laramie, guiding his horse with his heels, followed Van Horn twenty feet and listened: "Jim, I'm heading this bunch, and whatever troubles you've had with Barb and his friends, now's the time to fix 'em up. They'll give you the best of it. If you've got any line on where Hawk is say so and it puts you with us; say nothing, and you're against us."

Laramie eyed him without a quiver: "I'm against you, Harry."

Van Horn did not give up. He talked again and talked hard. It was useless. Doubleday rode over to where Van Horn held Laramie in deadly earnest confab. Van Horn, ready to quit, gladly let the older man take over the case. But Doubleday made no better success. Laramie could not be moved. If coaxed, he was obstinate; if threatened, impatient—contemptuous. Doubleday, when Laramie coldly refused even to answer his questions concerning Hawk, boiled over.

He backed his horse a step and opened his vials of wrath: "Laramie, you've turned down the last chance decent folks on the range'll ever try to hand you—the last chance you'll ever see to pull away from these Falling Wall thieves. Now," he exclaimed, raising his right hand and arm with a bitter imprecation, "we'll show you who's going to run the Sleepy Cat range. I'll drive you out of this country if it takes every cowboy I can hire and every dollar I've got. The country won't hold you and me after today. D'ye hear?" he shouted, almost bending with his huge frame over Laramie and beside himself with rage. Then, spurring his horse, he wheeled it around to rejoin Van Horn.

At that Laramie was too quick for him. Almost in the very instant he jumped his own pony after the angry man and, gaining the head of Doubleday's horse, caught the bridle and jerked the beast almost to its haunches.

It was a ticklish instant. Van Horn, with his hand on his revolver, attempted to spur to Doubleday's assistance. Lefever interposed with a sharp move that put him plumply in front of Van Horn: "Not till them two are through, Harry. We stay right here till them two's done."

The very impudence of Lefever's move had taken Doubleday by surprise and Laramie was hurling angry words at him before Lefever had intervened: "Hold on, Doubleday," Laramie said bluntly, "you can't put your abuse all over me first and then run away with it. You'll hear what I've got to say. I rode this range before you ever saw it; I'll ride this range when you're gone. I was born here, Doubleday; my father lived here before me. The air I breathe, this sky over my head, this ground under my feet are mine, and I stick here in spite of you and your cattle crooks. If men run off your cattle it's your sheriff's business—you own him. And it's your business to run 'em down—not mine. You come here without a warrant, without a definite complaint, and ask me to turn an old man over to a bunch of lynchers! Not on your life. Not today or any other day."

Doubleday interrupted and cursed, but he was forced to listen: "You talk about thieves," Laramie spoke fast and remorselessly, "and you belong to the bunch that's tried to steal every foot of land I own in the Falling Wall. After you and your lawyers and land office tools have stole thousands of acres from the government, you talk as if you were an angel out of heaven about the men that brand your damned mavericks. Hell! I'd rather stand by a thief that calls himself a thief than a thief that steals under a lawyer. Send your hired men after me; give 'em plenty of ammunition. They'll find me right here, Barb—right here where I live."

When Sawdy rode into Sleepy Cat next morning it was known that he had come from the Reservation and he was besieged for news from the Falling Wall. At Kitchen's, where he put up his horse; on his way up street to his room over McAlpin's pool hall, he was assailed with questions. Pretty accurate reports of the two exciting days in the North country had already trickled into Sleepy Cat. To these Sawdy listened with stolid attention, but he managed to add to them very little. He possessed to a degree the faculty of talking freely, sententiously even, without contributing anything strictly pertinent to a subject.

Not until he had bathed, slept, shaved, and set himself down near nightfall at Belle Shockley's did he tell any considerable part of his story. But all that prudence could permit he told, or, rather, Belle demanded and received at his hands. When the heart is involved the strongest men are at times helpless.

"I ran into the bunch on my way down, right at Laramie's cabin," Sawdy said to Belle. "Laramie and Doubleday were having the hottest kind of a row when I rode up. I made sure we'd be shooting the next couple of minutes. But John Lefever was watching them pretty close and holding down Van Horn. Barb cooled down when he saw three of us on deck. I told him on the side the Governor had telephoned Pearson and the Colonel was going to send a troop of cavalry down after them and they'd better scatter. It was a bluff, but for a few minutes I had him and Van Horn guessing. They said they'd go home when they got Hawk. Lefever is staying up there for a day or two."

"Will they ever find Hawk?"

"Did you ever find a needle in a haystack?"

"I never looked for one.'

"Them fellows are looking for the stack. They've got to find the needle after they locate the hay. Slip me that Worcestershire sauce, Belle. Yours truly. No more potatoes. This is a good piece of ham, Belle."

"It ought to be; it cost enough," returned Belle Shockley, tersely.

"I wish to God you'd serve a glass of beer with a man's supper."

"You can get all the supper and all the beer you want at the hotel," flared Belle. "This is no blind pig——"

"Then it's the only place in Main Street that ain't."

"And it never will be," averred Belle, indignantly.

"Come up to the hotel with me right now," returned Sawdy coldly, "and I'll buy you a bottle of beer. Bet you ten dollars you da'ssent do it—who the devil—" Sawdy almost choked as the two heard a knock at the door—"who the devil is that?" he repeated. The door opened and Jim Laramie walked in.

He sent his hat sailing toward a side table, stepped forward and, catching at a chair on the way, greeted Belle and her guest and sat down before a plate cover opposite Sawdy. He pointed to what remained of Sawdy's supper and with knife and fork started in: "There's enough for me right here, Belle," he said.

Sawdy raised his chin: "Not this time,

FOR THE BRIDE AND HER MAIDS

by Corinne Lowe

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Here comes the bride—well, after all, that is nowadays a loose description. The heroine of the event may take her choice. Will she be chic bride or a stately one, a Moyenage bride or a Spanish infanta bride? There are all sorts of designs displayed for her benefit.

Personally I don't care to see a bride going up the aisle in a skirt just below her knees. I think that some distinction should be made between the bonds and the links, and that a skirt which is quite a success for teeing off on the golf course is apt to be a tragedy when one is teeing off on the marriage course.

I could wish, indeed, that Elsa's ideas of a wedding gown could have been retained just as faithfully as her idea of a wedding march. To be sure, her train was—well, more or less a transcontinental one. I might concede a few yards of that Lohengrin costume, but the long, simple lines of the frock itself—that I should never concede.

Fortunately—and a matter of much more importance—many brides of this year seem to share my romantic view. The various spring weddings here in New York this spring have shown a decided preference for the long waisted, slim skirted Moyenage type of wedding gown.

It is such a model as this which I am showing today. Made of white satin, the simple bodice has no touch of trimming save on those picturesque sleeves which, with their inset of rose point lace at the elbow, have come to us straight from many centuries ago. The skirt repeats the lace in one side panel and the long train is edged with it.

A draping of the skirt material at the knees takes away all severity, a severity which would, however, in any event be tempered by that filmy white veil held about the head with its ropes of pearls. There are many interpretations of the Moyenage mode to be found in the specialty shops today, but this is the model which I chose among them all.

The modified princess frock that Madeleine et Madeleine introduced several seasons ago is one which vies with the medieval line for the favor of the fashionable. At a recent society wedding, for instance, the bride selected a white satin made on princess lines and wrinkling here and there across the front in the way these modern types do.

This draping was achieved by pulling the skirt upward and over toward a side panel of rose point lace. And, by the way, these side panels of lace, often longer than the skirt, as now enjoying particular favor. The veil, ruffling down over the eyes and held about the head with orange blossoms, was of rose lace and fell in a long point over the long square court train. The sleeves, also of lace, were short and were almost concealed by the cascades of this veil, rippling over the shoulders.

As a contrast to the frock I have shown and the one I have just described, I mention here another costume which I found recently in a specialty shop. It had a little tight fitting bodice of silver and white brocade, with short puff sleeves and extremely wide skirt of white tulle. The latter was hung over the distended hip line with a number of silver ribbons falling below the skirt and punctuated each with a rose of white chiffon. There was a deep V in the back, partially hidden by a huge Japanese bow of white tulle, and the short skirt was partially softened by a veil of white tulle that reached to the ground.

All those who care to be a chic bride please hold up their hands.

This bridal gown was chic, and many designers advocate the mode of the gown—the tight corsage and short full skirt with its distended hip line for the young bride. Even youth, however, does not seem to justify any such departure from traditions of stateliness. Still, if you insist, the arrangement of the ribbon panels, tipped each by a chiffon flower, is awfully charming. In this case, by the way, the ribbons left a wide section of the back free from their touch.

If you are going to have an awfully elaborate wedding gown, an all over embroidery of crystals is sanctioned by some of the best designers both here and abroad. In some cases the crystals are mingled with rhinestones—this makes a most spectacular costume—as was the manner of a certain imported frock I found not long ago. This frock was made on princess lines, and its long train started from the square necked front of the corsage to cascade down over the arms in lieu of sleeves. This, en passant, is an excellent idea and provides us a pleasing variation from the court train swung from the back.

If your frock is extremely simple, you wear a lace veil (if you're lucky enough to inherit one or the money to buy it). If your wedding dress is, on the contrary, embroidered in crystal and much be-laced, the judicious thing to do is to select the tulle veil. Indeed, the latter is always beautiful, no matter what the style of the dress.

STRAIGHT from the romantic days of long ago stepped this Moyenage wedding gown of white satin trimmed with rose point lace and veiled in white tulle held over the brow by chaplets of pearls. Next, the maid of honor is seen in a combination of turquoise taffeta and silver lace—a model adapted from one of Callot's recent creations. At the left the bridesmaid wears cream tinted Margot lace over jade taffeta.*

It, as well as the lace veils, frequently comes down over the eyes—a mode most becoming to the average youthful face. However, there are many who find that the chaplet of pearls or orange blossoms capping the head just above the eyebrows is more effective. This is a matter that must be left to individual taste.

Among the fabrics used most constantly for the wedding gown of today one finds crepe meteor, white or ivory satin, white tulle, and silver tissue. The last is not quite so much in evidence as it was some time ago. We still retain, however, a fondness for using a touch of silver trimming on the white satin gown. For example, the long court train may be edged with just a narrow bit of silver lace.

And now comes the bridesmaid. At the fashionable wedding where, I have recorded, the heroine of the occasion wore a white satin princess frock with rose point veil, sleeves, and side panel, the bridesmaids elected peach color taffeta frocks with fichus of the same material and, with wide skirts, distended over the hip line, and trimmed down the sides by diagonal rows of cordings of the material arranged in loops—they are doing so much of that diagonal placing of all sorts of trimming, you know. The slip-off-the-shoulder bodices of the dresses were finished with short sleeves of lace, and the effective climax of the entire costume—quaint, adorable poke bonnets of leghorn and peach color taffeta—were edged under the brim with lace to match.

These poke bonnets are perfectly delightful for bridesmaid millinery, but still we see considerably more of the wide brimmed hat—leghorn, tulle, maline, chiffon, or lace. Taffeta frocks are still perhaps most in favor for the accessories to the fact, and organdy can claim its old group of adherents. The latter is sometimes trimmed with embroidery of silver thread—a thought which contributes much to the dressiness of the effect. As for the maid of honor, she frequently elects chiffon over taffeta.

It is, of course, a sign of these lacy times that nowadays many of the feminine attendants at the society wedding choose neither taffeta nor organdy but frocks composed mainly of lace. On this page, for instance, the maid of honor in the center has chosen a model adapted from one of Callot's dance frocks. The corsage and underskirt are of turquoise blue taffeta, and the wide flounces of skirt and of sleeves are of silver lace. The neck line—an especially novel and arresting one—is also filled in with silver lace.

The combination of turquoise and silver is one of the most beautiful in the world, and if the maid of honor happens to be blonde she is apt to take away some attention from the bride herself—for, of course, this alliance of tints is one that may be claimed as more partial to Rowena than the dusky Rebecca.

Also of lace is the bridesmaid's dress at the left. But in this case the lace is a cream Margot weave made over jade taffeta. The tunic is wired over the hips.

As a general word, we may add that the full skirted, wide hipped style of skirt allied with the tight little bodice is nowadays the most successful choice of bridesmaid and maid of honor.

DRY CLEANING AT HOME

by Alma Harding

This is the first of a number of articles giving full directions for the removal of spots from garments, furniture, carpets, and walls. Instructions on fine laundry work, bleaching and dyeing will also be included in the series.

WET AND DRY METHODS.

SPOTS are the most annoying, as well as the most expensive bugbears in the whole consideration of wardrobe; nor do they play any minor part in the general cleanliness of the home. If one could dispense with the dry cleaner and the professional launderer, the family budget would wear a great deal healthier look. And, incidentally, so would the wardrobe and the house.

For with dry cleaning and laundry as expensive as they are, one is forced to make compromises. The dress that is only half bad will have to be worn as it is for a while, and the carpet is turned so the grease spots don't show. Or the housewife, conversant only in a general way with the power of gasoline, and benzine, and the acids, just muses over the spot in a not too-wholly successful attempt to remove it, and waits until the dress, or the gloves, or the iron rusted tablecloth is really impossible, and then sends it to the cleaners. Naturally, this makes the work more difficult, expensive, and more destructive.

For the greater the rubbing any fabric must submit to, the greater the damage done to its wearing qualities. Most women have by this time learned —so great is the expense of silk stockings nowadays—that washing them every time they are worn is the one sure way of making them last.

But this policy is rarely applied to other articles. Not, indeed, that it should be, in quite such a strenuous manner. But keeping linen clean, suits free from the dust which creates shine, shoes rid of the grit which eats into the leather, and silks from the spots which destroy the fabric are all forms of elemental economy which more than make up for the time spent or the little money paid out for benzine and a few acids and a little distilled water.

France, probably, more than any other country, understands the art and science—for it is really both—of dry cleaning and of laundering. Dresses, seemingly hopelessly spotted, come home from the dry cleaners like new; and the windows of the tiny blanchisseuses on the side streets are as attractive as the midwinter sales window of a big department store, filmy with whitest lingerie, the embroidery clear and high, the lace freshly goffered, the new look about everything which washing is supposed to destroy.

The author has spent the last seven years in France and Germany and Italy, and was always gleaning fresh bits of information about cleaning. The quality of the gasoline was so bad during the war, at least in all the large plants, that it was much more advantageous to buy carbontetrachloride and a little ether or chloroform and some benzine soap, and do the work at home. Indeed, no one dared send kid gloves to the cleaner, for they always came home crisp and crackling like writing paper.

In the ordinary family of four, it should save $50 to $75 a year in cleaners' bills and in the cost of replacing articles which have been left dirty too long and are easily destroyed after cleaning.

Cleaning is divided into two distinct classes—wet and dry. The "nettoyage à sec," which is the rather anomalous cognomen of the latter, is dry only in the fact that the goods are not submitted to water; but the dirt is released by first removing the grease which holds the dirt in the fabric and thus cleaning the garment. But no dry cleaning can change fabrics, and it affects color very little, whereas water shrinks both wool and cotton, ruins some silks, fades most colors, and is in most ways, except for white cotton and linen goods, distinctly inferior to what are called the organic solvents. These comprise acetone, alcohol, amyl acetate, amyl alcohol, aniline, benzine, benzol, carbontetrachloride, chloroform, ether, and turpentine.

The inorganic solvents are headed by water. When possible always use soft water, and if the water is hard, use some alkali to soften it. For the cleaning of individual spots which must be treated with water, use distilled water when it is possible to get it, as it leaves no ring.

Beside the solvents there are the acids, which eat away the spots, but which must always be neutralized or they will eat away the material, too. Among the more important ones are oxalic, hydrochloric, acetic, citric, formic, and sulphuric.

I advise carbontetrachloride in many places where benzine or gasoline mixed with a little ether or chloroform would undoubtedly do the work as well, although there are many varnishes and waxy greases which are more susceptible to carbontetrachloride than to any other solvent.

Where it is impossible to procure this solvent, use benzine or gasoline, mixing a little of the other solvents with it at your discretion. Do not feel that the spot must stay on the dress because you cannot get the carbontetrachloride which is prescribed, or because your druggist never heard of it.

Ordinary gasoline has quite a sediment, but this may be partially overcome by adding a little ether or chloroform to help settle it. Carbontetrachloride is a safer liquid than any other to have in the house as it is not only noninflammable but is priceless in case of fire, as it is actually the basis of most fire extinguishers.

Farrell and Howes made experiments with pure agar-agar cultures of bacillus typhosus, absorbed by sterile threads of silk. Immersion in ordinary benzine for six hours did not kill the organism. Even with the addition of 1 per cent by weight of Saponine—a benzine soap—there was no result. Likewise with benzol for six hours, the organism in every case grew as vigorously afterward as before.

Carbontetrachloride, however, killed the organism in all cases within thirty minuates of immersion. This is a valuable piece of information for those who wish to disinfect their garments after sickness but who have not the money to send their whole wardrobe to the cleaner. Carbontetrachloride not only kills the germs but renders the material particularly immune. This solvent is an artificial solvent as opposed to the others, such as gasoline.

In succeeding articles I speak of the terrible soaps which are made in Germany, because in a study of this question those were the ones with which I came in contact. These benzine soaps were the result of long experimentation. It was suggested that there must be some kind of alkali, presumably in the form of soap, which could be mixed with benzine to increase its cleaning power, and also be used on various articles which benzine alone could not attack.

After several years of experiment, two classes of such soaps were produced. The first of the oleates, soluble in benzine or its like, are the hydrated acid oleates of the alkaline salts —these are called benzine soaps; while the second, made of nonhydrous normal oleates, of the salts of alkaline earths, are called antibenzinpyrin. In later articles I will give several secret recipes for preparing these soaps.

An antibenzinpyrin soap is especially good for colored and white glace gloves. Benzine with a 5 per cent solution of this liquid soap will clean even perspiration marks on gloves with one application.

When the word "benzine soap solution" is used it means the mixture of gasoline, benzine, or carbontetrachloride with one-twentieth of its volume of one of these soaps. This is the proper proportion unless otherwise stated. For special spots sometimes for marks on gloves, 10 per cent solution is admissible.

When the word "soap solution" is used it means boiling water poured on shaved soap flakes, and then dissolved and cooled until of the proper temperature to use.

"Acetic acid solution," which is so often referred to as the last bath for colors, is usually about a tablespoonful to a small tub of water. This is sufficient to brighten colors, such as stripes in blankets, and give a luster to silk. But when colors run, or when you wish to restore a color which has faded, use the regular 5 per cent solution. When you are sponging serge suits or black and white checks, use about two teaspoonfuls to one pint of water. This will clean and brighten at the same time.

DOMESTIC INSIDES

Is the spring comes the annual campaign
For cleanliness and beauty.
We undertake to extinguish the slums,
Clean the alleys and the front yards;
Wash the streets, sweep the sidewalks,
Freshen the parkway;
Paint the houses and fix the roofs.
But how about our domestic insides?
The rooms in which we live?
Is the wall paper depressing or a delight?
The carpets, the rugs? Do they fit?
Are they clean? Are they right?
The lights? Do they blind you, or shaded to see?
The ceiling? Clean or a sight?
The curtains; the tables; the chairs; the beds;
The bureaus—are they worn or bright?
To use a phrase of Matthew Arnold—
"Every house should have an atmosphere
Of "sweetness and light."
There is an apt art for every space.
Was it Keats who said:
"A thing of beauty is a joy forever"?

APPETITES that AGE and FATTEN

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Sag on hair? Oily hair oily skin. Pinkies pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly The Tribune Chicago

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"SHE'S only 27, and I wish you could see her! She's a sight! Just something awful! She looks forty!"

"You don't mean it. She used to be the prettiest girl, and by far the most popular of any of us at dances. Her card was always filled up before she got there and a half dozen hanging around all evening for a cut-in."

"Well, she's not like that any more. She's so fat now she couldn't hire anyone to dance with her. Even her husband leaves her propped against the wall, where she sits and sits alone."

"What's the matter with her? How did she get that way?"

"I don't know what's the matter with some of these girls when they marry. They just seem to think the struggle's over and now for solid comfort. There's Mildred, too. Going the same way—I hear Jack's running around a lot—but I don't blame him much. She told me the other day she ate a pound—mind you a whole pound—of chocolates a day."

"Guess we ought to be thankful for the jobs that keep our noses to the grindstone and out of the candy boxes, eh, Georgene?"

"O, well, I don't think that's it exactly. Look at Ethel—just the same lovely dear, with two kiddies now and if anything, she is slenderer and younger looking. 'Taint marriage. It's the appetite! That's what."

Watch the Appetite.

That's what, all right!

No matter what walk of life, a pound of chocolates a day won't narrow the waiker!

But the woman at home, by the nature of her vocation, is the girl the obesity goblin flirts with most violently. Food is around her at all hours of the day. By nibbles, as she lightly dubs them, she can eat herself out of "form and figger" in no time.

If hubby insists upon telling it with chocolates, she feels it her loving duty to show a sense of appreciation regardless of weight statistics. And regardless of his attentions to slenderer waisted and anklied dancing partners!

There are a few women in the world who are plump, yes, even fat, by nature, and food abstinence and violent exercise change not the outline one whit. But they are few in number, very! In these exceptional cases obesity is due to an affliction of the pyroid glands and calls for specific treatment.

But in spite of indignant denials, the obesity problem of the average individual is a matter of excessive food consumption and inactivity. Or, to put it more bluntly, eating more than is necessary and exercising less than is necessary. Particularly the former.

Fate of the Chocolate Fiend.

The chocolate consumer above referred to has taken on in four years thirty-three pounds and has completely obliterated the pretty bride of as many summers ago. From her neck to her heels she has aged at least ten years—yes, more than that!

Yet she goes on munching and munching! She never walks anywhere. When her car is out of commission she calls a taxi. She has a maid who comes by the day to do the work of the small apartment and the cooking. So there's no form of exercise to burn up the fat.

She eats a big breakfast—has something between meals—luncheon—afternoon luncheon again at a bridge party or after the matinée, big dinner at 7, then more food before she goes to bed. Altogether eating daily three times what she needs.

And then tears roll down her fat cheeks when the dressmaker tells her it is almost impossible to fit her any more.

How many women you know live lives like that? Maybe they haven't got the thirty pounds yet—but just wait. This particular woman is that dimpled type in youth that has chins hanging heavy over her head just waiting for a chance to descend. The type that has to be fairly abstemious all her life in things culinary!

The average fleshy person is fond of "eats." The thought of denial of certain foods and lesser quantities of others is appalling. She pictures herself as the leading lady in a procession of mourners at the mere idea of going on a diet.

Beware of Bread and Potatoes.

Most of us have acquired the habit of eating a certain amount of food, regardless of our need or even our appetite. Many of us are satisfied before dessert, and could get along perfectly well without it, but, habit prevailing, we partake of some fat-making concoction, and if it tickles our palate we ask for more.

Two articles of food which people find hardest to deny themselves are potatoes and white bread. Some of us can pass up the potatoes heroically enough, but bread is the Waterloo, seemingly.

Now, bread is more responsible for obesity than any other article of diet, because we do not limit the amount eaten. Servings of vegetables and meat are limited, but not bread. Waiting to be served in restaurants, one will devour a roll or two before the meal is considered begun. At home the heaped up bread plate quickly disappears.

Creamed soups, creamed foodstuffs, pastry, ice cream, and cake, and rich mayonnaise and oil dressings on salads are foods with fuel value, which, if partaken of generously, provide an excess of fat. Some women who could Vegetable soups, consomme, or bouillon are not fattening. Green vegetables have a low food value. Those containing a large amount of cellulose or bulk, such as celery, cabbage, asparagus, cauliflower, spinach, onions, etc., fill the stomach and satisfy. A diet composed largely of fruits and vegetables has the additional compensation of correcting constipation. Candy, starchy foods, and fat meats have the opposite tendency.

Get Down to the Minimum.

One can eat herself into shape as well as out of it, by eating only three meals a day and getting that down to the minimum need. The less moving about and exercise one's day demands, the less food supply should be provided.

An excellent way to begin reducing is to shave off one-third at every meal, then one-half, and then get the luncheon down to just one-third of its original amount.

Say you have been eating a breakfast of three slices of toast thickly buttered, eggs, and three slices of bacon, fruit, coffee—maybe two cups with sugar and cream, quite likely three lumps of sugar. Shave that down the first week to two pieces of toast thinly buttered, one egg, and two small slices of bacon; fruit, two lumps of sugar, one-third less amount of cream, and just one cup of coffee. You won't be hungry at all, you will find. Shave the luncheon and dinner down the same way, erring on the side of less than one-third.

The next week cut it down to one-half. If the egg is not fried, you may take a whole one on a strict reducing diet. It is not fattening if you leave out the butter. But an amazing amount of cream and sugar may be partaken of in a month of two cups of coffee at each meal. Figure that out for yourself.

Consider Food Values.

No eating between meals. Drink water if you feel faint or hungry, or eat an apple.

Then get acquainted with the foods that are fatmaking and those that are not, and arrange your menus scientifically.

The time has come when a woman apologizing for getting fat is apologizing for her appetite at the same time. That her appetite is appeased in ignorance of the law of food values will not make it excusable.

My Most Embarrassing Moment

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, The Tribune, Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

Only Part of the Game.

While I was student pastor at the little town of Phillips I went to a young people's party, and they played cross questions and silly answers (a game in which the party forms two lines, facing each other; one person goes down one line and gives each person a question, and another goes down the other line and gives an answer to each one. Then the one having the first question repeats it and the one having the first answer repeats it, and so forth.) Well, I was giving the questions, and when I got well down the line I happened to give the question, "May I see you home tonight?" to a bashful girl I had not met before this occasion. Instead of understanding the game she blushed and said: "Why, I d-o-n-'t know—I came with my brother." I had to explain. L. M. T.

Her Locks Were False.

After a siege of typhoid fever my hair all came out and in order to make it come in better I had it all cut off. Had to wear a wig. One afternoon late went to the train to meet some friends and just as the engine whizzed by there was an unusually strong gust of wind. To my amazement and horror my hat and my hair went flying down the platform, and there I stood looking for all the world like a brand new robin. I cried out: "O, there goes my hat and my hair." Of course that drew every one's attention and it seemed years before a kind young man returned it to me. I wasn't long in getting away from the curious crowd; my sisters greeted the newly arrived friends. E. F. C.

A Vicious Circle.

My most embarrassing moment occurred one busy Saturday afternoon, when I went into a bank accompanied by my niece, leaving my big bulldog outside. While I was busy at the window, my niece told me proudly that she had got Cox in, which was all very well—then.

But when I went to go out of the bank the dog became frightened by the revolving doors, and absolutely refused to follow me. Each time that I would think I had him, he would back out, and, being really stronger than I, would get back into the bank. I can see myself yet, going around and around through those doors, entreating that big dog to go with me, to the amusement of about forty men, who either feared to tackle the big dog or else enjoyed our little entertainment.

When I finally did get him out he was so overjoyed to be free again that he barked loudly and jumped all over me, which added further to the entertainment of the onlookers. P. J.

Not in the Lease.

We had taken a furnished apartment, and a box of clothes was left in one room. I was under the impression that the woman from whom we had leased the place had gone to California, and as I was short of house dresses, I took one out of this box. I was hanging up clothes in the laundry later when the owner of the dress walked in. Neither of us mentioned the dress, but $ was vastly relieved when she departed. C. L. K.

It Sounded Informal.

One night when walking home from high school I saw a neighbor across the street, and by way of friendly greeting called: "Hello, John." Much to my embarrassment the editor of our weekly paper, an elderly, sedate citizen, walking a few yards in front of me, turned, tipped his hat, and replied: "Good evening, Miss Florence." F. B.

Plain but Costly.

We were enjoying the Easter parade with another couple. The women began discussing the prices of the new spring millinery, and my friend's wife remarked that she had paid $35 for her new spring bonnet.

Noting that she wore just a plain sailor shape with a band of flowers, I said: "Why didn't you wear it today?" She replied: "This is it." D. D. S.

Beauty Answers

By Antoinette Donnelly

TROUBLED: THE TWO PRINCIPAL causes which bring about a premature thinning of the hair are a deficient circulation of the blood in the scalp and the constant presence of dandruff. Daily brushing of the hair and frequent shampooing will remedy dandruff. The brushing massages the scalp at the same time and helps the blood circulation. Brush until there is a feeling of warmth in the scalp and all particles of dandruff are removed. Wash brushes frequently in water containing a little ammonia. The way horses' coats are kept thick and glossy and in a healthy condition is through the constant use of the currycomb and brush.

READER: READING IN BED IS all right, so one of the best eye men in the country tells me, providing the light is right. The light should illuminate over the left shoulder and be on a level with the top of the head. Ceiling lights and side lights and lamps removed some distance are what cause the damage.

QUERY: THE FUNCTION OF THE eyebrows is to protect the eyes from dust and to give shade to the eye. They certainly have been left to the none too tender mercies of the elements with the recent reduction of protection. But they are not wearing them that way now—not the exaggerated thread line, thank heavens.

EDNA: MOLES ARE REALLY small birthmarks. They should not be irritated by inexpert attempts at removal. A surgeon should do the job. Sponging with hydrogen peroxide solution will sometimes help to bleach a tanned skin. The corrosive sublimate preparation should be used only under a physician's direction because it is a dangerous poison.

MOLLY: THROAT DISORDERS would call for medical attention.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

COUNTING THE HOURS.

MY beloved wife: These long, weary days are almost over. I am counting the hours now instead of days until I see my little sweetheart. I have loved you forever and ever, but these long weeks of waiting have made you more priceless than I ever knew.

To see you flitting about our little home; to hear your merry voice; to behold our little one in your arms; these are the things that have saved my life and made things more bearable all this time.

God gave me the things that make a perfect life when he gave me you to care for and to love.

Tonight as the moon came up it took me back to the old beautiful lake where I first held you in my arms and watched the moonlight as it flooded the lake. Those silvery beams gradually shone on us as the light came over the tree tops. Then my heart was overflowing with happiness, but I knew little of the love that we know now in our perfect union.

I will be with you in just three days and then I will prove once more that I am Your devoted husband,

HENRY.

FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS

By Loretta King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Tribune, Chicago.

WHEN Dorothy joined us at lunch yesterday we all demanded to know why she had failed to put in an appearance at that time and place the day before.

"Not all at once, please," Dorothy protested at our questions. "Let me have a few peaceful moments to concentrate on my order. I'm as hungry as though I'd been on a crackers and water diet for three weeks."

She studied the card a minute or two, and then glanced up to add, "As a matter of fact, I'm more anxious to tell you what kept me away yesterday than you are to find out. I want to know what you all think Alice should do." She calmly resumed the study of the menu card without another word, until Ann, a little exasperated by her words and manner, caught her attention by saying:

"If you really want to tell us something, why don't you begin at the beginning instead of asking what we think of something we know nothing about. Did you have lunch with Alice yesterday? Is that why you weren't over here with us?"

"Yes, I went to lunch with Alice," said Dorothy, ignoring Ann's evident irritation. "I met her on the car yesterday morning and she asked me to have lunch with her. She said she wanted to talk to me about something, and seemed a bit worried when she said it. I wouldn't have gone, though, if I'd known how much I'd have been missed here."

"Well, to get on with my story," Dorothy resumed after Minnie had gone off with our order, "Alice told me I might tell you if I didn't mention the names of her employers. So I'll call one the senior partner and the other junior, to distinguish them. The whole thing simply amounts to this: Alice suspects Mr. Junior of playing some underhanded game on his partner. She doesn't know just what it is, but she thinks she ought to tell her suspicions to the other man."

"What are her suspicions?" Marion asked.

"About six months ago," said Dorothy, "while the senior partner was out of town, the junior fired their old bookkeeper, who had been with them for years. The two men had had a quarrel, but Alice, who had been a witness to most of the incident, felt that it had been deliberately provoked by the junior partner.

"When the senior returned to town there was a new man at the bookkeeper's desk, and although Alice didn't hear the explanation of the change, she was sure that the junior partner had built up a pretty black case against Denby, the bookkeeper. She had heard the senior partner say, 'Well, you can't trust anybody these days. I'd have sworn old Denby was on the square.' That was the first thing that aroused Alice's suspicions about the junior partner, for she was as sure of old Denby's honesty as she was of her own."

"That's hardly enough for Alice to go on," Marion said, as Dorothy paused. "You'd better tell her to keep her suspicions to herself. That old bookkeeper could have been crooked without her knowing anything about it, and the young man may have been perfectly right when he fired him."

"But that's not all," said Dorothy. "Since the new bookkeeper's been on the job he and the junior partner are closed up in the latter's private office whenever the senior is out, but they hardly speak a word to each other when the older man is there. If the junior partner isn't crooked, then he's carrying on some mysterious work—he and the bookkeeper—that they don't want the old man to know anything about."

Dorothy seemed to be as impressed with the seriousness of the situation as Alice herself, and was rather disappointed, I think, when Ann said:

"Tell Alice to forget about it. She's only making herself miserable by her doubts and suspicions, and she might find herself involved in serious trouble if she makes any accusations. As long as her suspicions aren't confirmed she has no right to pass them on to anybody. If she had some definite proof that the man was defrauding his partner then I think it would be her duty to inform on him. But to act on such vague suspicions, when she knows nothing about the transactions of the two men, would be foolhardy, as far as she and her job were concerned, and cruel to them."

This speech made an impression on Dorothy, and she said she would tell Alice what Ann had said.

Occasionally a girl in an office is involved in a speculation similar to the above and she allows her suspicions to color all the actions and words of the suspected one to conform to her own theories and views. In transmitting her suspicions to others she may be the cause of irremediable mischief by ruining the reputation of a perfectly innocent person.

MADE FOR REST — AND WELL MADE

For a Good Night's Rest—

"Tiger" DontSag is the spring. It's "Made for Rest" in design, in materials, in construction.

DontSag's comfort comes from exceedingly elastic coil springs that hold each cable in position, yet permit it to "give" comfortably.

Broad woven-wire bands on both edges take the extra strain there and give the bed a trim look. Squeaks and rattles can never come from the strong frame. The rounded corners can tear no bed clothes.

How Many Times Have You Wished For An Extra Bed in The NURSERY?

Perfect Concealment

A clumsy, stationary, immovable bed would make a bed room out of your nursery—but a Murphy In-A-Dor Bed would keep it a nursery by day—with all the floor space available—and at night, when the bed is needed, simply open the closet door, revolve the bed, lower it into the room, and a fresh, clean, comfortable bed is before you, with mattress, bed clothes and pillows in place and undisturbed. No effort—no trouble—and yet you are doubling the usefulness of this room.

If you are planning to build or remodel your home, install Murphy In-A-Dor Beds. Talk the matter over now with your architect or builder. To arrange for the Murphy Bed is simple, but it is essential that you get detailed measurements from us first. Write for complete information.

Exemplary values in women's apparel

We say "exemplary" because the items described below represent but a few of the excellent offerings in fashionable spring attire now to be found here. An inspection will prove profitable to the woman seeking to combine style with value. The garments are from our regular stocks which have been sharply reduced in price, and from special purchases recently made.

The suits at 36.75

—are splendid specimens of the style creator's art. Fashioned of trico-twill and tricotine in the effective box coat, ripple back and blouse styles. The woman preferring the tailleur will find many models to satisfy her. All elegantly trimmed. Complete range of sizes for women and misses.

The wraps at 37.50

—are revelations in stylish gracefulness. Developed of Florizella cloth, tricotine, bolivia, velour and polo cloth, in a large range of the most popular colors of the season. The new cape collars are worthy of note. Trimmed with silk braid and embroidery in many patterns.

The dresses at 24.75

—offer the discriminating woman a broad array of models for every practical wearing occasion. Among the silks you may choose Canton crepes, taffetas, satins and crepe meteors. Tricotine represents the cloth models. Of course the latest developments in style are embodied.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune Chicago.

A COAT WITH BRASS BUTTONS.

WHEN I was a girl away at school I had a cadet blue coat trimmed with gold braid and brass buttons. I was nicknamed the "Soldier Girl." Some of the boys said I ought to give away buttons for souvenirs, as real cadets do. One boy scratched his initials on a button, and I promised it to him as soon as the coat had worn out.

At the end of the school year we parted, with what is commonly called an "understanding." He had four years to spend in medical school, and we were going to be many miles apart.

Through some sort of error, I received no mail of any kind from him, and I was too proud to write, and so the time lengthened into years of silence.

Five years passed. One day I was helping mother look over some trunks in the attic. I came across the blue coat, faded and worn, but bringing memories. I fingered the scratched button lovingly. Suddenly I had an idea. I decided to send the button to his old home address. Three days later I answered our door bell to find him. He was living in a town nearby and had a splendid practice already. We are married now, and my husband is never without the button, which he calls his lucky charm. J. A. M.

If We Couldn't Tell a Lie

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Three Years Too Young.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 15 years old and would like to know if I am too young to go out riding with boys my age, or let them escort me to parties. How can I get out of going to parties and dances with boys if I dislike to go so often? JANE."

I think you are too young, Jane, by two years at least—possibly three. Just tell the boys your mother says you are too young for their company yet awhile. If she has not said it to you, she ought to.

Don't Let Him Know.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 years of age and have been liking a boy for two years. I think he likes me, but I also think he likes my friend better. How could I let him know that I love him or how could I make him love me? "ANXIOUS."

The best way to do is not to try. You would not want to tell him you loved him or let him suspect it, or the other girl would win him sure.

Plunge Right In.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 23 and in love with a girl 6 years my junior. Recently I was obliged to go away a few months for my health. I later found that she was going about with another boy friend. Now do you think it proper for me to try to resume our friendship, regardless of this other friends, as I cannot forget her? "PERPLEXED."

Yes, Perplexed. Many a good girl has been won that way. Just plunge right in.

TRADE MARK
Reed, Fiber and Collapsible Baby Carriages

OUT for a stroll goes mother proud and happy, with baby bubbling over with glee. In her Sidweave Gondola, baby finds all the comfort in the world and plenty of room in which to frisk and play. The three-piece, full-box mattress is an exclusive feature, one piece having a solid back adjustable to any position. The long springs are wonderfully resilient; the long pushers make easy turning and lifting; the hood with storm curtain is deep and sheltering. Mother is proud of the vehicle's graceful lines, its distinctive steel wheels, its narrow wale corduroy upholstery, and its extra fine texture Sidweave—the fibers woven with a regularity which rivals a fine dress fabric. This new method of weaving retains the wide range of designs heretofore limited to hand-woven reed carriages. It's the very latest. Write for dealer's name and valuable book.

Tastes naturally differ. For those who prefer a hand-woven reed this is a beautiful design. The body can be reversed so baby faces the Mother. The large steel wheels are especially light and strong. The upholstery is softly padded. This carriage is remarkably light in weight yet is very roomy and substantial.

As baby grows, you can show no greater regard for her than in the purchase of a Sidway Park Wagon. Here's a beauty of genuine, hand-woven reed, graceful, easy to get baby in and out of, and extra light in weight. The hood is lined and is deep and sheltering. The foot well is adjustable. And how smoothly baby rides! Did you ever see such long springs or so compact a carriage?

HOOVER SUCTION SWEEPER DEMONSTRATION — FUR STORAGE—REASONABLE RATES — SLIP COVERS MADE TO ORDER

Patterns by Clotilde

9381—Woman's dress. Sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4⅛ yards of 36 inch or 3¾ yards of 40 inch material with ¼ yard of 20 inch contrasting material and ⅞ yard of binding.

9985—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4⅞ yards of 36 inch material.

1000—Child's dress. Sizes 2, 4, and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1⅝ yards of 32 inch material and ¾ yard of edging.

How to Use the Patterns

A STUNNING plaid will make up well in No. 9381. Or a white Indian head cotton, or some becoming color in a chambray or gingham will be equally good—these plain materials to be trimmed with a small checked or a plaid gingham. If a plaid gingham is chosen for the dress, pockets and sash can be of the plaid, too, and the pocket hems, collar hem, sash end, hems, and cuffs can be made of organdie, plain gingham matching one of the colors in the plaid, or a fine pique. And these can all be attached by a simple fagotting stitch, for all decorative stitches will be much in evidence this summer.

The hems will have to be perfectly cut, folded, and basted so that the folded edges meet perfectly, and then basted on a piece of heavy paper. The edge of cuffs, pockets, etc., to which the hems are to be attached, are basted to the paper also at the desired distance. It is a good idea to draw parallel lines on the paper say three-eighths of an inch apart, and baste the cloth exactly on these lines; then the fagotting will be easy to do.

If the sleeves are finished with the deep cuffs, they can be attached with the fagotting stitch instead of setting separate hems on.

When a waist fastens on the shoulder, there will never be any trouble if the work is accurately done; but those sewers who think it a waste of time to do careful work either turn out badly made clothes that are always giving trouble or else do a discouraging lot of undoing in the making.

Trace or clearly mark all seam lines in any garment to be made. Then pin seams carefully together, exactly matching the marked lines, and when correctly pinned, paste just as carefully. After the garment has been fitted and is ready for stitching and finishing, lay a straight strip of strong lining on the dress material on the under side, so that one edge comes exactly on the shoulder seam line of the back. This is for the left shoulder seam that has to be left open.

The back part of the shoulder seam is finished for the faced hem, and the front for the extension hem. After the strip is basted in place on the wrong side, turn the shoulder seam back over it, so that the folded edge is where the seam is traced, and hem down invisibly or stitch. It depends on the material and whether or not the waist is lined. The collar will about cover any stitching there.

The "stay" piece or extension for the front part of the shoulder opening should have both long edges turned in. Laying it on the wrong side of the seam, one turned in edge is basted on the shoulder line marking and the other edge is basted to the edge of the shoulder seam which has also been turned in. It is not a bad idea to overhand this edge nicely before stitching on the machine. And the other edge is stitched right on the shoulder seam marking.

Now you have a firm place for the snaps or hooks and loops to be attached. Then the shoulder seam should be pinned together at each end and pins put in both front and back at the points where the snaps are to go on.

No. 9985 is about as simple a pattern as can be, and yet is capable of making a decidedly smart dress. Some one of the summer silks or a fine voile would be lovely, or one of the solid colored chambrays. The skirt is in two pieces and is a straight gathered one. It is made to open down the middle, but need not necessarily be left open the entire length. Lay the hems which are marked on the pattern, then lap the right over the left and stitch together, starting eleven inches down from the top.

The waist is cut kimono fashion and opens down the front, making a continuous line of buttons from neck to hem.

Now for the trimming. There are perforations on the pattern, showing where to put the trimming band; and there can be nothing newer or prettier for this than darned net. Lace in every form is to be used this summer, from all lace dresses to lace overdresses or lace for trimming in some manner or other. Whether you buy the square meshed cotton or silk net depends of course on the material of which your dress is to be made, and silk or cotton floss is used to darn the pattern with, using preferably a blunt needle.

The same sort of bands are used to finish the edges of the short sleeves.

The sash ends should be trimmed to match, and a narrow lace edging used to finish the collar.

No. 1006 is a dear little design for a dress for a small girl. It has a shallow round yoke, on to which is set the kimono cut waist, and the waist and skirt are set into a band. The pattern is suitable for a play or best dress, and if the former is to be made why not applique on a gayly colored duck, goose, or other animal, using, of course, some contrasting color and the blanket stitch.

If a dressy dress is desired, there are wonderful cambrics, lawns, and linens from which to choose, and a tiny lace edge around the neck and short sleeves and some delicate tracery in embroidery on the band and sleeves will be all that is necessary.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"I am completely worn out. My little daughter, 5 years of age, has been constantly ill. I am far from being strong myself, and yet I like to take her out every day, as she needs the air and sunshine. I have another child 3 years of age and I do all my own work. I thought that perhaps some kind friend who owned an automobile and had a spare seat would take me out some time. I would appreciate it. "Mrs. C. J. H."

This is an opportunity to do a real act of kindness, and I hope that can tell this little tired out mother, in the near future, that some kind friend who owns an automobile will call and take her for a ride through the parks.

"You have conferred a great favor in the publication in your department of our golden wedding anniversary. The generous response from so many good people, residents of this city and even from other places not in the state of Illinois, came to us both as a delightful surprise. We feel deeply grateful to each and every one of them, and we would like those kindly souls to know of the happiness they have given us. If you will publish this in your column we shall feel thankful for the favor. MR. AND MRS. G."

"Is there a kind friend among your readers who has any old cotton pieces that could be used for applications and who would send them to us? My father has had a sore on his leg for years, and mother has used every piece of cotton cloth she could find. I would be willing to call any place in the city for the pieces. I wish to thank the person for the doll buggy sent to my little sister. ERNEST."

Who will write for this little fellow's address with a view to gratifying his modest request?

"I wonder if there are any of the readers who have any good sized pieces of green serge who would pass them on to me. MRS. G. W."

A modest request, indeed, is that of Mrs. W., and how many readers would be only too happy to send any pieces of green serge they might have.

"I have a full size bed and spring which I would like to give to some family who needs one and cannot afford to buy it. MRS. J. A. F."

Thank you so much. Your kindly offer will probably fill a long felt want in some household.

INGROWN NAIL

Will Turn Right Out Itself

A few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing toe nail reduces inflammation and pain at once and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, any druggist will sell you a small bottle containing directions.

Don't Try to Hide Blemishes

Get Rid of Them. Use Stuart's Calcium Wafers and Be Overjoyed With the Result of a More Beautiful Complexion.

Yes, you say, she certainly has a wonderfully beautiful complexion. And so may you. The secret is in Stuart's Calcium Wafers which contain calcium sulphide.

This remarkable substance is one of nature's materials to keep the skin in healthy condition. Its action in the skin comes from the blood, cleansed and purified by a thorough laxative effect in bowels and liver, and you will be overjoyed to see the rash and pimples disappear.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are for transforming a muddy complexion to the loveliest, softest and most delicate skin by overcoming constipation.

Do not fail to get a 60-cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store; avoid harsh cathartics; trust to nature and you will never again use hair-growing pastes and smears.

"Somebody's sleeping in MY bed"

MOST folks go through life like Goldilocks in the Bear's house. This bed's too hard, that bed's too soft—but Oh, the comfort when they find the bed that's just right.

Bed comfort depends on the mattress. Many feel comfortable enough when you buy them. But soon the tufts pull out, or they lump in one place or sag in another, and, without knowing why, you're missing that good night's sleep you need and should have.

will not spread the tufts will not come out will not become lumpy chock full of comfort.

Never-Stretch mattresses have permanent comfort built into them. They cannot spread, tufts don't come out, and the filling is all kept just where it'll give your tired body most comfort.

FURNITURE dealers and department stores everywhere, who sell better bedding, have the "Good Night Never Stretch" mattress ready for you.

YOUR CHOICE of luxurious fillings; Elastic Cotton Felt, Fluffy Kapok, or sterilized Curled Hair—covered in beautiful tickings.

ALSO the "Good Night" Upholstered Box Spring and "Good Night" Pure Feather Pillow.

20,000 yards Shantung pongees at the lowest prices since 1916

The unusually large "purchase" was negotiated by our Yokohama representative, who took advantage of the financial stringency in the Orient and forestalled the possible upward revision of the American tariff. The extremely low prices, and the unlikelihood of your being able to secure such values later, will influence you to be prompt to profit through this unique sale. Four qualities, all in 33-inch width, at

65c 95c 1.25 1.65

Chinese and Japanese all-silk Shantung pongees of the highest standard; firmly woven, with fast edges; both rough and smooth fabrics, in natural or bamboo shade. Hand-loomed by native weavers, this Shantung is as far superior to the ordinary pongees as silk is to cotton. It is superbly adapted for women's summer dresses, blouses, sports attire, and house gowns; for men's shirts, pajamas and slumber robes; for children's wear; and for draperies. Second floor and subway.

On bargain squares throughout the daylight silk section. Mail and telephone orders promptly and carefully filled.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

THE TAILLEUR IS THE RAGE.

By Mary Brush Williams.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—You would adopt the uniform of Paris? Then buy yourself a little gray tailor made, draw it in the waist line with ripples in the of the coat, and have it too t waisted if possible. Only please t follow this last instruction. Let lovely long American silhouette w itself. Why, the French are so about being short waisted—I going to say I could not under- d it, but I can. The reason is that fit in with their style of architec- —but not with ours.

They also like seams to come too far k on the shoulders, so that the back your collar doesn't set round your k as high as it should. In other rds, their tailoring cannot touch rs, but their ideas can; so let us e one of them and "treat" it in our n way.

The tailleur, for the first time in the tory of mankind, is the rage in ts—made like the accompanying ration. Look at it and you have whole story. What is there for to describe, save the blouse. And it a whole chapter. It must come be- the waistline, be a middy blouse outline, and perfectly plain.

ussing one moment for generaliza- , the craze of the moment is for es that are severely decorated or not decorated at all. Fur I have r seen used so sparingly; embroid- is used with restraint; and if lace, ast there isn't much of it dangling e you.

ilot has an old time of a prewar d, beautifully colored and beauti- made. It is there, I suppose, just ppease old time custom, but it Victorian. I saw a woman or- ng a coat this afternoon at Mme. quin's, and she ordered it without embroidery—she didn't like it—but wanted the coat in crêpe morocan; rybody wants everything in that. dels are not made in it because it too expensive. When she got her mate it was more expensive with- the embroidery than with, such is cost of the material.

ut as to the subject of blouses, I really finished. All that is im- tant to remember is to keep them ite and in crêpe de chine, either ite or black. As for the tailleura, it smart to have them lined in ivory ored crêpe. The outline you can observe for yourself, from the sketch. It is of Oxford gray; the hat is of white crêpe de chine with a tiny veil of black, the shoes are of black and white leather, worn with gray silk stockings. The flare over the hips of the tailleur is in the manner of the Louis XV. period.

Whenever I make any positive statement in this column I like to follow it up with something contradictory. For that is Paris. It follows up all of its mandates with something contradictory.

By way of rendering null and void all previous remarks about plainness, here is a chic dress which is ornate. It is of white crêpe georgette, heavily embroidered, and of course in black. It has the prevailing round neck and simple, straight line of the body, with a belt that does not belt you too much. This is of black, and apropos of nothing, a red ribbon hangs from it on the right side. The other distinguishing feature is the sleeves. They are really hardly sleeves at all, but ornaments. They are black and they are split, the two sections never connecting up from the time they leave the shoulder until they meet at the cuff—or more descriptively, wristlets—heavily embroidered.

I like this third costume very much. The wrap is a cape of black cashmere, and with crêpe morocan it shares the popularity of the moment. Inserts are planted vertically every so often of white crêpey material, finely plaited. It has the round neck so popular in wraps, with people in general, but much less so with me, for while it is one of the most becoming lines in all art it lets the back of your neck get chilly, and that is one of the best known ways for getting yourself down with a cold.

But never mind. I should never let that stand between me and something becoming. You can pull your scarf over it when the night air blows across it in the side seats of the elevated. And the cape itself looks far from bad when pulled up high. The hat accompanying this is distinguished. It is of white felt, and the brim is cut longer than it really ought to be. The slim ends left over tie on the right side and form the only trimming. Plainness is the thing to be achieved in hats as well as in dresses.

The fourth silhouette is perhaps valuable, like another forwarded to you recently, as presaging the future. We seem to be headed toward the circular. This dress is now appearing on the stage in Paris. It consists of a tight bodice, unornamented and uncorseted, which is much in the manner of the day. In some unaccountable way the material is slashed into shoulder straps—don't ask me for the pattern. The material of the costume is black taffeta. The skirt expands into a rounded shape, and is overlaid from hip to hip in the back with black tulle that drips rose petals down its long points on the sides. The wide flat hat is of black tulle, too, and its ornament is of jet pendants, which hang on the right from the under side of the brim.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Down in Mississippi a mother had been trying to teach her daughter two things (among many others), one being that company should be placed first; the other, the proper position of the first, second, and third persons in the construction of a sentence.

The other day Madaline came in and said: "Luther and I were over here, and had a good time swinging. Then we went over to his house, and Luther and I, no, I and Luter, played in the sand."

The mother said: "What? I and Luther?" To which the girl replied, "Well, I guess I was his company, so I ought to come first." M. P. P.

Rosalie accompanied her mother and daddy to call on an invalid friend. She had never met this friend before, and did not know her name. During the early part of the visit she was quiet. Later she decided she'd play peek-a-boo, so, getting behind a large chair, she peeked out from the side of it, and, looking directly at the invalid friend, piped up in the sweetest little voice imaginable: "Peek-a-boo all the people." Nobody was to be slighted. S. B. D.

When Bobby was called upstairs for dinner, he said he was not hungry, but in about five minutes he came up and took his place at the table. Whereupon his mother started to fix his plate, but Bobby stopped her by saying he did not care for anything to eat. His brother asked him why he came up then, and Bobby answered, "O, just to be sociable." J. H.

Julia was enthusiastic over a comedy she had seen at a moving picture theater, and proceeded in jumbled baby fashion to explain what she had seen. The thing that impressed her the most was a toe dancer with short fluffy skirts. She said, "O, aunty, you should have seen the girl in full bloom." G. B.

Were You Born in May?

by DORIS BLAKE

If you were born on or between April 21 and May 21, you come under the sign of Taurus. You naturally live in the realm of your sensations and emotions. Your treatment of a person depends rather on your mood and feeling at the time than on any fixed regard, hence you are not at all times reliable and steadfast. You are, however, loyal and magnanimous to friends, sometimes too much so. You are fond of good living.

Once started in a project you are never drawn away from it until you have won. As a rule you will have your own way and accomplish your own desires at all hazards. You are natural conquerors, are determined, and even stubborn.

You are great lovers of literary pursuits and inclined to be studious. You are apt to become a leader through your adaptation to the demands of the people and your great ability to commit to memory from books and authorities and your powers of mental and physical endurance. You are strong physically, although frequently you do not show it.

You are easily irritated by opposition and are liable to extremes in everything you do. You are zealous friends or enemies, but easily turned aside or mollified in this respect. You are best adapted to such studies as botany, chemistry, zoology, etc., which require great memorizing.

Since you are controlled by your emotions, you are kind when your sympathies are aroused, but you have a violent temper when angered and under excitement you are quite unmanageable. However, when a person has gained your sympathy, he has gained control over you to a great extent.

Your first impressions of how things will turn out can usually be relied upon. You should never decide any important matters when in the midst of business excitement, but should make your plans when entirely alone. The early morning when you first awake is the best time for you to make your decisions and lay your plans for the day. Children born under this sign are largely dependent on their education for their future position in life.

The emerald is the birthstone. Sympathetic friends are those born between Dec. 23 and Jan. 20, and between Aug. 24 and Sept. 23.

Colors: Azure, red, and yellow. Fortunate weeks: Those beginning Sept. 5 and Jan. 11.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

SWEET HERBS.

IF we could acquire again the full glory of "bon vivant" cookery, which so many people believe has passed away with prohibition, we must bring back the sweet herbs to their former place in salad, soup, and meat seasoning and in the diet drinks. The lack of the seasoning wines should be a stimulus to the work rather than a discouragement.

The model gardens in our city parks have done something toward this, by growing a considerable variety of sweet herbs in their borders. Few public markets of today sell the sweet herbs as of old, but then public markets are few, and throngs of patrons never visit any one small establishment. For this reason generally the rarer things lose place because not commercially profitable, and those who might use them forget that they ever knew about them.

The old French market in New Orleans has tried to keep such things, but the old herb woman who used to sit on the steps of Quincy market in Boston some time since disappeared. In Washington and Philadelphia some effort, I believe, is made to keep the herbs, and in all Ghetto markets in any of our cities these are likely to be found.

Sweet herbs often make quite unsweet foods eatable, and the cooking makes the food tolerably safe eating. In one or two localities women obliged to earn their living have profitably taken up the growing of sweet herbs.

Miss Parloa on Salads.

Miss Parloa, when her publishers finally allowed her to expand a cook book to nearly a thousand pages, with illustrations, rejoiced, as we find in her preface, that she could not only give recipes but "chapters on important subjects," the sum of which two sorts of work she hoped would "be found to be a trusty guide for all who are traveling on the road to good housekeeping."

Miss Parloa, of course, was a pioneer teacher and writer of cook books which contain much that is out of date, as some might consider her chapter on "Summer Salads and Sweet Herbs, How to Get Them from One's Own Garden," which is to be found in the most compendious of her cook books, "Miss Parloa's Kitchen Companion." But it is an interesting thing that while the science of dietetics has made some parts of her books so hopelessly out of date—especially many of the recipes in her once highly popular "Appledore" cook book—this same science has put back or exalted such teachings and preachments as those in the chapter on salads and herbs. She begins:

"When the times comes for garden making, people will do wisely to set apart a small portion of their land for salads and herbs. It is not necessary to have an acre of land to cultivate in order to do this. A small piece of land, properly used, will yield wonders in the ways of flavors and relishes."

Relieving a Scanty Diet.

In a slum region I know of, an old two story house with twenty windows or more, has in every one of them some old box, large or small, in which is raised sweet basil. In other almost wrecks of living places, the small pepper plants, and other such plants are raised to help out a scanty diet by means of flavor. It is my belief that fewer people would grow stout from over eating if such flavors were used, but in the localities mentioned there is little danger that the inhabitants will get even enough to eat.

In a rather fine back yard, loaned me last summer, I raised in 3 by 3 patches, corn salad that tasted like rose leaves, cos lettuce that was a delight to see when in soldierly uprightness it reached the perfect salad stage, upland and garden cress, with the delightful pepperiness, green peppers, tomatoes, and many other little bits, put in late and with an amateur hand. It is wonderful how much of animation for the summer salads can thus be obtained.

In discussing these garden flavors as seasonings for meat Miss Parloa says: "The meats of France are not remarkably fine; yet the poorest parts of a poor animal are prepared in a manner which renders them not only digestible, but very savory. Slow processes of cooking make the meat tender, and much of the flavor is obtained by the use of the sweet herbs and delicate vegetables." In her list for salad and meat flavors are: tarragon, sweet marjoram, summer savory, thyme, chervil, burnet, borage, and chives, and from such, she says, "a surprising variety of flavors may be obtained for soups, ragouts, and other dishes."

Some Herbs Almost Unknown.

Even in her day when such things were more commonly grown and sold than in ours, this pioneer cook found it strange "that people generally are ignorant of the use and value of some of the best and most delicate of herbs and salads." Ignorant they were of tarragon and chervil, which they should employ in the making of sauces, soups, salads and ragouts. The growing of a bit of chervil is practiced today by people who like fish. Being more delicate than parsley, it is considered more agreeable of flavor, though on much the same order, but it must be used in small quantities. One great cook says it should be used with moderation in soups and salads.

Just a few years ago an egg dish flavored with tarragon was considered one of the rarest of dishes in some of the most expensive eating places in New York City. Of this herb Miss Parloa says: "It has a flavor unlike anything else and gives to lettuce salads that peculiar and pleasing savor which one gets in France. In New York the French cooks use large amounts of it; outside that city, however, it is but little known except by French people."

This statement was made in 1887, that is, the book was then published. Of sorrel, borage and burnet, which latter has somewhat the taste of cucumber, Miss Parloa says that they should be prepared for the table just the same as lettuce.

Do You Know that in an Alaska the circulation is so perfect and the air so dry that you can place matches and a crock of salt side by side in the provision chamber close up under the ice and both the salt and the matches will remain bone dry. This perfect circulation plus the "cubed" cork and "confined" air WALLS, the most perfect refrigerator insulator known, make the Alaska incomparable as a food preserver and ice saver. Ask your dealer for a demonstration.

For the Best—Buy a Seven-Wall Cork Insulated Alaska

Alaska Means Preparedness for the Unexpected Guests

Seamless White Porcelain linings with highly glazed surface and round corners, or sanitary White Enamel linings make Alaskas easy to keep sweet, clean and immaculate. The food compartments are practically odorless and because of the wonderful dryness of the cold circulating air, they can be kept so with a minimum of cleaning effort.

The Alaska Cork Insulated Refrigerator, due to its unique scientific construction, is setting new standards of refrigerating efficiency and economy.

It keeps its entire contents chilled at exactly the right preservative temperature, encouraging the storing of a larger supply of provisions for convenience or emergency.

It refrigerates at an ice cost SO LOW that all comparative records have been smashed.

With an Alaska now so easily available there is no excuse for inadequate refrigerating facilities in any home.

Alaska superiority is due to its scientific construction. The walls are of "cubed" cork and "confined" air, this forming the most efficient insulation known to science.

Together with tight-locking doors, air-tight joints and top, and uniform circulation, these walls make the Alaska incomparable.

The Alaska is made in all sizes—all prices—splendidly constructed throughout—fully guaranteed. Lined with seamless, round-cornered Porcelain or with sanitary White Enamel. Durable—easy to clean—all parts easy to get at—unquestionably the greatest refrigerator value on the market.

See about getting an Alaska at once.

White teeth in diseased sockets are doomed

Watch your gums and you can prevent diseased sockets

Thousands of people have wrong notions about saving their teeth. All that's necessary, they think, is to keep them white and free from decay. This is important but it isn't enough.

The vital thing is to keep the gums healthy. Because pyorrhea, the greatest tooth destroyer of all, starts under the gums. The infection that begins in the gum tissue spreads (if unchecked) to the bony root socket.

This root socket is what holds the tooth in place. When pyorrhea germs undermine and destroy the sockets, the entire supporting foundation of the teeth is gone. So they loosen and fall out or must be extracted—though they may be sound and undecayed.

That is why dentists in increasing numbers prescribe Pyorrhocide Powder to keep gums healthy and to restore health to bleeding, receding spongy or tender gums.

In addition to its ingredients which keep the teeth white and clean, Pyorrhocide Powder is medicated with Dentinol, a germicidal and healing agent widely used by the dental profession in the treatment of pyorrhea at the dentist's chair.

Pyorrhocide Powder tones up the gums, stimulates their blood circulation, maintains hardness and firmness, thereby increasing the power to resist pyorrhea infection. Its effectiveness for this purpose has been conclusively proved by thorough tests in clinics devoted exclusively to pyorrhea study and research. That is why dentists everywhere recommend it.

The economical dollar package contains six months' supply. At all druggists and dental supply houses.

Free trial package to prove what real gum health means

Send coupon for free sample of Pyorrhocide Powder. Note how it leaves a refreshed, closely feeling of the teeth and gums long after brushing. To you who have used other dentifrices, it will prove a revelation. We will also send our educational booklet on the Prevention and Treatment of Pyorrhea.

FOR A VARIED CLIMATE.

THE bungalow is one of the most popular types of modern dwelling. The absence of stairs appeals to our ease loving present day nature, especially if we have received a preliminary training in flats. The "get-at-ableness" of the low walls cheapens the cost of construction, and goes far to offset the greater relative cost of roof and foundations.

But the bungalow was born in a hot climate, and unless carefully designed shows its origin. With all their advantages, two-thirds of such dwellings do not look suitable to a region like our northern states, where "winter comes to rule the varied year."

This bungalow looks suitable anywhere. With its broad roof and airy porch, it is a good home for a hot summer, and looks it. It is a good home for a cold winter, too, and looks that. There is a decided coziness in the way the house snuggles to the ground. The revealed chimney and the piers at the corners of the porch are brick, and the contrast of this strong color with the neutral toned stucco is always cheerful, but never more so than when snow covers the ground.

The porch, projecting to the side of the house as well as in front, catches every breeze there is, and makes an admirable sitting room in warm weather. It can be screened if desired; the square pillars make such a course easy.

The daytime quarters consist of a living and dining room, separated only by a post and panel division. In reality they form one spacious room, 12 feet by 24. In the living room part is the fireplace, flanked by windows and bookcases. In the dining room end is the sideboard part of a combination which takes away the need of a pantry. Both ends of the big room are well lighted, the dining quarters particularly so.

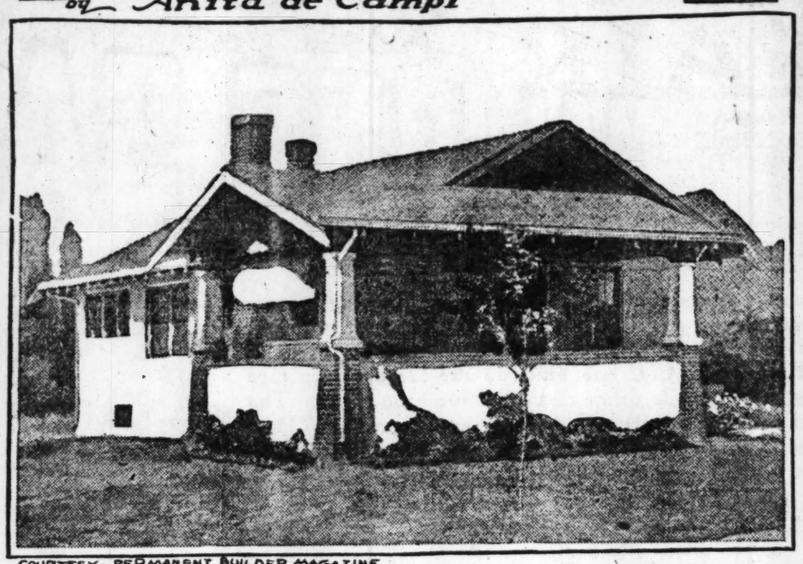
The kitchen is 8½x9½, but there is nothing cramped about it. It is a compact working room, lighted by triple casements over the sink. It contains the range and a dresser connecting with the sideboard in the dining room. The screened porch at the back is an ideal place for the refrigerator. The basement stairs open from the kitchen.

The other half of the house contains two chambers with a hall and bathroom between. The back chamber opens only from the hall; the front one has an additional door to the living room. The hall itself is reached only from the dining room, an arrangement which not only is handy to the kitchen but emphasizes the fact that the living and dining quarters are one.

Both bedrooms are of good size. The front one is 10x12 feet, the back one six inches shorter. Both have splendid cross ventilation. Both have, what is even rarer in bungalows, good sized closets.



COURTESY-PERMANENT BUILDER MAGAZINE

The bathroom is of a good size and well arranged. Close beside it is a linen closet.

The stucco walls of this dwelling are laid on metal lath, which is fastened to a wooden frame and carefully back plastered. So managed, the stucco, protects the steel from rust, and the steel supplies strength to the stucco, while both guard the wooden frame against fire and decay. The interior gypsum plaster is laid on metal also, and the roof shingles are of asphalt. This house will last for generations, warm in winter and cool in summer because of its sound construction and hollow walls.

All this beauty, convenience, and durability are packed into an amazingly small space. The outside measurements of this house, excluding porches, are 24x36 feet. That fact alone proves that the architect knew his business; and a house in which there is no waste space is an easy one to keep in order.

V. E.: The most popular size floor lamp is the "junior" height, which is a good chair side lamp and pleasant to read by. Table lamps are used, of course, as well. No, I should not use the chair covers and window draperies alike. One chair covered with the drapery material would be quite enough. For your davenport in the living room, use a slip cover of flowered linen showing American beauty rose, olive green, brown, and a touch of blue on a fawn colored ground. You might use champagne colored silk on your lamp shade and trim it with taupe moss. The color of the chairs as you describe it does not seem objectionable to me. With all of the papers of which you have inclosed samples, champagne colored silk gauze would be lovely for the windows. One good looking parchment shade might help out your living room. Use simple brown straight line furniture in the boy's room. Tan striped madras would make a pretty curtaining for this room. You might trim it with narrow, bright colored worsted fringe.

We Live to Learn.

En route from Chicago to Omaha I met a young fellow in the diner, who, as he was only 16, and on his first trip away from home, warmed up considerably, and when we left to go back to our coach for a smoke we were on quite good terms. As I passed into the smoking compartment on our coach I saw my companion hesitate, and it was fully a minute later when he finally seated himself beside me and asked, "Are we in the right coach?"

"Why, yes, this is the third ahead of the diner, isn't it?"

"I counted them, too, sir, but what has become of the one with all the beds in it? They must have changed them while we were away."

After an explanation it was a flushed and wiser young man who entered Omaha, particularly in regard to the coaches with disappearing beds.

Other Lands, Other Ways.

Mother and I were traveling abroad, and as we had a compartment to ourselves one day, we put our bags in the seats. At one stop a man boarded the train and stood in the doorway of our compartment, gazing at us and then at our luggage. I removed it. He entered, seated himself, and glued his gaze to me, making me most uncomfortable. In the course of fifteen minutes his head rested on my shoulder. I jumped up. I couldn't remonstrate as I didn't speak his language, so I went out into the passageway and found the guard, who assured me that the man would be removed. I have been informed since, by people who know more about the customs abroad than I do, that by removing my bags from the seat I gave the man a direct invitation to flirt.

Just What She Wanted.

My sister Joyce and I were returning home from our vacation. It was the first time we had traveled alone, and so she was taking every precaution. She warned me repeatedly about being careful of strangers, and at such length that I was exceedingly nervous. Late in the afternoon we were on the back platform when the train stopped. I heard one of a group of boys say, "Bob, I think I'll get off and buy some ice cream cones."

"All right, Chick," came the answer.

Chick got off and soon appeared with six cones. There were but four boys in the party.

"There was a tap on my shoulder. "Have an ice cream cone?" It was Chick speaking.

"No, thank you," I said, frostily.

"I'm sorry," said Chick, and turned away. He offered it to Joyce.

"Now," I thought, "there'll be another argument. Joyce will never accept it."

The boy was smiling at my sister.

"Thank you," said she, "it's so warm today, this is just what I wanted." And to my amazement she took what I had been longing for but had been afraid to take after all her stern instructions.

Watch Pyorrhea Go
With War's Wonder Antiseptic

Gum soreness and bleeding usually end in one week. Destroys germ cause promptly. Free trial proves it.

Nothing like Kloria has ever been known before for sore, bleeding gums, pyorrhea, etc. Usually within one week all gum soreness and bleeding disappear and soon the shrunken gums tighten around the teeth again. Anyone can easily apply it, and the results are really amazing. Doubt it, if you must, but try it.

This is the same wonderful new antiseptic agent which healed war wounds often in one-fourth the usual time, and conquered germ infection where all old-standard antiseptics had failed.

Never before was there an antiseptic so healing, so effective in destroying germs, and with so many uses in every home.

Kloria doesn't irritate, is soothing, pleasant, and absolutely safe, because not poisonous. Yet by scientific test it is over forty times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid.

Apply it without fear to any skin disease, such as eczema or barber's itch, and notice how quickly the trouble fades away. Mark how it soothes away irritation and itching. Note how promptly it destroys the pus infection of boils, carbuncles and sores; how it heals cuts and burns more rapidly than was ever known before. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp with Kloria and watch the scalp itching disappear in a few applications, yet it is harmless as water to the hair. Try it for mouth wash and gargle—see how quickly it relieves sore throat, how clean the mouth feels. Kloria is yet far more effective than poisonous antiseptics for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clean, colorless, stainless and virtually odorless.

All druggists, 30c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

LOOM WOVEN Lloyd Baby Carriages and Furniture

Lloyd Loom Woven Wickers Are First in Demand; In Every Way Better Than Those Made by Hand.

Here's the Very Carriage You Always Dreamed Of

Remember how you planned it—a low, roomy, comfortable carriage; smooth and gliding. O, yes! And smart and good-looking—graceful lines and the newest finish.

Well, here it is at last—the prettiest carriage in all the world for the prettiest baby. You'll be surprised, too, at the reasonable cost.

It was Marshall B. Lloyd who invented the method and loom which produce Baby Carriages and Wicker Furniture thirty times faster and finer than the old hand woven products. These inventions cut labor costs, enabling Mr. Lloyd to weave the finest wickers, use the best materials, employ the most skilled workmen, add the latest refinements and still sell his wicker products at remarkable prices. That's the power of invention.

Ten thousand dealers carry Lloyd Loom Woven Products. If yours does not, write to us and we'll send you the name of the nearest one who does.

PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

BY CLOTILDE

Questions on problems confronting the home sewer will be answered in this column or by mail if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago.

DAINTY NECKWEAR.

I AM sure that never has there been shown a more fascinating variety of collars, cuffs, vestees, jabots, etc., than now. And the best part of it is that if one does not feel as though one could have the pleasure of buying as many as one is sure to want, many of them are perfectly possible to make at home.

Small checks in fine ginghams are used for some lovely sets—the collars usually cut with a straight neck line and set into a narrow band cut on the straight of the goods. So you see how easy that part is. As to the length of the collar, that is a matter of choice, although most of these collars are rather long—about 25 inches—and 5 inches wide when finished. The picture will show you the idea.

In the middle of the back they are folded over so that they measure three inches deep and the fold continues in a straight line down to the ends, where the crease just allows the band to be turned under. This shapes the collars to the neck perfectly.

The finish is also a matter of choice—some of these checked collars have a narrow ruffle (¾ inch) around the edge, and in the corners you can embroider a tiny rose with a couple of leaves. Or you can finish with a 1¼ inch hem, being sure to make mitred corners. Single featherstitching at the head of the hem will look well.

The vestee is made about 10 by 12 inches and elaborated in any way you may fancy. If you want cuffs, finish them to match the collar; 4 by 8 inches are the usual measurements.

Organdie in every color is used for these sets—rose, green, yellow, old blue, and so on, usually embroidered in some contrasting colors. The hems can be finished with the couching stitch, for instance, on a rose collar, using blue or green, and on white, blue and black.

Checked dimity or batiste makes lovely sets and these are embroidered in the corners and some have narrow lace whipped on all around. Some have an embroidered scallop, not at the edge; but after the hem has been laid the scallops are stamped on so that the lower edge of the scallop comes a little above the fold of the hem and the point where the scallops meet comes to the edge of a one and one-half inch hem.

To wear with sports sweaters there are net waists finished with an elastic at the waist line, the fronts covered with rows of lace insertion and a matching edging that is slightly fulled on. The entire front can be covered with these horizontally set on rows; or you can set wider lace on so it falls in soft cascade effects; or medallions of lace can be set in amidst the rows of insertion and edging.

There is really no end to the varieties one sees. High or low neck will be a matter of choice—some women like a high net or lace collar with a lacy front to wear with a suit. Of course, these net foundations are sleeveless, being made that way to firmly hold the front in place.

There are little net foundations made with sleeves, so that a narrow lacy edge will show below the dress sleeve, being trimmed to match the front.

MRS. J. H. C.: I am mailing you the number of the pattern you inquired about.

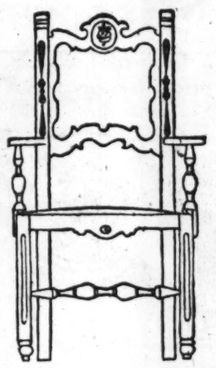
Berkey & Gay Furniture



The Arm Chair—Its charm is enhanced by its unique color arrangement, which must be seen to realize its appropriateness.

This Charming Breakfast Room Suite Specially Priced for May

As a specific demonstration of Berkey & Gay quality and value, we are duplicating our April sales plan during May, and offer through established representatives this quaint and delightful Breakfast Room Suite. The price—special for May selling only—presents a remarkable value.
—Berkey & Gay Furniture Company

For the Small House, Apartment, Summer Home or Porch Dining Room

In its cheerful color and gracious refinement, this Breakfast Room Suite fairly radiates hospitality. It is an exclusive Berkey & Gay design—novel in its conception, yet marked by the artistic symmetry and restraint ever present in all Berkey & Gay productions.

The Suite is especially planned for use where space is limited. For this reason it is extremely appropriate for the apartment or small dining room. It is also well adapted for the summer cottage, the mountain cabin or the porch dining room.

The woods used are Birch and Curly Figured Birch, finished in shellac and wax rubbed to a dull gloss. Borders in a low tone of blue and painted decorations give an air of pleasant gayety and good cheer. Chair seats are upholstered in brightly colored cretonne.

Dining Table—Top, 45x36 in., Curly Birch with decorated panels. Seats four. With ends raised accommodates six people.
Sideboard—Shaped and molded Curly Birch top, 54x22 in. Deep drawer with painted and decorated panel. Unusual and extremely pleasing pattern.
Serving Table—Similar to Sideboard, and may be used as a small sideboard. Shaped and molded shelf below.
Serving China Cabinet—62 in. high; 36 in. wide. A most beautiful piece. Cabinet has two glass doors, with shaped and decorated fretwork. Hinged shelf extra convenient for serving.
Chairs—Unique in character. One arm-chair and five straight chairs. Open shaped Curly Birch backs—small decorated panels. Seats upholstered in bright cretonne.

At the special price at which this Suite is offered it is a value as unusual as it is attractive.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

PROF. GEORGE PIERCE BAKER of Harvard's dramatic laboratories makes what would seem to a cynic to be a pathetic discovery. He finds that the youthful aspirants who sit at his feet and ask him to tell them how to write plays are all dreamy crusaders, imbued with a holy passion to rescue from the impious infidel the vague sepulchre wherein Justice is supposed to lie interred.

"They come to me," says Prof. Baker, "from every section of the land, burning to give dramatic expression to their revolt against things that in their own community have seemed to them unsound and unjust." "Injustice" is the favorite adversary of these eager playwrights, and they level their crude, though apprentice, lances against such evils as underpaid teaching, crooked politics, uncontrolled obstetrics, the city halls, congress, greedy landlords, fish eyed corporations; and, from the suggested limits of their obligations, everything else that is cruel and unkind, from strap-hanging to the high price of pastry.

The naïve cynic looks upon these ardent yearnings of Prof. Baker's students with the chill but sympathetic scrutiny of disillusion. What, he inquires, has the drama ever done to quicken the Creator's slow, millennial impulse? Has man's inhumanity to man ever been impeded by acting in a theater and upon a stage? Has the theater ever milked the sacred cow of human kindness, that its patrons might be strengthened by its nourishing milk?

Did Mr. Pinero's social plays ever save a lady from accumulating an embarrassing past? Have any of the sermon dramas prevented two or more men from loving one or more women or two or more women from being loved of three or more men? Has Ibsen's "The Master Builder" at any time deterred an architect from being amorous, or has "Othello" interfered with the processes of jealousy or the goings-on in the Second ward? Coffee hath murdered more sleep than Macbeth hath; and the performances of "Pollyanna" and its ilk have put the cloud into many a silver lining. Aristophanes' venomous inveighings against Cleon made that demagogue even more sneeringly triumphant; and one surmises that "Damaged Goods" was not much of a warning against carnal imprudence as "Just Suppose" was against falling in love with the Prince of Wales, or "Dulcy" a preventive against the utterance of the classic platitudes. When, at the other great literary crisis, Noah invited things into the ark, two by two, the actor and the actress were not urged, because of their seeming unimportance to posterity; as were not the playwrights, male and female, nor the theater critics. Wit of the drama, it seems, were mere stowaways.

Prof. Baker, an honest and a competent preceptor, has a melancholy job. His pupils wish to sing the serious song of the shirt to a public which wishes to hear the frivolous song of the undershirt. What should he do, this most influential and significant pedagog in the American drama? As Dionysius went to hell to find a good play, so do we go to Harvard's "English 47." Should the professor teach his children, as he has done heretofore reluctantly, to compose Broadway shows like "Common Clay" and "Romance" which enrich their authors while mentally impoverishing their entertained audiences? Or should he instruct them to beat the air and whisper in the deaf mutes of propaganda? Prof. Baker would be the theater's greatest benefactor if he could teach bad audiences to like good plays. The task seems simple. The bad audiences are at hand, as are, presumably, the good dramas. Let him take the thrilled patrons of "Shavings" or "East Is West" and, leading them to the refreshing trough of the worthy playhouse, cause them to drink. One wonders what one would answer if he were in Prof. Baker's place and a pupil should ask him whether it were better to write a rich success or a penurious masterpiece.

The Drama league has the right idea, as voiced in its last week's convention by Prof. W. H. Bridges of Grinnell, Ia. If you want good drama, write it yourself, and if you want it well acted, act it yourself. One infers, from the press reporters, that Mr. Stahl's large organization regards the professional theater as addicted to tinsel and the donkey's bray, and as a factor in American civilization of no more importance than chewing gum or vaudeville. It seems to join others in the suspicion that the American theater (outside a small, special audience) is the double jointed peanut of the arts. It means nothing, and what is more, it means to mean nothing. We love our drama, however, as we love gum drops and the comic supplements. And when Prof. Baker's cold gospellers preach us something better we shall smile and smile and remain the happy ninnies that God intends us to be when he sends us to the theater.

Prof. Baker predicts that American theatrical managers will soon conquer their aversion to thoughtful plays on the war or its aftermath. The conquest, he says, will come by way of the box office, after some one has written a good war play and it develops into a money-maker. Then there will be an inundation.

AT a dinner given in honor of Mr. Belasco recently William A. Brady, heaving his perpetual sigh, announced a weary indifference to the playhouse and everything connected with it. Unlike Mr. Belasco, who loves the drama, Mr. Brady said he was tired of the theater, from overture to ticket rack, having found nothing much in it during his long career save the hyssop and wormwood of money and a useless fame. Those who heard of Mr. Brady's ennui and were discomforted by it are cheered therefore by the news this week that he is about to produce two new plays, one for his daughter, Miss Alice Brady, and one for her husband, James Crane, son of Dr. Frank. Miss Brady's comedy is by James Colton and Daisy Andrews and is called "Drifting." That intended for Mr. Crane is entitled "Personality" and its authors are Jasper Ewing Brady and Philip Bartholomae. Other authorities say, however, that Ring Lardner and Gene Beck

Miss Marinoff is a Russian actress who has appeared in many rôles in important American productions. She is the wife of Carl Van Vechten, the critic and essayist, whose works include "Music and Bad Manners," "Interpreters and Interpretations," "The Merry-Go-Round," and "In the Garret."

"The Moon of the Caribbees"—a Study in Unending Things—Melodies and Seas

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, April 30.—[Special.]—Do not think that you have got everything there is in Eugene O'Neil's "The Moon of the Caribbees," if you have read it. I thought, too, until I saw it this week, staged by the Provincetown players in a little theater barn near Washington square, that it reads like something not to be acted. It acts like something not to be read.

By now O'Neil has gone so far in mastery of stage writing that some of it is mystery. "The Moon of the Caribbees," undramatic as you read it beneath a bed light, is electric with drama when you see it behind footlights. The secret O'Neil knows about how to make words act is his own. I can compare the startling metamorphosis of the written words of "The Moon of the Caribbees" when they are acted to nothing so like as the metamorphosis of black notes when they are played by Kreisler.

O'Neil owes something to the music in him. I know nothing about the man. I would conjecture, however, that he knows some music. Even a harmonica would be an indication.

In "The Emperor Jones" he lets a drum do most of the talking. And a great many of the fear laden utterances of Actor Gilpin which help most to create the feeling of mortal terror which sweeps over the footlights and invades your nervous system are mere musical sounds. They must be "oha" and "ah's" in the scripture.

There is real music in "The Moon of the Caribbees." Off stage, which is a stretch of deep blue West Indian water, a croon inherited from a remote African past rises from black throats throughout the actions. You did not hear that while you were reading the play. And this croon is essentially the whole of the play. Reading it, you might mistake the rambling confidences of Smitty, "the duke," made to the old weary bo'sun on the deck of the English tramp Glencairn in West Indian anchorage, for the plot. He tells with alcoholic incoherence of some broken-hearted home girl over whom he is breaking his heart. But his story is the endless chantey of the blacks, and never ended. The whole play is a study in unending things, like melodies, sorrows, and waves. There has never been a stronger tale of the ceaseless sea.

The music of voices and waves is a weight dragging at human lives. The people of the play shake off the incubus by violent effort once. For sheer violence of effort there has never been another stage scene which surpasses one in this play, where sensuous black girls, rum-steeped sailors, and two Scandinavians who draw knives mixed their carousing, brawling, and yelling into a din which, for a moment, drowns out the undying murmur of the croon and the waves. But energy flags, blood cools, silence grows, and at the end there is nothing left but a bare deck, blue midnight, and a persisting echo of the croon.

In this play and in "The Emperor Jones" O'Neil has done more than dramatize the things men do. He has dramatized two things which make men do things they do—fear and the sea.

The Provincetown playhouse is the Little theater of New York. Like its Chicago brother, it started in piffle. It is emerging from that now. It had no chance at all until it became a playwrights' instead of an amateur actors' theater. Even then it had no chance until the playwrights whose theater it became developed into Eugene O'Neil of today and one or two others who are following where he leads.

Now the uptown managers cast eager, though wary, eyes on their wares. In the present bill, which includes, besides the O'Neil play, an excellent one acter named "Trifles," by Susan Glaspell, they will find nothing for the commercial stage. "Trifles" and "The Moon of the Caribbees" are playwrights' experiments. Only the results of them will be plays.

"Trifles" is a tale of a New England farmhouse in which a cruel man has been murdered by his wife. Two alert detectives and two drab, slow-speaking

Sheridan Plaza

Service

THE Sheridan Plaza—easily the most perfectly appointed residential hotel in Chicago—was conceived and carried to completion with one thought in mind—SERVICE.

Service in the completeness of the architectural plans—Service in the thought given the selection of every detail of the furnishings—Service in the extreme care with which the clientele was chosen—and, finally, Service in the building of a complete organization.

Under the personal management of Mr. George F. Adams, former manager of the Greenbriar and Chamberlin—ably assisted by Mr. William B. Smith, former manager Hotel Radisson, Glenn Morris Inn and the Majestic Hotel, Hot Springs—one of the most complete service organizations has been built. Each member is specially qualified for his or her position and courtesy is the inflexible rule.

Surely here may be found a home for those who appreciate the refinements and niceties of life.

SHERIDAN ROAD AT WILSON

SUNNYSIDE 6701

Cuisine

OF extreme interest to discriminating people who regard dining as a fine art is this announcement of the opening of the Sheridan Plaza Restaurant, destined to become famous under the direction of the following well-known artists:

M. D. BARTA, Steward—Grand Hotel, Vienna; Baur au Lac, Zurich; Palace Hotel, San Francisco.

JOSEPH DORE, Chef de Cuisine—Hotel Sacher, Vienna; Circe d'Artiste, Paris; Criterion Restaurant, London.

JOANESCU TASSELLO, Chef Patissier—Maison Dore, Paris; Maison Chiboris, Paris; McAlpin Hotel, New York.

PETER HAUSEN, Maitre d'Hotel—Hotel Balmoral, Paris; Royal Hotel, London; Hotel Astor, New York.

Yet prices will be moderate in the extreme. In addition to a la carte service a luncheon at seventy-five cents and a table d'hote dinner at a dollar and a half or two dollars are especially recommended. And here—as elsewhere in the hotel—Service is the watchword.

The first Supper Dance—an event of social importance—will take place Saturday, May seven, at nine o'clock. A cover charge of one dollar a person is asked. At ten o'clock a special supper will be served at a dollar and a half the plate, in addition to the usual a la carte service.

"The Moon of the Caribbees"

neighbor women come, the men to find evidence against the murderess in jail, the women to set her house aright and gather together some small things with which she wishes to while way her prison hours. The men find no evidence. The women find a small box which contains the dead body of a canary whose neck has been wrung. The detectives report that the man was strangled to death. The women conceal the body of the canary. That is all.

With few and precious words, with deft silences, Susan Glaspell builds an agony of suspense out of these small materials. The canary is a great cause before she ends her play. And Judas Iscariot is the only other character I have hated so well as I came to hate the dead man who killed Miss Glaspell's canary. This is another potentially fruitful experiment in playwriting.

The real theaters of Broadway made feeble contributions to our subject matter this week. A farce opened. Its name is "Just married." It is a good farce. It opened like a bottle of champagne. Its authors one day happened to think of the great number of beds on a trans-Atlantic liner. Immediately they sat down to a typewriter. Raise the parsimonious one bed of "Up in Mabel's Room" the limit, and you have "Just Married" with its unstinted mattresses. The farce completes the fame of its principal farceur. He is Lynn Overman, who is now my idea of perfect, clever nonsense with a handsome face.

Johnny Dooley appeared in a minor rôle of a new musical comedy named "June Love," and didn't fall once. The thing founders for want of even so much plot as is usually given to spring musical comedies, forgetting that, with Johnny Dooley to act it, they needed nothing more intricate than the plot Newton wrote for the apple. The tunes by Rudolph Friml are dusty. "June Love" was born tired. Everything in it falls but Johnny Dooley.

SO SAYS EVE LYNN

Eve Lynn, the leading lady in "Pitter Patter," which has just closed at the Playhouse, and Mr. Hall, who played the part of the "Villain," visited Dreamland Saturday evening and the following letter was received by Mr. P. T. Harmon:

Mr. P. T. Harmon,
1701 W. Van Buren Street,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Harmon:

Have just arrived in Cleveland, and Mr. Hall wishes to join me in thanking you for the pleasant time we had in our short stay at your place Saturday evening.

I must say Dreamland has exceeded my greatest expectations! Your decorations are beautiful, and indeed very original. It is really too bad the country has not more elaborate amusement centers such as yours.

Please compliment Mr. Elgar for me, and tell him Mr. Hall and I were really fascinated with his band. He has gathered into one organization the most wonderful lot of artists we have ever heard! I can now understand why the big musical publishers of New York are so strong in their praise regarding Elgar's Band.

We hope to see you again in the near future, and have a full night's pleasure in your beautiful ballroom and enjoy the work of your wonderful artists.

Yours very sincerely,
EVE LYNN.

Pitter Pitter, Lil Heart! Here's Our Mr. Tearle Again

"BUCKING THE TIGER."

Produced by Selznick. Directed by Henry Lehrr.

THE CAST.

Ritchie MacDonald.....Conway Tearle
Daily Dwyer.....Winifred Westover
Jim Graham.....Gladden James
Ella.....Helen Montrose
Fitch.....Harry Lee
Silver.....Templar Saxe
The Count.....George A. Wright

BY MAE TINEE.

WELL, girls, I reckon we won't have any trouble at all, at all, getting together as regards to Conway Tearle in his latest release "Bucking the Tiger." All together now:

"He is simpully GRAND!" (After which we settle down to discuss the picture.)

The scenes are laid in Alaska where Mr. Tearle, as Ritchie MacDonald (pitter, patter, little heart!) is one of a bunch of down and outers—all most unwelcome guests at the rude hotel where the owner would like less of their time and more of their money.

The bunch consists of an Englishman, excellently and humorously depicted by Templar Saxe; a Frenchman, finely portrayed by George Wright; a former cattleman, well acted by Harry Lee, and one Graham, a rotter, almost too well done by Gladden James. Clever actor, that boy—the best blonde villain in the films, I do believe!

AND Ritchie MacDonald! (Sigh!) Graham has induced a lovely girl to come to Alaska to marry him. Upon her arrival she finds him totally different from the man she had always thought him, and does not care to become his wife. She has not money enough to return home, and is besides too proud to admit her predicament. He is wretchedly unhappy when Macdonald constitutes himself her protector. (O, how willingly would we be unhappy if—eh, girls?)

Well—everybody needs money desperately, Mr. MacDonald—of course it would be he—conceives an idea, suggested by the call of an insurance agent. Mustn't tell you about that. Would spoil the picture for you.

Anyhow it's an idea that brings about unusual situations, considerable action, and a chance for MacDonald to look and act and protect as every woman in the optience wants him to. (He should patent his peculiar brand of lovemaking.)

The story is unusual and the cast is a fine one. Little Miss Westover, the doll baby type, makes a fine foil for the gentle cavemanics of Mr. Tearle.

The production is well directed and staged, and there are some good snow scenes—manufactured ones, I imagine, but mighty well done at that.

MISS HAZEL DAWN IN "GERTIES GARTER
AT THE WOOD'S THEATRE PHOTO BY CHARLOTTE FAIRCHILD

Miss Dawn will represent the Mid-Nation post of the American Legion in the popularity contest to be held May 3 and 4 at the carnival of the Legionnaires' club in the Coliseum. Each of the twenty Loop posts interested in the carnival will have a similar representative. Miss Dawn is a member of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Legion, her brother having served in the air force.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

MABELLE: Yes, Betty Blythe is married. Paul Scardon is her husband. No matter how well you can act, to photograph well is an essential. Youth is not "absolutely necessary" if a woman is willing to play rôles that do not require bloom and ringlets.

FLYAWAY: Thomas Meighan is a star now. His latest picture is "The City of Silent Men." Y'wekkum.

BROOK AND STREAM: You sound like an outing magazine or something of the kind. Eugene O'Brien is with Selznick. Ask me, ask me! No, you didn't see me there. Helen Jerome Eddy is the actress you mention who played with George Beban. I suttinly did!

C. S. K.: Marshall Neilan is divorced. His wife was Gertrude Bambrick. Lila Lee? In vaudeville. She also worked in the Gus Edwards revues. Is that where you saw her? For a list of the producing companies, you will have to send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Glad to oblige you.

SEE SAW: Do tell. Also do g'wan!

MRS. B.: Marguerite Clark will soon be seen in "Scrambled Wives." Yes, she did work for the various Liberty loans. Irene Castle is Mrs. Robert Treman. Vurr' happy, they tell me.

DUBIOUS: Mr. Eddie Polo was once with a circus. Don't know, I'm sure. Gladys Walton is with Universal. If you don't like what we write, why read it? Seems to me you're wasting a lot of good time making yourself miserable. It's more than I would do. O, go on and like me!

MADELINE G.: Address Nazimova, care of Metro, Hollywood. Charley Chaplin is at Hollywood. It was reported that Louise Glaum was married.

M. M. B. D.: Why, thank you! We've mailed "the inclosed." Glad to POLICY: Insurance or honesty? How should I know what size curling iron the gentleman uses. Maybe the wave is as natural as the ocean's. Maybe you had a lot of time on your hands, eh?

FRED P.: Thanks, ever so much.

WILLYS-KNIGHT

SLEEVE VALVE MOTOR IMPROVES WITH USE

Violence Versus Velvet!

Every mile traveled by a hammering poppet-valve motor marks the ebbing tide of efficiency.

Every mile traveled by a sliding Sleeve-Valve Willys-Knight Motor marks the rising tide of power.

One is the efficiency of violence, the other is the velvet of efficiency; one is depleted by distance, the other grows cumulatively finer and fleeter the farther it runs, uses less fuel, conserves tires, needs only negligible adjustment at long intervals, generates more energy than it exhausts, and is at the peak of its efficiency at 50,000 miles.

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

Hear Ye! Hear Ye! Mary Garden Is Coming to Town

By Ruth Miller.

MUSIC reporting is being threatened with resurrection this week. From its burial in the clammy routine of concert and near concert reviewing of the last three months it will be raised up and given life in the form of news assignments. In a word, Mary Garden is coming to town.

Miss Garden, her conquering troupe of operatic superlatives, and its $3,000,000 worth of property, have just completed a highly successful tour. And of all that loved them most San Francisco proved its devotion with gifts of gold, much and most important, gold in excess of $200,000, and enthusiasm that knew not appeasement.

The just completed year of the Chicago company seemed doomed to tribulation as the sparks fly upward. But under the sane and beneficent piloting of Miss Garden it has been brought safely into port with a deflated deficit and the promise of oiled waters next season.

The oil will be spread by the Chicago Association of Commerce, which has decided that any organization so spectacular, with such wide reaching influence as our opera company is the one best purveyor of civic propaganda, and as such should receive substantial support.

This body of Chicago's shrewdest business men has adopted the following resolutions:

"The Chicago Association of Commerce regards grand opera as a business and civic asset. In addition to its educational benefits and the credit it reflects upon Chicago by world-wide publicity as a center of culture, it is one of the outstanding metropolitan attractions that bring people to Chicago.

"We commend the program of the Chicago Opera association to further popularize grand opera by a plan of underwriting which will make the sponsorship of grand opera in Chicago general rather than exclusive.

"The Chicago Association of Commerce gives its whole hearted support to the Grand Opera association and its underwriting program and regards the enterprise as worthy of substantial support."

It is no idle bromide that the Chicago Opera company constitutes the biggest advertising asset in our ardent "Boost Chicago" campaign. For it travels east and it travels west and drags the name of our sooty village after it to its greater fame wherever it goes.

Chicago's operatic disciples of Orpheus in their recent Manhattan visitation received columns of publicity. Therein might be found the acidulous adverse comment, but every bit of critical mud slung at our lyric linen was vanquished by the soapflakes of some other commentator's eulogistic compliment.

No matter where our opera goes it starts something. It will never suffer from a newspaper campaign of silence. Give any city or project publicity or give it death, and as long as the lyric ways of the opera company of our town receive such nation-wide attention, Chicago is in little danger of becoming moribund.

We are indebted for this operatic "business and civic asset" of ours to a few public spirited citizens and Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick. Theirs was a fine belief in our esthetic appetite and a finer generosity in gratifying it.

The present organization which their faith and gifts built up has one more year to run. At the end of that year, these super-guarantors have agreed to turn the whole operatic property over to the Association of Commerce absolutely free of debt, with equipments complete in every department and a world of good will. Whereupon the Association of Commerce will undertake a plan to organize a corporation not for profit and financed by a large number of people, 500 if possible, who will subscribe an annual sum of $1,000 to meet any probable deficit.

Miss Garden, who is no idle dreamer, believes that expenses can be cut down so that the staggering deficits of the past can be done away with without lowering the artistic standard whatsoever. Mr. Spangler shares her optimism.

There have been conjectures and rumors aplenty concerning the course of next season's operatic events. When Miss Garden comes to town tomorrow she will probably lay low all this chatty persiflage by announcing a few facts. Already she has issued one official statement to the effect that Tito Schipa has signed with the Chicago Opera company for next season, and option exists for two succeeding seasons. Schipa will be our leading Italian tenor.

In one of Miss Garden's midseason interviews she delivered the ultimatum that we would not have opera in English until we had English opera. There would be no translations. That we would take our Wagner, when the time came, in its original umlauts and gutterals.

One of the questions that Miss Garden probably will be called upon to answer during her looming interviews of the current week will be the one concerning the restoration of German opera, text and musicfi to the repertoire next season. For the Metropolitan has made formal announcement that it is fully prepared for the restoration and revival of German opera next season; that the "Ring" will be returned to its exalted place in the New York company's curriculum, and that many of the new artists signed during the last season were chosen for their special fitness for Wagnerian röles.

The English translations, it is reported, will be dropped and "Parsifal," "Tristan und Isolde," "Die Walküre," and "Siegfried" will be given again in the original German text. There are many new names in the operatic directory of the Metropolitan for next season including those of Galli-Curci and Titta Ruffo. Certain of the newly acquired artists who got no opportunity during the season now closing at Atlanta, have already been rehearsing the Wagner master works, according to information from New York.

It is hardly likely that Miss Garden's forces will be far behind those of Manhattan in their endeavors with Wagner's vast symphonic poems with mimetic obbligato.

Incidentally Miss Garden will be with us this week as an artist as well as the efficient, practical head of a huge musical organization. On Friday night she is listed as soloist at the concert of the Association of Commerce Glee club in the auditorium. Preceding her by one day comes Lucien Muratore, worshiped of all operatic tenors. Then following these two, the artistic backbone and sinew of our company, there is Galli-Curci on next Sunday evening at the Auditorium.

Yes, all told, music reporting will rise from the dead this week. Then after an exhilarating few days will sink back again to undisturbed slumber until the Ravinia season descends upon us.

Miss Garden will arrive in Chicago tomorrow from Denver, the last city in which the Chicago Opera company appeared during its transcontinental tour. On Wednesday she will speak at the Association of Commerce luncheon in the Hotel La Salle, when she will outline the plans for the future of grand opera in Chicago, and Friday evening she will be the soloist at the concert of the glee club of the Association of Commerce in the Auditorium.

A book intended, according to its neat brown cover, as "A Guide to the Uninitiated," is Harriet Seymour's "What Music Can Do for You." Its author sounds its clarion note in the opening paragraph of its first chapter, titled "Awakening to Life Through Music," with the shrewd comment that "by establishing harmony in the individual consciousness, harmony of mass consciousness must follow, for in the fundamental things of life individuals differ very little. The desire for more joy, more love, more health, more happiness, is universal, and makes us all akin. This life of completeness is not merely a Utopian dream; it is a practical result of co-operating with a law, the Harmonic Law."

Miss Seymour dips into psychoanalysis a bit and pleads that music may be brought to the "masses." She writes in an anecdotal and interesting strain of melody, rhythm, and harmony and what it may do for your regeneration or your happiness.

She advises that children play musical games, swing and walk rhythms, sing songs, and sing about things as they would talk about them. She advocates that chidren be washed and brushed and dressed to music. She is in favor of musical conversation.

In a discursive and entertaining fashion she points out the necessity of the mental factor in music.

She is an ardent champion of the piano player and the talking machine. But she stipulates that extreme care should be taken in selecting the records. All music of the overstimulating type of ragtime wears out the nervous system instead of quieting and renewing its strength, and should be avoided, Miss Seymour declares.

After touching on the relation of philosophy and one's health to music she closes in what, you will agree, is a concise and coherent fashion with: "All the external equipment musically possible will not bring you in touch with the inner harmonic world which is music. Music is religion in the sense of its being a form of consciousness common to all who have let go of the outside and listened.

"To be master of environment is to be master of life. Music gives the necessary development for this attainment. We can only register what we actually let in. We can change conditions by symbolically dipping every inharmony into the, harmonic world within ourselves and thus transmuting it into harmony.

"A young girl did this once by clinging persistently to a little tune while chaos reigned about her. We can always dwell mentally in a world of our own, and music is a means given us by which we may turn failure into victory and chaos into calm. From within out this is progress, this is education, this is the road to health and happiness."

It would seem that Miss Seymour takes music a little hard.

The Music Calendar

Today, at 3:30—Marie Hoover Ellis, Chicago pianist, will be heard in recital at Kimball hall under the direction of F. Wight Neumann. The program includes the "Chaconne," by Bach-Busoni; a Chopin group, Etude, by Arensky, "May Night" by Palmgren, and Tarantella by Leschetizky.

Today at 3—Jane Lorolewicz Wayda, soprano, in Orchestra hall.

Today at 3:30—The Northland trio—Rose Pearson Burgeson, soprano; Mary Peterson, mezzo, and Signe Mortenson, contralto, in recital at Kimball hall.

Monday at 8:15—Final contest by students of the Chicago Musical college at Orchestra hall. The judges will be Frederick Stock, Richard G. Hageman, Franz Kneisel, and Rudolph Ganz.

A REVIEW IN PICTURES

wrote it. Mr. Brady has still another potential drama, which Miss Jessie Bonstelle will hatch for him this summer with her Detroit stock company. "Silver Weddings" is its name and it is from the French of Paul Geraldy.

Mr. Belasco's success with Guitry's "Deburau" in New York impels him to import another play from the same source, "The Grand Duke." The leading character of this comedy is a member of the former imperial family of Russia, demoted from prince to pedagogue; and it is while he is teaching the young lovers foreign languages that he sweetens their embittered romance. The Guitrys and Mlle. Yvonne Printemps (Mme. Sacha Guitry) appear in the play in Paris.

A new musical comedy libretto by P. G. Wodehouse will be set to music by Franz Lehar, author of "The Merry Widow" and, presumably, one of the Viennese who are not starving. . . . Leo Carillo, plucked from the varieties by Edgar Selwyn, will be the star of Mr. Selwyn's "The Love Chef" in June. Doris Kenyon of the movies will be with him. . . . A. H. Wood's contemplates rechristening "Gertie's Garter" before it goes to New York. The title, bestowed upon the play by a Chicago dramatic critic, is suspected by Mr. Woods to be too indelicate to appeal to nice people, and it will probably be changed back to "Up in the Hay Mow."

Miss Elsie Janis, who is in Paris preparing to appear in a musical revue at the Theatre Apollo, plans a tour of America in the fall at the head of her own vaudeville company. . . . Newcomers in the cast of "Irene" besides Miss Dale Winter, include Ray Crane, Carl Haydn, and Miss Gladys Nagel, who succeed Henry Coote, Jere Delaney, and Miss Erica Mackay. . . . A. A. Milne's "Mr. Pim Passes By," produced in New York by the Theater Guild, will be sent on tour next season under the direction of Mr. Erlanger. . . . Alexander Carr is touring the London halls in "An April Shower," in which he appeared for several seasons in American vaudeville theaters.

"Irene's" engagement will end this week at the Studebaker and will be succeeded by Bert Williams in a musical revue, "Broadway Brevities."

Winchell Smith, author of "Turn to the Right" and other pleasing aberrations, is about to make a movie out of "Romeo and Juliet" for the uses of that somewhat husky duo, Miss Grace La Rue and Hale Hamilton. John Golden, who is the La Rue-Hamilton impresario in "Dear Me," has organized the Golden-Schenck Film corporation to finance and direct the enterprise.

The companies which have been playing "The Tavern" in New York and Chicago, both closed operations last night. Mr. Cohan announces a revival in New York before long, with himself in the röle of the nutty Vagabond. Mr. Rosenthal, manager of Mr. Cohan's "The O'Brien Girl," telegraphs frantically from Atlantic City that that new musical comedy is superb and unparalleled, and that it can truthfully be called "'Mary's' Big Sister," "Mary" being the name of the play at the Colonial. In "The O'Brien Girl" Miss Fritzi Scheff is again resurrected, and by her side are to be found Miss Georgia Caine, Miss Ada Mae Weeks, James Marlowe, and Andrew Toombes.

Evanston, Ill.—My dear Mr. Hammond: In sharing Mr. Woods' disappointment at his self-confessed failure to traverse the realm of "true art" one is tempted to berate not the public for wanting what Mr. Woods says it wants, nor yet the souls of the playwrights who have dared to write classics which Mr. Woods say he cannot produce with financial success, but rather an era, a theatrical era, so steeped in pseudo-classicism that it cannot distinguish the real from the false, the good from the mediocre, the classic from the pseudo-classic.

We have many pseudo-classic plays, more than a generous supply of theplans who prefer to be press agented as "geniuses" rather than as good actors, and a goodly share of producers who find prosperity in exploiting the fruits of mediocrity. Under such circumstances it is no wonder that a really worthy play is not recognized when it is written, or that, being written, it is not properly interpreted, or that, being properly interpreted, it is poorly produced.

I do not think, however, that Mr. Woods need be overduly depressed with the results of his experiments in "true art." The list of plays he mentions does not by any means represent tho "best" in the drama. One's imagination fails to picture the genial if obese figure of Abe Potash parading decorously in the purple mantle of true classicism, and it cracks in attempting to bring up the image of a gilt edged edition of "Too Many Husbands" molding on a five foot shelf.

If the plays of Synge, Barrie, and Shakespeare fail to make the box office coffers ring with the clash of shining shekels it is not because they were written by Synge, Barrie, and Shakespeare, but in spite of the fact that they were born of them.

The test of a genuine classic is its healthy survival of a poor presentation, faulty acting, and even worse diction. Selah. Sincerely yours,

GEOFFREY TRAVERN.

The week's new plays and players:

At Powers': "Call the Doctor," from the Belasco ateliers, by Miss Jean Archibald, and treating the subject of the dull, domestic wife who, to fan her husband's waning devotion, takes to short skirts, cigarets, cocktails, slang, and flirtation. In the cast are Miss Ruth Shepley, Miss Fania Marinoff, Miss Charlotte Walker, Mrs. Tom Wise, Miss Barbara Milton, Philip Merivale, William Morris, John Amory, and Rea Martin. Tomorrow night.

Cohan's Grand: "The Meanest Man in the World," a comedy by Augustin MacHugh, telling about a young lawyer and a pretty woman in commercial troubles. Playing it tomorrow night will be Leo Donnelley, Leonard Doyle, Frank M. Thomas, Miss Marion Coakley, Miss Ruth Donnelley, Ralph Sipperley, Miss Eda Von Buelow, John T. Doyle, Miss Leona Hogarth, Howard Boulden, Peter Raymond, and Hugh Cameron. Mr. Thomas has the röle played for a time in New York by Mr. Cohan. It is one of Mr. Cohan's productions.

The Playhouse: Ben Ami in Sven Lange's play, "Samson and Delilah," the title being an ancient one with a modern application. Ben Ami is a young Russian actor whose effect on audiences and critics in New York in "Samson and Delilah" was extraordinary. He will appear tomorrow night for the first time in Chicago in English.

TAKING IT ALL IN ONE LOAD

BY ONEY FRED SWEET

They'd Picked Out a New Place at Last, and We Moved 'Em Over.

The boss was never the same again with me.

SITTING beside Ed and the boss as the big truck went down Ogden avenue, I got to wondering what particular reason the family had for moving, what they would be like, and whether they would be going to a better or worse place than the one they were leaving. And I suppose the folks waiting for us were doing some wondering, too—whether we were coming or not, whether we'd be on time, whether we'd loaf on the job or not, and would we be apt to bust the cut glass wedding bowl or mar the phonograph that only had one more installment against it.

The boss seemed to be calm. He told me he had been moving folks around Chicago, spring and fall, for twenty-seven years, and that one of the main things was to have the dates scheduled far enough ahead so that he wouldn't be moving one family in on top of another. He didn't have anything against me yet, because he hadn't seen me in action. If folks had fully made up their minds to move he'd move 'em, rain or shine, and leave 'em alone until there was another rent raise or a quarrel with the neighbors or a dissatisfaction with the color of the paper in the living room or an unfixed leak in the hot water tank.

The Sun Shone Brightly.

It wasn't a bad day for moving. The sun was shining and we wouldn't be tracking mud in the house. It was just about time for the kids to be going to school, and some of them were transporting themselves on roller skates that crunched noisily along the cement walks. Between the walks and the curbs there were dandelions in full bloom, and birds were calling to each other in the freshly budded tree tops.

"The new man here ought to have been with us yesterday on that piano job," remarked Ed, referring to me. Ed was driving the truck. "We had to swing it out over the back porch of a third story flat on Lawndale."

"That was nothing," grunted Mr. Sellers, the boss.

"Maybe the place we're going to today ain't got a piano," I suggested, the wish being father to the thought.

"Chances are they have," informed Mr. Sellers. "Years back, only the wealthy folks had pianos, but nowadays most of them have 'em, it seems like. And phonographs."

"You said it—and phonographs," agreed Ed.

In a State of Chaos.

We turned the corner, passed halfway down the block, and began to slow up. Frank and Art jumped out from behind, and Art directed the driving of the truck so that it would back into proper place against the curb. "All right. Whoa! Little more." Then Ed pressed the button and the engine was silenced.

It was a yellowish two story house with a row of bridal wreath bushes along the front of the porch. The family about to give up occupancy was at the open doorway. The head of the house, or rather the man who was head of the household furniture in state of chaos, had stayed home from the office, and he had his hat off, and was in his shirt sleeves when we bounded up the steps in what the army used to call a "line of skirmishers." It wasn't five minutes before I was stuck with the front part of a bedstead in the hall stairs.

You know what I mean. Art had let it down to me over the bannister from the floor above. It was a narrow place, and the top of the bedstead stuck in the top of the door and the bottom of it caught on the edge of the stair steps. I was struggling with the thing and tilting it this way and that in trying to make it go through, not cussing except under my breath. It wouldn't come. Sometimes a thing will get stubborn that way.

Mr. Anston—that was the man's name—and his wife and his wife's mother seemed to have all their attention centered on my efforts. I felt it was coming—a suggestion from Mrs. Anston.

Escorting a Bedstead.

Keeping my grip on the bedstead, I paused to catch my breath. We've got a license to do that. We fellows can't work under a constant strain.

"So you decided to move this spring," I said friendly like, turning toward Mr. Anston.

"That's quite apparent," he answered crisply. He didn't seem to be in the mood for conversation. He was holding his arms out in a tense attitude, as though he was the one who had hold of the bedstead. "I guess we're not the only ones."

"Raise your rent?"

"Nope. The house was sold." He became more chatty. "Then we started to look everywhere for another place. Honestly, the number of places we saw and the things that were the matter with them and the prices they wanted. There was one place——"

"You'll have to take those casters off," interrupted his wife, nervously.

It wasn't a bad idea. I got the casters off and stuck them in my pocket. The piece of furniture came through then just as I knew it would, and the boss and Frank were enabled to come on down with the dresser they had been balancing. Were you ever around a person who didn't say anything right out, but who you knew didn't think much of you? The boss was never the same again with me after he had that wait with the dresser. And there was never anybody any more willing than I.

The Neighbors Look On.

Ed took the stuff when we got it to the truck and he covered over some of the pieces with padding. He had a certain way of packing the things back in the truck so, as he explained, we could "take everything in one load."

You should have seen the lawn and the walk as the neighbors from the windows viewed the scene. The kids of the neighborhood—the little kids that weren't old enough to go school—didn't spectate from behind curtains; they came up close. The Anston family's material and worldly possessions were enjoying all the privacy of a parade.

A gas range with its left legs sinking into the sod and its pipe slantingly connected with the whole out of doors; a hall tree with bare hooks; two wooden boxes filled with dahlia bulbs; an oil-cloth covered kitchen table, its original color concealed beneath a coat of enamel; a paper carton filled with glass jars for canning; a wash boiler containing cooking utensils; a box containing a teakettle, an ax, an oil can, and a half used can of varnish; an ironing board, the cloth marked in places where the iron had burnt; a gunnysack half full of the remnants of the winter's supply of coal; a child's rocking chair painted blue; a large rocker moving back and forth on the cement walk in the wind; medicine bottles partially filled with vari-colored fluids purchased for past sicknesses; bed springs resting against a maple tree; bric-a-brac acquired as wedding presents or as souvenirs from journeys, wedging its way into a box of apples; a garden rake and a lawn mower keeping company with a rolled rug; a jug of vinegar that called forth a "home brew" joke from Ed.

Moving Bromides.

As for the inside of the house at this stage, the telephone was on the floor, and you could see the unfaded rectangles on the walls where the pictures had hung. Mrs. Anston was in the kitchen finding more things to go and trying to find a way to protect and pack them. The linoleum had been taken up, and you could tell where pieces of it had been tacked down in the center of the floor, and the place was revealed where a decorator years back had spilled a splotch of paint. Mrs. Anston's sister had come over to help her, and from what I could catch of their conversation as I followed Mr. Sellers' orders, Mrs. Anston was inclined to give vent to such phrases as:

"I'll never move again as long as I live."

"If we had to replace that dining room set now it would cost just twice as much."

"You're torn up for a week before, and it takes a week to get straightened up again."

"You never realize——"

Worried About the Plants.

I didn't hear her finish her last remark because the thing I was lugging hit against the chandelier. I discovered, though, that it wasn't the chandelier that Mrs. Anston was worried most about. Mr. Sellers, my boss, told me that it was always some one thing that worry was centered upon—the piano or the davenport, or the "hope chest," or the ever present floor lamp. With Mrs. Anston it was her plants. She finally ended by carrying her geraniums to her new number herself.

Mrs. Anston's mother had an enlarged picture that she wanted me to carry carefully. It was of a group of five children—three girls and two boys—taken when the oldest was about 15. The youngest of the girls, she told me, represented Mrs. Anston when she was 6. The others were all scattered, the oldest boy doing well in Spokane.

"I don't know," she sighed, "but it don't seem to me that folks always used to be moving around like they do now. We used to have homes of our own and stay in 'em from one generation to another. The gas man just drove up to disconnect and the telephone man's been here, and the water man's coming."

"Think of way back," I added, "when all a man had was a tent to be folded up and carried under his arm."

She asked me if I thought there would be any moving days in heaven, and I told her I didn't think so, the scriptures having referred to it as being a place of peace.

Upstairs and downstairs, the house was beginning to relax from its moving pains and yawn for its new occupant with only such things as a last year's calendar, a crushed-in hat box, or a broken curtain rod remaining to give mute welcome.

We are Off.

Out in front, the truck itself was filled, and Mr. Sellers was directing us how to tie "the rest of the pieces" on to the end gate.

We were all loaded. Mr. Sellers told me to watch to the starboard to see if anything fell off, and Ed started the engine.

Mrs. Anston came down the steps with a bulging suitcase and her potted geraniums. "You never realize——," she was saying to her sister. (I heard her finish the phrase this time. It may have been a Moy bromide, but the uttering of it relieved her a little I think.)

"——you never realize what a lot of junk you've accumulated until you once start to move."

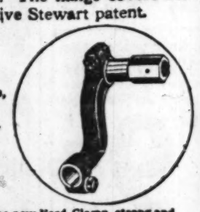
IT is impossible to follow road guides without a Speedometer, and a road guide is essential in making country trips.

Without a Speedometer it is only too easy to get on the wrong road, because of guessing distances wrong. It doesn't pay to guess when you can know how far you have gone to the tenth of a mile.

The trip dial can be reset to any mile at any time by turning the convenient reset knob. The season dial records your total mileage. The speed dial indicates your speed with the first turn of the wheels, and continues to operate accurately under all conditions.

The installation of a Stewart Speedometer on your Ford requires no perfect round hole. No special tools for cutting. Simply cut a piece out of the board. The flange covers the rough edges completely. An exclusive Stewart patent.

Sold by accessory dealers, garages or the Stewart-Warner Branch in this city.



The new Ford Clamp, strong and durable. Makes installation easier

The Speedometer harmonizes perfectly with the Ford switch-plate

Stewart-Warner Speedometer Cor'n, Chicago, U. S. A.

Cheapest Way To Go to work, to school, for fun or exercise is on a Ranger bicycle. Avoid strap hanging and foul air in dirty, crowded cars. Travel in the fresh air at one-tenth the cost on a swift, easy-running Ranger. Start when you want, go where you wish and stop when and where you please. A Ranger needs no garage and requires no fuel or feed. It is ever ready to serve you, day or night. No other form of transportation is as reliable or as cheap. All out-of-doors is yours on a Ranger.

MEAD Ranger BICYCLES

12 Months to Pay

If you live in Chicago or the nearby suburbs you can select your Ranger at the factory. You can ride it home today or have it delivered. And then you can pay for it in twelve small monthly payments if more convenient than cash. Your saved car fare will meet the payments. Many parents advance the first small deposit and energetic boys and girls easily earn or save the future payments. At the same time children acquire valuable habits of thrift and a sense of business responsibility on the easy payment contract. If you cannot come to the factory, use the coupon and when you have made selection we will ship your bicycle by prepaid express.

Come to Our Factory

See the beautiful display of 44 styles, colors and sizes of Rangers at our big Factory Showrooms, Canal and Washington streets. Here our Mail Order Department supplies the needs of a million riders in all parts of the country. We make the bicycles right here in Chicago where we have been established for thirty years. Choose right from the floor the Ranger that in style, price and terms best suits you, jump on it and ride home, fleet as the wind, to be the envy of your friends.

If you can't afford a Ranger, we have other models (Pathfinders and Crusaders)—splendid values at low prices—to select from.

30 Days' Free Trial

You run no risk when you buy a Ranger—the best known as well as the best bicycle ever built. Truly the aristocrat of cycledom, we guarantee it to absolutely please you in every way. Try it for a month and return it if not satisfied. Your offer will not cost you a penny. If you live outside of Chicago you can order by mail and we will deliver your bicycle, freight prepaid, same as for the same 30 Days' Free Trial agreement. For cash or on time payments as you may prefer.

Tires, lamps, horns, carriers, pedals, repairs and equipment of all kinds at Factory prices to over 50,000 customers in Chicago and suburbs as all their buying here.

Come to the Factory. If you can do so conveniently. If you can't, call, send, write or phone for our Ranger Book. Tell us the exact bicycle you want, with wholesale prices and terms.

Style and Value the Dominant Notes in These Wraps for Women and Misses

Fifth Floor.

Many features distinguish these wraps from other wraps we have had, but pre-eminent above all are style and value. Never before have we had a group of 500 women's and misses' wraps of such undoubted merit, of such excellent style, to sell at so low a figure. The reason is this: our buyer happened upon a maker whose regular trade channels were closed to him—unfavorable circumstances of one kind or another left him with these wraps unsold—and he gladly sold them to us at decided reductions for cash.

Wraps fashioned of velour, yalama, tricotine and poiret twill, all richly silk lined—straight-line and belted coats, dolmans, capes and cape coats, in all the latest styles.

It is an assortment that would make any woman's heart glad. Wraps in the season's most desired styles, and such values! Note well the trimmings—how splendidly done! Delicate traceries of silk stitching, beautiful embroidery in self or contrasting colors, some, too, with fine silk fringes—choice of black, navy, reindeer, Harding blue and tan; note the illustrations; the values range to $30—Monday at

For Spring Every Woman Wants a Fur Choker—This conomy Opportunity Makes It Possible

Fifth Floor.

Naturally every woman wants a fur choker this spring; aren't they the style? Besides, there are so many raw, blustery days when a fur choker would lend splendid protection to an otherwise exposed throat. Here is your opportunity to get one at a worth while reduction. A widely known furrier sold us a great portion of his stock at unusual concessions because he was forced to move to smaller quarters. Note the savings!

It's Easy to Make a New Sweater with Art-Silk

Sixth Floor—Center

The newest fad in a hand crocheted or a hand-knitted sweater.

When you look at such a finely knitted sweater, you probably say to yourself: "That certainly must have been difficult to do!" But it wasn't. Knitting and crocheting is quite simple. Our instructor will teach you and fit your sweater for you, too. Come here tomorrow—

Select the color you want and begin. You'll find art-silk is especially fine for knitting and crocheting; only 8 to 12 balls used for sweater.

Rich looking, lustrous, washable and durable; and the weight is just right for a sweater or sweater coat—of course, you know how popular tuxedo sweater coats are, they look just like silk but wear better. Art-silk is to be had on large spools of 175 yards that others ask to $1.50 for; special for Monday, choice at, spool..... 98c

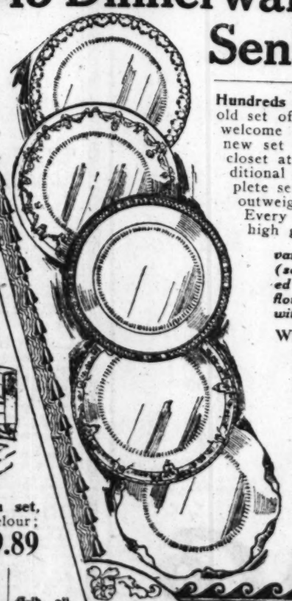
$45 Dinnerware Sets at 24.95: A Sensational Offer

Eighth Floor—State Street.



Hundreds of housewives who feel that the old set of dishes should be replaced will welcome this opportunity to put a fine, new set of dinnerware into their china closet at about half its value. The additional satisfaction derived from a complete set of new dinnerware more than outweighs the small outlay necessary. Every set consists of 100 pieces of high high grade American porcelain in various shapes and decorations (see illustration); colored and tinted in conventional, floral festoon, floral lace and coin gold borders; with plain or coin gold handles.

Whatever your preference you should find it a simple matter to select the shape and decoration you desire. It is quite unlikely that another economy opportunity will avail itself in the near future. Every pattern included is an open stock pattern—you can add to the set whenever you wish—100-piece sets, actual $45 value, Monday at

MOTORDOM

Neighboring States Rush Highway Construction While Mud Embargo Mocks at Illinois Motorists

BY J. L. JENKINS.

Who is holding up the Illinois paved road program?

Two months have passed since Gov. Small, who pledged himself both before and after election to push highway construction as the primary necessity of the state, rejected bids for the vital 1921 work. Careful investigation of these bids showed sand, gravel, and freight rates the only essentials that had increased in cost. It also disclosed a general decrease in actual costs of other essentials and in the price of a finished mile of permanent road. The price in Illinois compared favorably with that in other states where work of 1921 prices is already under way.

Responsibility for the delay has not been placed after these two months by the state administration. The program is still at a standstill.

WHILE Illinois remained deadlocked in mud and the ancient controversy concerning the high price of road building last week, neighboring states swept into full stride in the greatest highway construction race in the history of the middle west.

Wisconsin, Indiana, and Michigan took gleeful advantage of existing rail transportation service, the ready supply of materials and machinery and the flood of workers who are looking for jobs. Both states rushed materials to the record breaking jobs under contract, speeded up the drawing of plans and specifications for improvements, and set the stage for the big highway programs recognized by President Harding as one of the nation's most important needs.

"Michigan is in the midst of spending a $50,000,000 bond issue to improve its highways," wrote Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner. "This will be supplemented by nearly $8,000,000 of federal aid, and more, should future appropriations be made by the government. In addition, the counties will add approximately one-fourth more, assuring the expenditure of about $70,000,000 on the trunk line highway system before 1925."

Last year Michigan's highways failed under the weight of commercial traffic that proved the saving of her industrial, commercial, and social life.

"Wisconsin is spending $85,000 a mile for concrete paving this year and has awarded contracts for more of it than in any previous year at this time," A. R. Hirst, Badger engineer, told Gov. Small and Illinois legislators. "We will never pay less for our permanent roads until these freight rates are readjusted. We pay $4,000 more for each mile of road this year because of the freight increase alone, but still believe that the improvement more than warrants the price paid. It is not a question of whether or not the state can afford good roads; the question is whether or not the state can afford to be without them. Illinois has $60,000,000 in a bond issue. My advice is to spend it for roads at once. Divide the funds so that important unimproved roads can be kept open to traffic through maintenance while the paving work is being pushed."

One part of the Wisconsin chief's advice was followed last week when the senate passed the Meents bill. This measure gives the state authority properly to maintain all roads in the 4,000 mile bond issue system until such time as they are paved. It gives each county authority to maintain its main roads in like manner and each township a similar right. Counties, under the bill, will get funds for this work through road taxes which distribute the burden of cost equally over the entire county.

When the bill becomes effective the state highway department will establish patrolmen to take care of districts along each bond issue road and order that these stretches be kept under constant repair. In numerous instances gravel will be used temporarily to conquer Illinois mud.

"The bill is a step in the right direction," commented George A. Quinlan, Cook county superintendent. "It distributes the cost of county road maintenance equally all over each county and gives us revenue with which to do the work. When the revenue comes in we will proceed at once properly to repair and maintain such important roads in Cook county as Lake street, Halsted street, and other arteries into Chicago not included in through route systems."

SKINNAY, KING OF TRAFFIC—Nick Pappas of the John C. Dore school can be a cop as well as anybody. He aspires to membership on the children's safety patrol, suggested by the city administration to protect school children from crossing casualties. Members of the patrol are taught by real traffic officers, and—honest—they're allowed to blow the whistle!

Dealers Promise Unusual Display in Used Car Show

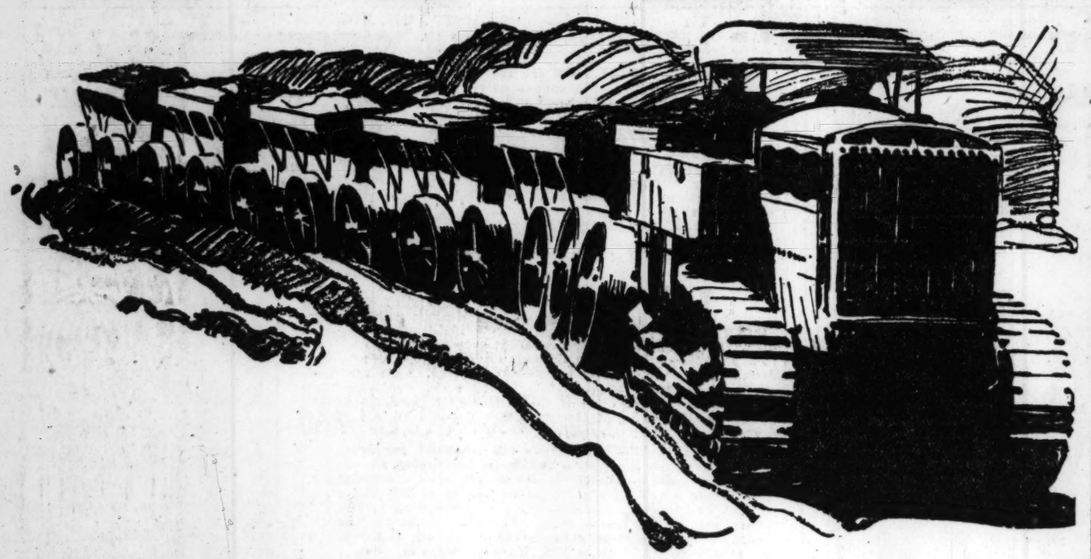
PROSPECTIVE used car buyers will be offered an opportunity to get full value for their money during the week of May 7-15, when the fourth annual used car show opens, under auspices of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, at the Coliseum.

Inspection and appraisal of each of the more than a thousand cars to be exhibited has been in progress for the last week by a committee of experts who will certify as to the car's mechanical condition, its roadability, and the fairness of its price. Their green tag of approval is the automobile's ticket of admission to the show.

Representative dealers are lined up behind the executive committee to make the 1921 show superior in every way to its three predecessors. James Levy, head of the Chicago Buick organization, is the guiding spirit. His assistants are R. C. Cook, Velie and Fiat representative; H. P. Branstetter, Kissel; C. E. Gambill, Marmon Chicago company, and Eugene Silver, Chicago Cole manager.

Dealers declare that this year's show will see an unusual display of higher class cars, owing to the greater than usual turnover during the last winter.

CATERPILLAR



It Has No Rival for Road Work

The "Caterpillar's" field of usefulness is by no means limited to road work. On farm and ranch, in the mining, oil and lumber industries—wherever power and endurance are at a premium, the "Caterpillar"* has no real competitor*

In all sections of the country where good-road movements are under way, the Holt "Caterpillar"* Tractor is rapidly supplanting horses and mules for pulling the heavy road-making machines ~~ So great are the economies, both in time and in money, effected by the "Caterpillar,"* that highway experts now recognize it as standard equipment for all forms of road work ~~ Its tremendous power, its speed and its positive traction permit the "Caterpillar"* to operate easily where no other machine can function at all ~~ If you are interested in making the road funds go as far as possible in your community, you will want to know more about the "Caterpillar"* ~~ We will gladly arrange a motion picture exhibition showing "Caterpillars"* at work on actual jobs ~~ There is no obligation whatever entailed in a request to see these pictures ~~ Write, wire or telephone for information.

REO

After the First 10,000 Miles You Begin to Appreciate Your Reo

¶ Almost any car is a good car the first few thousand miles.

¶ But what's a few thousand miles in the life of an automobile nowadays?

¶ Why, thousands of Reo owners drive 1500 to 2000 miles per month average—the year 'round.

¶ Take doctors, architects, engineers and salesmen, for example.

¶ These men literally live in their automobiles.

¶ And a car that will not look and act as good as new after 20,000—yes 50,000—miles, will not measure up to the requirements of these owners.

¶ If you have been accustomed to cars of average quality, you will note many points of superiority in your Reo when you first get it.

¶ But—after 10,000 miles you begin to understand the vast difference between Reos and others.

¶ After 30,000 or 40,000 miles you begin to marvel at Reo sturdiness and low upkeep.

¶ And thereafter you are a confirmed Reo enthusiast.

¶ No one could sell—or even interest you in any other automobile after that.

Test Road Built to Settle Motor Truck Question

Carrying Capacities of Different Surfaces to Be Compared

ILLINOIS highway officials reopened their campaign against the breaking up of country pavements by overloaded and improperly constructed motor trucks last week with announcement that the state's experimental road near Springfield will be completed for traffic tests during the present season.

The road under construction is a two mile stretch of highway built on state property about twelve miles from Springfield under the supervision of Clifford Older, chief highway engineer. It is divided into six sections, each paved with different surfaces of varying thickness, to determine the load carrying capacities of highway types and the destructive types of truck traffic.

The unique experiment, to be carried on by state officials exclusively, is drawing the attention of both highway engineers and truck builders throughout the country. Both factions are eager to settle the old dispute concerning truck loads and highway efficiency.

A champion for the truck faction appeared last week when the Morand Cushion Wheel company of Chicago asked permission to make exhaustive load carrying tests when the experimental road is completed. The company manufactures the "cushion" solid tire wheels adopted by a number of heavy truck users. The wheel is made to absorb and distribute road shocks through a rubber cushion built between tire rim and wheel felloe. It has also developed a demountable wheel for all types of trucks.

"State officials and every one who pays for the roads are justified in their protest against highway destruction by trucks," declared J. J. Morand in commenting on the experiment. "Of course trucks have destroyed roads, just as overloaded freight cars wreck railroad tracks, but the harm is done by overloading and not by the trucks themselves. We carried 40,000 pounds in one load recently and proved that proper weight distribution, tire widths, and balance does not destroy pavement surfaces. It is the man who puts a ten ton load on a seven ton truck that breaks up our roads, and we hope to prove it to the state."

Extra Lights.

An ingenious car owner recently equipped his bus with two extra lights, low down on the rear fender, completely illuminating the running board. He believes also that the lights make it safe to pass other cars at night and contribute to good running. They are controlled from the dash by an extra switch.

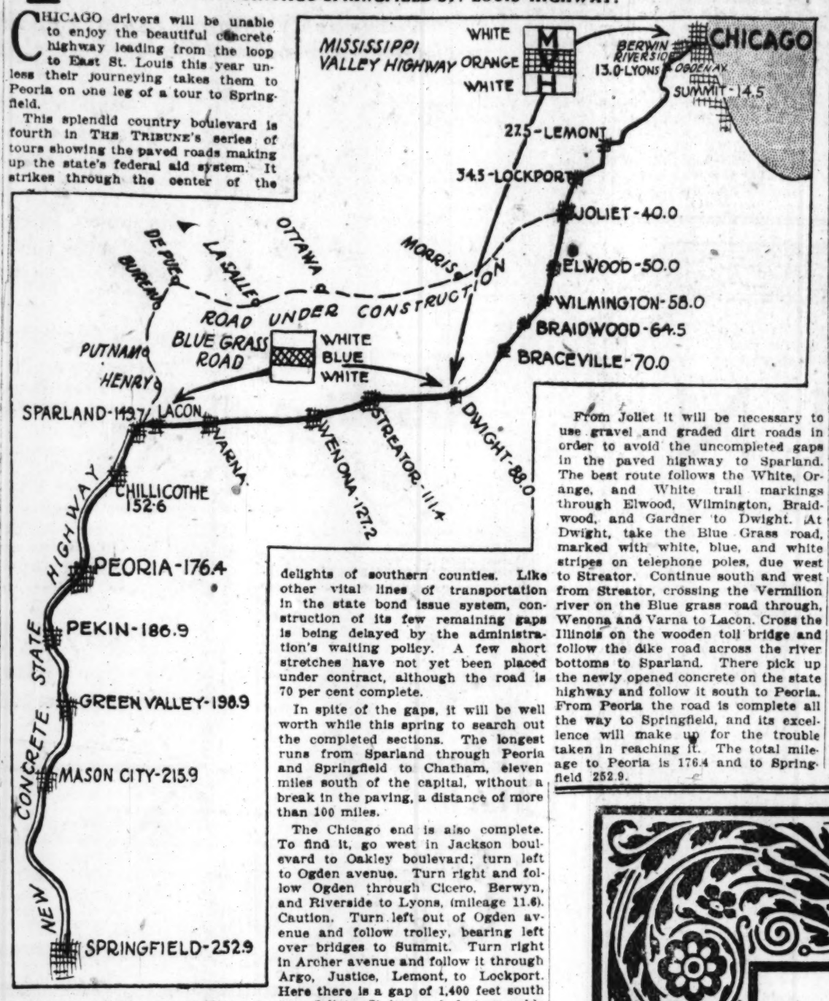
IV. CHICAGO-SPRINGFIELD-ST. LOUIS HIGHWAY.



state to discover the essence of scenic loveliness and industrial greatness in Illinois, beauties of the Illinois river valley, wealth of the corn belt and delights of southern counties. Like other vital lines of transportation in the state bond issue system, construction of its few remaining gaps is being delayed by the administration's waiting policy. A few short stretches have not yet been placed under contract, although the road is 70 per cent complete.

In spite of the gaps, it will be well worth while this spring to search out the completed sections. The longest runs from Sparland through Peoria and Springfield to Chatham, eleven miles south of the capital, without a break in the paving, a distance of more than 100 miles.

From Joliet it will be necessary to use gravel and graded dirt roads in order to avoid the uncompleted gaps in the paved highway to Sparland. The best route follows the White, Orange, and White trail markings through Elwood, Wilmington, Braidwood, and Gardner to Dwight. At Dwight, take the Blue Grass road, marked with white, blue, and white stripes on telephone poles, due west to Streator. Continue south and west from Streator, crossing the Vermilion river on the Blue grass road through, Wenona and Varna to Lacon. Cross the Illinois on the wooden toll bridge and follow the dike road across the river bottoms to Sparland. There pick up the newly opened concrete on the state highway and follow it south to Peoria. From Peoria the road is complete all the way to Springfield, and its excellence will make up for the trouble taken in reaching it. The total mileage to Peoria is 176.4 and to Springfield 252.9.

Repair of Torch.

When a blow torch has worn out its air pump, it may be repaired as follows: Remove the pump and solder an inner tube valve in its stead. The torch may then be pumped up in the ordinary way with a tire pump.

Wrench Adapters.

Some speed wrenches have sockets so deep that a small screw sinks all the way into the socket. Place a couple of nuts of the right size in the socket and they act as as shims to obviate the trouble.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

CHICAGO'S first annual automobile show, staged by the North Side Dealers' association in the Broadway armory, closed last night after establishing beyond all doubt the lasting success of the enterprise. Thousands of Chicago motorists attended the show last week and found it fully as interesting as the national exhibits. More than 150 cars were shown in addition to special factory exhibits and scores of sales were made by the north side dealers, who have adopted the 1921 fighting slogan as their working motto.

The Row is preparing to give its undivided attention this week to another typically automotive attraction in the "Auto Follies," which opens tomorrow night in Aryan Grotto temple under the auspices of the Illinois Automobile club. The club reports a record breaking advance ticket sale. The "Follies" will close May 7.

Graham Brothers' factory branch distributors for the new one and one-half ton truck, will be permanently located in its new headquarters, 2100 South Wabash after after May 1. A formal opening is planned for a later date.

H. M. Wallis, president of the J. I. Case Plow Works company, announced receipt last week of a gold medal awarded the Wallis tractor by the Royal Agricultural society of England, following exacting tests in power farming held recently in Lincoln, England.

S. S. Gilbert and N. O. Gilbert have been appointed distributors of the Oshkosh Four Wheel Drive motor truck in Chicago and neighboring territory. The firm is located in its new salesrooms, 1509 South Michigan avenue. The brothers have spent fourteen years in the automotive game in Chicago.

Just What Is Easy Driving?

THE answers to this question will vary according to the experience of individual drivers. In general it will be agreed that easy driving requires

Easy, convenient gear shifting,
Quick pick-up without knocking,
Confidence in the power and flexibility of the car.

The Standard Eight gives you these features in an unusual degree.

Then the accelerator is a foot-size pedal, like an organ pedal, which gives an easy rest to your foot and steady control over rough roadways.

The Standard Eight has a double ignition system—high-tension magneto and battery which can be used in combination or independently. This means smooth running under all conditions and safety in emergency.

The Standard Steel Car Company of Pittsburgh built this car with an idea of permanence which involves not only construction but performance. The Standard Eight, therefore, is a good car to buy—it is built to endure.

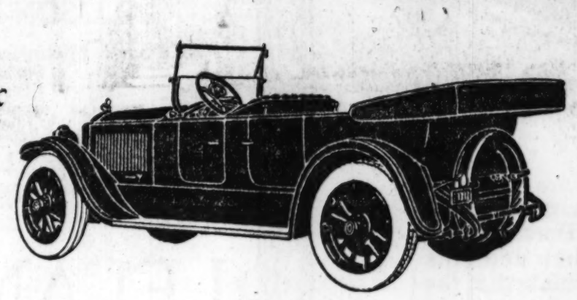
The Twin-Six Touring Car



If your wish is for a car beyond whose excellence no step has yet been taken, be sure you see, and ride in, the Packard Twin-Six. In no other vehicle is so much power joined to such smoothness and quiet. In no other is so much speed knit to safety, so much beauty linked to strength, so much comfort yoked to style. The Packard Twin-Six is in all ways truly representative of a Company that for twenty years has held the quality of its product above considerations of price. Not in this country or elsewhere, will you find another vehicle in which efficiency and elegance are so expertly combined.

Second Lesson in Lubrication Aids in Motor Economy

BY HIGH SPEED.

IT is unfortunate that a great many owners receive the wrong information regarding engine lubrication and thereby remove many months of useful life from the engine and many extra dollars from their pockets.

Imagine a combination of extremely fine fitted parts working at very high speeds and trying to do this work for hours and days and even years. Imagine a crankshaft bearings fitted to a fraction of one-thousandth of an inch having to bear loads of many tons, trying to give a good account of itself with a volume of dirty, gritty, old oil passing over it. All interior engine parts are fitted more accurately than many parts in a high grade watch. Pistons and rings, camshaft bearings, connecting rod bearings, all are worked to close limits and in order that they live long and run quietly during life they must always be well lubricated with the right kind of oil.

The selection of the right brand and grade was taken up in a previous article. The grade of oil should not be changed except for violent atmospheric changes—summer and winter in most states. Without exaggerating, I believe that half the owners of automobiles change from a light or medium oil to a heavy engine oil when the engine is assumed to be getting old. I know many owners who do this after the first year, and others who wait a little longer. An engine should never take any other grade of oil than the one called for by the design, and this grade should never be changed except as needed for winter and summer conditions.

FOILED!—At a London exhibition contest recently thirty-five anti-splash devices were shown by proud inventors working in the interest of the tortured pedestrian. This one is a flange of fiber attached to the outside of the wheel which catches the splash before it can happen.

The new engine is tight. In order that the pistons, rings, bearings, and even the gears get to a working fit the engine is taken through a "run in" period. You are told that a new engine should not be operated at high speed for continued periods until after the first 1,000 miles. The reason for this is that during that period, when the parts are fitting themselves, the clearances are small and the lubricant must work itself between tight parts. After the first 1,000 miles the parts have worked themselves in and the engine is said to be "free." It is easier to crank, it doesn't use so much fuel, it has more power and pep, and runs quieter. Just like a new pair of shoes being "broken in," the engine parts must work to a running fit.

During this period metal is scraped off cylinders, walls, and pistons. These very fine metallic particles naturally mix with the oil. Metal even of such fineness has a cutting action, and it is for this reason that it must be removed. If enough of it deposits it may even clog an oil line. That is why you are told to drain your crankcase after the first 500 miles. It is wise, however, to drain and clean the oil pan every 500 miles thereafter.

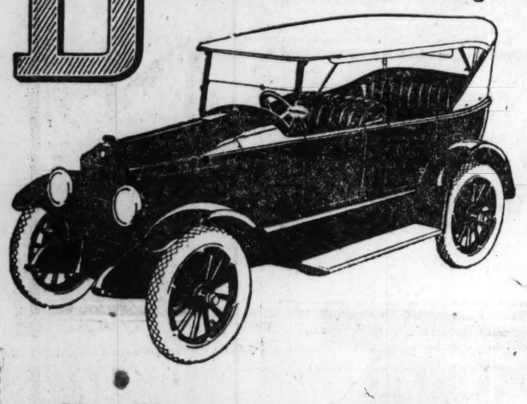
After the run in period of the engine little if any wear will occur for as many as 25,000 miles if lubrication is carefully watched. I know of many cases of cylinders and pistons that have been used for over 50,000 miles without reboring or relapping, because the oil was changed often enough. If you can keep the oil clean always you will give years of additional life to the engine.

It sometimes is very difficult for an owner to decide which oil to use. He must not take the word of the garage man or the local repairman, but must get the information from the motor car factory or the dealer in the car. Ask for the winter and summer grade and the best brands. Do not mix your crankcase oils, getting one make and replenishing the case with another. As pointed out in a previous article, if you buy in large quantities you will avoid much trouble from this source. The average crankcase will take a gallon or so. If you drain the crankcase once each month on the average you will need twelve gallons a year for that alone.

When you remove the oil pan monthly make the interior as clean as a plate. Removal of the pan will also afford an opportunity to inspect the interior of the engine. You can, if you are in a hurry, drain the case and pour kerosene into it to flush out the sediment, but usually this does little good in removing small particles that stick to the sides of the oil pan.

DORT

Quality Goes Clear Through



Many Chicago owners are so deeply impressed by the remarkable thrift and durability of the Dort that the casual listener to their remarks about the car would think that the Dort went no further than that in satisfying them.

But the truth of the matter is that you will find them equally enthusiastic about other features.

For example, the Dort has won a large share of its popularity because of the delightful ease with which it rides and drives.

Especial attention was lavished by Dort engineers upon the springs and weight balance of the car. The springs are built unusually long and strong.

Extreme care is taken in hanging the body correctly.

So that not only does the Dort ride the bumps and shocks easily, but it clings closely to the roadbed.

LINCOLN

MOTOR CARS

SOMETIME ago we said, concerning the new developments in the Lincoln car, that it was only logical to look forward to their adoption in other cars of quality.

There were two reasons why we felt warranted in making that statement.

One was, because the men who now build the Lincoln, having pioneered many of the more important betterments in motor cars during the past twenty years, and those advances having been important factors in making the higher types of cars generally the fine mechanisms they are today, it was only to be expected that the new developments now embodied in the Lincoln would exert a similar influence.

The other reason was, that makers who appeal to the more discriminative motorists could scarcely ignore demands for the new and superior roading qualities and the new factors of endurance now so obvious in the Lincoln car.

Burlington Radius Rod

Is attached directly to the frame of your Ford car; eliminates the possibility of broken crank case, causing loss of oil, burning out of motor, breaking of engine arm, and in this way makes a great saving in motor expense.

Ten Reasons Why

1. Cannot break crank case. Our rod connected to frame.
2. Cannot break engine arm for the same reason.
3. Practically impossible to bend. Most rigid radius rods for Fords.
4. Wheels absolutely cannot kick.
5. Makes steering easier, improves the control, holds the road better.
6. Insures safe and smooth driving over rough roads.
7. No holes to drill. All parts interchangeable. Saves labor and worry.
8. Can easily be installed on any Ford car or truck. Requires only three bolts on the side.
9. Made of solid steel. Sold on an absolute guarantee or your money back.
10. Insures safety and normal road shocks are cushioned through the spring device.

Sold on an absolute guarantee. If in ten days not satisfactory money is refunded. Any one can put it on. Price $10.00 F. O. B. Chicago. A splendid opportunity for dealer. AVIATION

U. S. Air Service of War Cost Less Than 600 Million

$582,564,781 Turned Back to U. S. Treasury

BY MORROW KRUM

THE general impression that a billion dollars was spent for aircraft during the war and that the production program was a failure, not a score of American built planes reaching the front," is finally refuted by figures compiled by Aviation and Aircraft Journal from liquidation reports on file in the office of the chief of air service in Washington. The truth is that the actual cost of all war contracts for aircraft, aeronautical equipment, landing fields, foreign purchases, pay of personnel, the colossal spruce production in the northwest—in fact, everything connected with the equipment and maintenance of our air force at home and abroad—cost the taxpayers less than $600,000,000.

The actual amounts appropriated for the army air service during the war aggregated $1,687,054,758. From this total amount there were revoked by congress sums aggregating $487,000,000, making the net amount available for expenditure by the war department $1,200,054,758.

Until now the charge has been made and the public has been led to believe, that most of this money was spent and largely wasted. It is now revealed for the first time by official and authenticated reports made by the liquidation division of the air service that of the amount available for expenditure $582,564,781 has been returned to the United States treasury.

And there were airplanes produced and delivered to the government, despite the story that the United States "got nothing for its money." The total amount spent for army airplanes in the United States was $113,721,941.39, or 19 per cent of the total air service expenditures. For that money the government received 13,894 American built airplanes. The government spent $139,000,000 abroad for training and the purchase of airplanes, engines, construction of cantonments and production centers, and received, among the other equipment, 5,198 complete airplanes, making a total of 19,092 airplanes produced for the United States. These were produced in a period of twenty-one months. Our production for this period exceeds that of any other country for a like period. It is further substantiation of the belief that the rapidly increasing air power of America forced the war to an early conclusion, for shortly before the armistice the central powers had only 3,309 airplanes on the front. At the signing of the armistice, in addition to the 5,198 airplanes purchased abroad, 2,091 American built airplanes had been shipped to France and 1,040 were at points of embarkation or in transit. One thousand, four hundred and forty airplanes had been actually received in France, of which 667 American made machines were actually in service at the front.

Only within the last few days have these figures been in such form that they could be used in vindication of the wartime air service activities of the government. The chief of air service states that figures "have been published and available for public information for several months, except the important figures showing net expenditures after liquidation and the amount of surplus stocks sold or otherwise disposed of." Therefore the Aviation and Aircraft Journal corrects the gross misstatements of the last two years.

After two years of adjusted canceled war contracts, as previously stated, $582,564,781 of the $1,200,054,758 available has been returned to the treasury.

Aviation in Rhodesia.

After four months' tour through South Africa, the airplane Rhodesia made its last flight from Francistown to Serome. "Using Bulawayo as a base," says the African World, "the airmen flew as far north as Broken Hill and east as far as Umtali. Over the falls some cinematograph pictures were taken by a special representative of the African Films trust, and other places in Rhodesia, including Bulawayo, were photographed for the films."

READY FOR THE "GUN."

Eighteen airplanes, large bombers they were, took off in formation last week from Langley field in a practice "jazz" to prepare the pilots and bomb planters for the battleship and airplane relative superiority test to be held in June. The ships you see above—their propellors spinning so brightly in the sun—are Martins, L. W. F.'s, and De Havilands. Each ship carries sufficient bombs to sink a battleship, providing the "egg layer's" eye and aim is true. All army bomb droppers contend they can place one direct hit out of three chances.

New Reversible Propeller Made of Steel Tubing

A NOTEWORTHY advance in steel propeller development of recent date has been made by the Standard Steel Propeller company of Pittsburgh, Pa. This company, working under contract with the government, has delivered to the air service, engineering division, an all metal steel propeller capable of having the blades reversed.

The blades are made of steel tubing of tapering section and thickness without welding, except to close the extreme tip. The blades fit over the two arms of the hub, being held in place by means of rollers and ball bearings. These rollers greatly reduce the friction of rotating the blades about their center axis. By means of a control which extends to the cockpit, an angular movement of 45 degrees can be obtained with little exertion. The cockpit control consists of a lever for quick reverse, in combination with the hand wheel for final adjustment in straight away level flying.

The propeller was given a rigid test on the test rig and later was installed in an airplane in which it was given several flight tests.

The idea of making a reversible propeller of steel was suggested to the Standard Steel Propeller company by the engineering division. The design of the blades was made by the engineering division at McCook field, but all mechanical details were worked out by the Standard Steel Propeller company.

L. C. Brand Had a Party—the Guests Came by Airplane

More Than 20 Ships Brought the Guests; No Crashes

"MR. AND MRS. LESLIE C. BRAND request the pleasure of your company at an airplane luncheon on Friday, April 14, at high noon, at their clubhouse in Glendale, Cal. Attendance requested via airplane only."

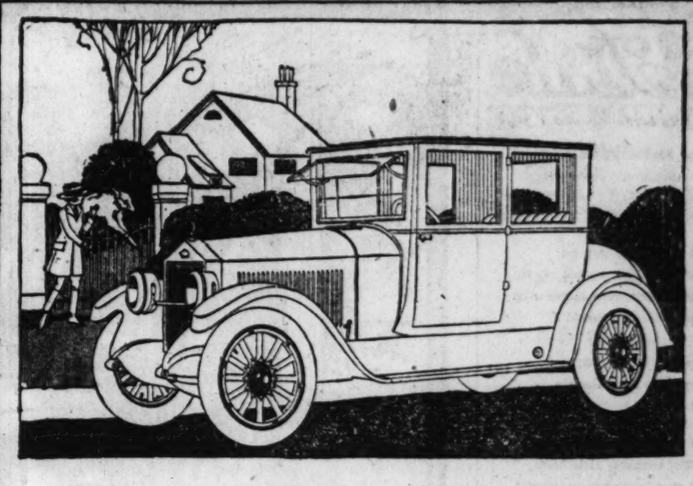
Responding to this unique invitation, nearly a hundred persons, all of them prominent in aeronautical circles in California, arrived by plane at the Brand aerodrome and participated in America's first real airplane party. To L. C. Brand, president of the Guarantee Trust company of Los Angeles and owner of two planes and his own landing field, belongs credit for this innovation. More than twenty planes, each of them carrying two and more passengers, arrived within the noon hour.

With each invitation issued the following instructions to pilots were provided: "The L. C. Brand aerodrome is located along the foothills between Glendale and Burbank, about five miles north of Mercury and Rogers airports in Hollywood. The field is 1,800 feet long. To enter, glide low over small trees at foot of field and land on 'T' toward hangar. D. H.'s can cross trees low at eighty-five miles per hour without danger of overshooting."

Not an accident of any kind marred the pleasure of this aerial party, and to those present it was not difficult to visualize the possibilities of similar week-end parties in the near future which might be held at almost any country club or private country home.

Among those present were some fifty or more pilots prominent in commercial aviation in the southland; officials and ex-officials of the Aero Club of Southern California, and the following officers from March field: Maj. B. K. Yount, commanding officer; Maj. Clarence L. Tinker, Maj. John H. Howard, Maj. Eugene Lohman, Maj. Jacob H. Rudolph, and Capt. Ernest Clark.

Mr. Brand is the owner of two planes—a Hispano-Curtiss and a specially built La Pere, constructed in Los Angeles by the Waterman Aircraft company. The latter is said to have cost $20,000 and is regarded as the "palace of the air" in southern California. Gilbert C. Budwig, ex-civilian flying instructor at Rockwell field and March field, is Mr. Brand's pilot.



Engineering Skill of the World

Put this question squarely to yourself: Does any other car embody such an array of proven units? Check up the quality of the Moon unit by unit and see how the question answers itself.

See how each and every one is the product of specialists who have learned to make successfully one thing and to make it a little better than anyone else. Make note of them—Continental Red Seal Motor; Delco Starter and Ignition; Timken Axles; Spicer Universal Joints; Brown-Lipe Transmission; Borg & Beck Clutch; Rayfield Carburetor; Exide Battery; Fedders Radiator—Nickel-Silver; Warner Steering Gear.

Everything entering into the Moon has been selected with infinite care, tested and proved by Moon engineers with one specific purpose—to make sure that quality goes right straight through every feature. Upon this chassis, embodying the engineering skill of the world, Moon bodies are constructed. Their excellence in finish and every detail reveals that care which can come only from forty-one years' experience in coach work.

PAIGE

The Most Beautiful Car in America

The Car With 100 Hill Climbing Records

On January 21st the Paige "Daytona" Model 6-66 won the world's stock chassis record for speed by traveling at a rate of 102.8 miles per hour.

Since that time 6-66 models have invited every test of speed and endurance that could prove the metal of a real champion.

At one hundred points in the nation these mighty cars have tackled the best local hill climbing records and surpassed them with ease.

And in each case the tests have been conducted by unprofessional drivers in standard models that any man can buy.

It is not necessary to explain or amplify such consistent success in the field of sport. The records speak for themselves in the most positive terms.

They affirm that, irrespective of price or piston displacement, the Paige 6-66 is the leader of all American sporting cars.

If you believe that championship form is the best guarantee of all 'round efficiency, then you must believe in the Paige.

If you believe in demonstrated performance on road, hill and track, the 6-66 with its exclusive power plant must inevitably be the car of your choice.

Slams of Life
by J.P.McEvoy

THE KNEE PLUS ULTRA.

Whenas abroad my Julia goes
Methinks she rolleth down her hose
Which doth her dimpled knees disclose.

I do not care if, as you go,
Your dainty cuticle should show,
Why should this view alone exist
For yonder dermatologist?
The, as you might say, avenude
Is shy enough on pulchritude . . .
If your patella likes the air
I do not care.

I do not care how bare you be,
So twinkle, twinkle, little knee,
For as I stroll with sunny brow
I pipe the pretty knee-pan now—
A pipe of Pan, with modern turn,
That Pan, himself, could never spurn . . .
If passing knees are passing fair
I do not care.

I do not care to grieve or moan
If you prefer to roll your own.
If you insist that you must show
Your knee plus ultra as you go,
I shall not sigh, I shall not brood,
I'll bear it all with fortitude . . .
. . . How clear my brain! How cool my palm!
I view you with exceeding calm . . .
I'm gazing with indifferent air
Upon your dimpled knees so fair . . .
I do not care! I do not care!
You heard me, son, I do not care!
. . . much!

The WELL-DRESSED MAN
By Alfred Stephen Bryan

Tropic Clothes Take Simmer Out of Summer

SOME sharp tongued foreign observer once remarked: "You Americans know the price of everything and the value of nothing." Like most snap judgments of aliens, this is one not wholly true, but isn't there just enough truth in it to leave a sting? Are we not too prone, especially of late, to consider the sum we pay, rather than the something we get?

Clothes, expressing fashion and good taste, rise to the plane of art. You cannot weigh them upon a green grocer's scales, nor measure them with a draper's yardstock. There is more to a well cut suit than just length, breadth, and thickness. To appraise things to wear by price alone is to form a low estimate of the fine art of dress, which has an indisputable social and cultural uplift.

Price is a good servant, but a poor master. Fine materials and gifted handiwork must command their worth, and you will be well rewarded to pay the price. Involuntarily one has a higher opinion and one takes better care of genuinely good clothes. You brush them, hang them up, have them pressed, and they show their appreciation by far longer service.

Not so many years ago, tropic-thin summer clothes of silk, silk and linen, twillette, doeskin, cricketing flannel, pin cloth, wool crash and the like would have suggested the Spanish don or the British officer in the Soudan. Today such clothes are as much a part of the wardrobe of 'Ye Compleat Gentleman," as his evening suit.

Portrayed here is one of the tropic-thin, two button suits of surah, Shantung, to pongee silk. It has the low gorge, the long narrow lapels and the patch pockets. The jacket is not waisted to figure but is rather straight and loose. Details may vary, of course, as individuality and personal whim may prompt. Delicate materials, which crease readily should not be subjected to the strain of continuous wear, as no suit can keep spruce under such harsh conditions.

The Bolshevist's Nightmare.

The Panama hat, like good manners, never goes out of fashion. The block illustrated has the full crown, the broad span of brim and the narrowish ribbon. The collar is the soft self-affair and the polka-dotted scarf is a design which is never outmoded.

Bow-knot ties are only becoming to the long, lean cast of features. The round faced man should wear the four-in-hand scarf to gain seeming length. The collar and cravat pictured are the bold tab wing and the bow-knot tie with a snug center and spreading ends. The pattern of the tie is crisscross printed foulard silk.

No golf shoe has won for itself such widespread vogue latterly as the "kiltie" brogan, illustrated. The punched toe and top and the slashed leather tongue are as Scotch as "ye banks and braes o' bonny Doon."

Reverting to tropic thin summer suitings, they now come in both light colors and the dark ones.

[Copyright: 1921: By Alfred Stephen Bryan.]

Justified

By Guy Lee.

He was the most patient of men;
He looked on the world with a smile;
He would do any task any fellow would ask,
And consider the favor worth while.
He'd loan all his spare change and grin,
Of malice he hadn't a speck;
He was almost too gay to exist, till one day
He developed a boil on the neck.

He now is a grouch and a bear,
His wife's hinting at a divorce.
There is nothing on earth that will stir him to mirth;
His language is bitter and coarse.
He barks at his friends, and there's not
One joy in his vision, by heck!
And you'll be the same way if some tragical day
You develop a boil on the neck.

Ask us about the Automatic Lock—In the OSHKOSH 4-Wheel Drive the transfer of power from all four wheels to any desired pair of wheels is accomplished through an Automatic Lock.

Increased Power—Combining extraordinary power without waste, with economy and speed; 20% saved because each wheel takes a firm, tractive grip; absolutely no loss through slippage.

Efficiency Brake—Safety all the time made possible by the OSHKOSH Emergency Brakes, giving braking service applied on all four wheels instantly, eliminating "close shaves."

Ease of Steering—OSHKOSH Drive System is covered by four patents. Easy as a touring car to handle, not a "man-killer"—any girl can drive it—continuous traction at four points on the road prevents "ditching."

NO SKIDDING

Low Cost Bodies—By special arrangement with one of the largest manufacturers of motor truck bodies, we are able to offer you the economy of being able to get the truck body at a low price made possible only through big production—also the convenience of offering you an OSHKOSH fully equipped and ready for service when it is delivered to you.

THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy

ILLUSTRATIONS BY J.H. STRIEBEL

"On with the Dance."

PROLOGUE.

Toddling is wrestling set to music . . . as in wrestling, the first step is learning the holds . . . the rest is easy because you merely hold on and keep moving . . . it doesn't make much difference what you move so long as you move and pay no attention to the music except to applaud when it stops . . . you applaud when it stops because that is the best part of it . . . it is very easy to toddle especially for the men, for they have not only the floor to toddle on, but their partners' feet also . . . "I love to dance with you," says the lady, "you're so light on my feet" . . . married couples cannot dance well together, except when they are not married to each other.

Act I.—A Restaurant.

SCENE I.: Bill Potter and his fair companion-in-arms, Betty, are toddling with what Harry Newman would call "great good will."

BILL: Ain't the music swell?
Gee, the floor is s'lick!
BETTY: My, you toddle well!
How d'ya learn so quick?
BILL: Well, the kid is smart;
All he need's a start.
BETTY: I'll tell the world you're clever;
It takes some boys forever.
BILL: Lookit over there,
The one with the yellow hair—
Isn't she a curly wolf,
Isn't she a bear?
BETTY: What a funny suit!
Do you think she's cute?
BILL: Well, she ain't so worse at that.
BETTY: But lookit what a funny hat!
BILL: Gee, the music's grand!
Don't you love that moan?
Give 'em another hand—
O, you saxaphone!
BETTY: Well, violins for me—
They thrill me through and through;

"Give 'em another hand."

I just adore the Humoresque;
Don't you love it, too?
BILL: It's rather good, you know,
But gee, it's awful slow . . .

SCENE II.: Meanwhile Mamie Potter and her gallant lad (his name is Joe) have dropped in for some tea, toast, and toddle, and Each is a child again, just for tonight. Ah, well, it's all in fun. As Ma Potter would say, man's a vapor full of woes, cuts a caper, down he goes . . . here today and gone tomorrow . . . after that, nobody knows.

JOE: Ain't the music swell?
Gee, the floor is slick . . .
MAMIE: My, you toddle well!
How d'ya learn so quick?

"Don't look now . . . she's watching you."

JOE: Simply used my bean—
Easy, what I mean!
MAMIE: Well, I'll say you're pretty clever;
Takes a lot of boys forever.
JOE: Lookit the little baby vamp . . .
Back of you, by the yellow lamp . . .
Don't look now . . . she's watching you . . .
The fellow with her's looking, too.
MAMIE: Why, that is Bill!
JOE: And who is bill?
MAMIE: My brother Bill . . . why, you know Bill.
(Nods.)
He knows me now . . . I think he's sore . . .
I never saw that girl before . . .
D'ya know her, Joe? Who can she be?
Well, she isn't so much, that I can see.
JOE: Let's ask them over after the dance.
MAMIE: Bill at our table? . . . Not a chance.
JOE: Ain't the music grand?
He slides a mean trombone.
Give 'em another hand—
O, you saxaphone! . . .

Act II.—The Potter Dining Room.

It is the morning after, and the Potters have toddled down to the breakfast table, straggling in late, as usual. Bill and Mamie are both perishing with curiosity Who was he? Who was she?

MAMIE: What time did you get in last night?
BILL: Who wants to know? I got in all right.
MAMIE: It's a wonder you could break away—
She held you tight enough, I'll say.
Where did you meet her? What's her name?
My, what a helpless looking dame!
BILL: You ought to talk—with the guy you had.
I suppose you think he's a collar ad;
The way he stumbled around the floor!
I never seen such a simp before.
MAMIE: If you could dance as good as Joe,
You'd be a dancer . . . I'll say so.
But you haven't told me about the dame;
Where did you meet her? What's her name?
BILL: "Dame?" Say, how d'ye get that way?
She's a mighty nice little girl, I'll say . . .
MAMIE: O, right away he goes up in smoke;
The kid's in love . . . ain't that a joke!

"The kid's in love . . . ain't that a joke?"

You should have seen him, Ma, last night;
You wouldn't have known him . . . so polite—
Held her chair until she sat . . .
And "have some of this" and "take some of that";
And when she got up he jumped to his feet
And helped her on with her coat so sweet!
Why, Ma, you wouldn't have known the kid—
He acted human . . . honest, he did.
BILL: Say, you was the one that made me sick,
The way you smirked at that silly hick,
And batted your eyes and fluffed your hair,
And looked up at him with that helpless stare . . .
And you danced as though you were doing your best
To crawl inside of his coat and vest.
MA: Now, Bill, you mustn't be so rude.
PA: Cut out the gab and eat your food,
And get off to work or you'll both be fired,
This jawing around here makes me tired.
MAMIE: He's got a nerve to talk, all right,
The way she danced with him last night.
BILL: Gwan and knock her . . . she don't care,
And it ain't gonna get you anywhere.
PA: And wrangling won't get you no place;
Cut out the battling . . . feed your face.
MAMIE: My, what a taste!
BILL: You're not so smart—
Lookit your goof!
PA: Aw, have a heart!
(And that's that.)

"Why, ma, you wouldn't have known the kid."

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Now's the Time to Come to the Aid of Grand Opera

By Mme. X.

ONE by one royalty is being stripped of its parquisites, its privileges, its prerogatives, and its responsibilities. Grand opera used to be considered the especial affair of kings and courts. The private purses of crowned heads supported it. The royal box was one of the chief adornments of opera houses. The presence of the ruling family made the evening a gala event. Tickets were higher those nights. Kings and queens were a distinct financial asset.

Today times have changed. The French republic helped in this change when that government subsidized the Paris grand opera, thus making it a property of the people. Chicago has advanced the cause of the people and of music one step further by undertaking to make our grand opera a possession, not of a dynasty, not of a government, not of a class, but of the citizens of Chicago themselves. As the backers of the new phase into which our opera company is entering put it, they are going not to the social register but to the telephone book for support of one of our finest, most precious institutions.

It was a master stroke of Charles G. Dawes, Who first devised the scheme, to go direct to the Association of Commerce for help in the campaign to keep the opera here. That body promptly organized a "citizens' Chicago opera committee."

Pledged to Cover Deficit.

This committee will, all unconsciously probably, make a new alignment in Chicago's social and business ranks, one which will outshine and outnumber Ward McAllister's famous "four hundred." This will be composed of what this committee calls "founders and guarantors of the Chicago Opera association," a body of 500 men and women who undertake to underwrite the opera, each pledging himself or herself to contribute up to $1,000 a year if this should be necessary to cover the deficit.

It is, however, not expected that any such deficit will occur. The new management, under Mary Garden, promises great reforms in the matter of expenditure, reforms which will not in any degree lower the standard of performances. In every way the experiment is of enormous interest to music lovers and public spirited citizens all over the world.

A woman impresario, an opera supported by the pledges of 500 citizens, with the further coöperation of a novel organization like the Friends of Opera, never before in the history of grand opera, not in Paris, London, Berlin, Vienna, Rome, nor Milan, has any such strange combination been essayed. Our success—and it is taken for granted—will start a new era in opera management.

Committee of Five Hundred.

At the head of this organizing committee is Robert E. Kenyon, chairman, with Elmer T. Stevens vice chairman. On the executive committee are such well known men as Julius Rosenwald, Frederic W. Upham, John G. Shedd, John J. Mitchell, Clayton Mark, John C. Shaffer, L. B. Kuppenheimer, Samuel C. Osborn, Andrew R. Sheriff, George W. Dixon, C. S. Peterson, and Evan Evans. Charles G. Dawes heads the list of the advisory committee, which includes Howard Elting, Charles Folds, D. F. Kelly, Harold McCormick, J. R. Noel, John O'Leary, and Bernard F. Sunny.

The Chicago Opera association will be reincorporated as an educational not for profit organization. The names of the guarantors will appear on all the programs all over the country, so that this choice 500 will become as widely and well known as any aggregation of citizens in the land.

In the last eight years Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick and the other guarantors have given to the support of our opera altogether $3,000,000. This has resulted in an opera company second to none in the world. In fact we Chicagoans think it has no equal today.

Plans for "Our Mary."

All of which palaver about something which you may already know much better than the writer does is because the coming week is to be devoted to a sort of get together feast, with "our Mary" as chief attraction to the various functions planned. Tomorrow she is to have a formal presentation to the Association of Commerce, which is to be in a way a partner of hers. On Wednesday the association gives her a luncheon.

On Friday evening she sings in a concert given by the association's glee club at the Auditorium. This will be her only public appearance here, so you'd better get your tickets early.

The Monday following the Friends of Opera are giving her what an enthusiastic member called "one swell party" at the Casino, to testify to the new director of the opera that the F. O. G. O.'s are with her to a man (and woman). There will be music and dancing and some "stunts." A small dinner for Miss Garden, given by Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, will precede the ball, and the whole affair promises to be, though the last, by no means the least of the season's big and memorable entertainments. Only the members of the Friends of Opera and of the board of directors are invited to this function, unless some of the opera artists are in town, in which case they, too, will be invited.

Years Ago in Dresden.

In establishing friendly and personal relations with the members of the Chicago opera troupe we are following the example of certain German cities such as Munich, Dresden, and Leipsic, where their song birds were well known and popular citizens in the community.

In Dresden, for instance, years ago there was a then famous soprano known as "die Malten." Besides being a great singer, she was the mother of a sizeable family of children, whose father was a Saxon officer. "Die liebe kaiser" did not permit his officers to marry stage folk, so Malten's unmarried state was accepted as perfectly moral by the Dresdeners, and when the officer father died from pneumonia all Dresden went into mourning with her and attended the funeral in large numbers, weeping with the crêpe draped artist.

This scandalized some of the inexperienced American tourists who happened to be sojourning in the Saxon capital at that time, and the writer distinctly remembers the comment of one serious minded dame from central Illinois who said that she thought it was "horrid of the Dresden people to make such a fuss over Malten and her paramour."

Field Museum Opens.

A great occasion is the informal opening tomorrow afternoon of the new home of the Field Museum of Natural History, that vast Greek temple which we have watched for years arising from the waters of Lake Michigan at the east end of what is now known as Roosevelt road. A reception to mark the occasion is being given by the museum trustees. Those invited will have an opportunity to inspect the building and the collections there installed. The museum will be thrown open to the general public Tuesday morning.

Among the distinguished out of town guests will be Carl Akeley. No one will be quite as interested as he, I think, for he is chiefly responsible for the remarkable and world famous exhibit of big game which adorns the great central hall.

He is known as the greatest living taxidermist, as well as being one of the best known big game hunters of the day. From being a taxidermist he has become a sculptor of international renown. His career and achievements are remarkable. The Field museum brought him here from Milwaukee a quarter of a century ago. He displayed such talents in mounting animals that the museum sent him to collect big game specimens in central and east Africa in 1908, the same year that Col. Roosevelt made his celebrated expedition.

Adventures in Africa.

With Mr. Akeley went John T. McCutcheon. Their experiences were most entertainingly described by the latter in a portly volume entitled simply "In Africa." The fruits of that campaign now stand in the museum's main hall as if some strange fate had suddenly petrified them in the moment of intensest activity. It is a remarkable collection and well worth much study.

Next Wednesday evening Mr. Akeley will describe his and Mr. McCutcheon's African adventures in a talk he is giving in Orchestra hall for the benefit of the Northwestern University settlement, of which Miss Harriet Vittum is head resident and Alfred Granger is president. Mr. McCutcheon says that Mr. Akeley is "one of the most fascinating talkers" that he ever heard. Of Mr. McCutcheon Mr. Akeley's manager, Mr. Buck, says that if he was of any real help to the taxidermist in the study of animal anatomy it must have been in an eager search for a funny bone.

The lecturer will describe just how it feels to be used as a prayer mat by a big bull elephant and to hunt roaring lions with Theodore Roosevelt. Among the boxholders at the lecture will be Frank S. Cunningham, Frederick C. Boynton, Alfred H. Granger, Harriet Vittum, Charles G. Little, John T. McCutcheon, Glen Buck, and Mrs. Philip Shumway.

A Roosevelt Memorial.

The development of Mr. Akely from his original calling in taxidermy to being one of the world's most foremost animal sculptors is an interesting transition. To the latter he is devoting all his time and attention nowadays.

Immediately after the funeral of Col. Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt and Theodore Roosevelt Jr. sent for Mr. Akely to consult with them as to a suitable memorial to the departed statesman, naturalist, writer, soldier, hunter, and patriot. Mr. Akely had already conceived the idea of a colossal lion, but said nothing of it until Mrs. Roosevelt suggested to him that she would rather have a lion than anything else as a memorial.

A movement is on foot to raise a national fund to make this memorial a splendid public monument, the greatest of its kind in the world. The site has not been decided on. The American Institute of Architects advocates placing it in Rock Creek park in Washington, D. C. Others interested in the project prefer some site in the Rocky mountains. The latter seems rather a remote and indefinite spot. The national capital would place the memorial within reach of many more people.

So Romantic a Dwelling Place.

Eames MacVeagh is in danger of losing his long enjoyed prestige of being Chicago's most interesting bachelor. Maj. Frederick McLaughlin is pressing him hard.

The latter's latest achievement is the remodeling of what was formerly a dingy business building on that part of Michigan avenue immediately abutting the plaza which touches the southeast corner of the boulevard link bridge. This building Holabird & Roche are transforming into a chic and artistic structure, an architectural creation, with balconies and French windows, the whole whitewashed as if to defy Chicago's smoke pall.

In this the gallant major is going to install his lares and penates in a charming apartment on the top floor, the lower floors being devoted to offices.

What a unique and delightful site for a home! From his windows he can see the entire motor world of Chicago stream up and down the boulevard, and watch the picturesque river traffic slowly moving through that pale green, tortuous channel. He can see the Wrigley tower glow and gleam as the first beams of the sun rise out of the lake and touch its loveliness, lifting it out of the night mists. In short, it would be hard to find so romantic and interesting a dwelling place in any other great city, and it shows unusual acumen on the part of Maj. McLaughlin to have selected it.

The Unusual in Homes.

He is rather noted for his originality in abodes. A few years ago he turned his polo stables in his Lake Forest place into a most attractive summer residence for himself. He is now taking his furniture out of there and placing it in his Venetian palazzo on Michigan avenue. The place he thus vacates in Lake Forest is to be occupied this summer by the James Keeley family.

It is quite the thing to transform garages and stables into homes for the esthetic and comfort loving. Years ago Mrs. George Higginson did it while she was building her house at Winnetka, a place now owned and occupied by the Hathaway Watsons. The summer that the Higginson house was under construction the family lived in the large, roomy, and airy stable which Mrs. Higginson, who has a remarkable gift for making a home attractive, had made so delightful and comfortable that the family was almost sorry to have to move into the new house.

This summer Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. McGann and their daughter, Miss Grace McGann, will live in the new garage on their Lake Forest place, while their house is being built, which they have planned to take the place of the old C. B. Farwell mansion, burned to the ground a year ago.

Death of Mrs. W. K. Nixon.

In the death at St. Luke's hospital last Wednesday of Mrs. W. K. Nixon there passed from Chicago a real personality, a woman who in her day had been a social power. That day, to be sure, was long ago, and of late years and times had come to her, times in which her friends of that long ago had rallied to her assistance with a devotion and loyalty which attested to some unusual quality in her.

In the simple, unsophisticated era which came in immediately after the fire of 1871 Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Nixon built on the block on Rush street, between Huron and Superior streets, two white stone fronted houses so superior in their architectural style to anything then known that they stood out among the ugly and banal dwellings of that period as bright and shining lights. One of those houses is now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John A. Carpenter, and the other one by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman. There was a black and white marble flooring in the entrance hall of the Nixon home which was one of the grandeurs of the entire neighborhood. The Nixons lived in the one now the home of the Carpenters.

After the Great Fire.

In those benighted, post-fire days most Chicagoans were so occupied rebuilding their destroyed fortunes and houses that they gave little or no thought to the amenities of life. Almost everybody dined at noon and had supper at six o'clock in the evening. Dinner parties, where people wore evening dress as we use the term, were quite unknown. The one exception to this simple order of living were the Nixons, where dinner was the evening meal, an occasion of form and precision. Also Mrs. Nixon gave real functions where rare foods and wines were served much as they were at that time in the great social centers of Europe.

The Nixon house was famous for its hospitality. Distinguished guests from all over the world were entertained there, the most noted of whom was the Duke of Newcastle. That was a famous time in the block. Dukes were considered more of a prize then than now. They seem to have lost out lately.

The Nixons added a fourth story to their house. To be sure it was a rather stunted, unimpressive architectural addition. It was, however, sufficient to house some of the ducal retinue, for the "dook" traveled with both a valet (pronounced at that time, "vally") and a secretary.

The Nixons had one of the few butlers of that era. Edward was his name, and he was the pride of the neighborhood. He was every inch a butler, and besides had a soul, which science denies to some of his ilk. When hard times came to the Nixons, as it did not long after the duke's visit, Edward threw in his fortunes with theirs and stayed with them as long as they let him.

But whether they were living in luxury or in poverty the Nixons always gave that indefinable impression of breeding and traditions which seems now a legacy from another civilization than ours. By that I don't mean to imply anything like a reproach to our present period of time. It is the greatest and most interesting moment in the development of the human race, and we who live in it are lucky in doing so. But what we are gaining in strength and enlightenment we are paying for by a definite loss in the elegancies of life. Leisure, culture, a certain impersonal serene sense of superiority are all markedly absent from our present point of view and habit of mind.

To Honor Their Dead.

Utterly in the spirit of today was the little gathering that went with Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers ten days ago on a desperately wet and stormy Friday to dedicate a room at the Country Home for Convalescent Crippled Children to the memory of a group of young Chicago men who gave their lives for their country in the late war. These men so remembered were Capt. Henry Blair Keep, Lieut. Kenneth Leish, Lieut. Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, Sergt. Vernon Booth, an American unknown, and a British fighting warrior.

Mrs. Chalmers, whose special charge is the institution, presided at the dedication at which the speakers were Maj. Gen. George Bell Jr., Col. A. A. Sprague, and Capt. Marshall Field. Dr. McClure conducted the services, and Maj. Norval Pierce sang, himself singing "The Long Trail," while the children joined up on the chorus with great enthusiasm.

Those eager little faces, those crippled, frail forms, the sad faced mothers following families come to join in the ceremony which was to honor their dead, the spacious, complete home, the cheerful nurses, all made an unforgettable combination in the warm spring day. The party, almost strong, went out on a special train on the Aurora and Elgin electric line. Luncheon was served on the train going out.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Keep, Mrs. Henry Keep, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. David Forgan, Mrs. Charles Sprague, Mrs. Charles A. Monroe, Mrs. Frederick Dunham, Mrs. and Miss Dodge, Miss Gwendolyn Field, Maj. and Mrs. Norval Pierce, Miss Margaret Conover, Mr. and Mrs. William O. Goodman, Mrs. Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, and Mrs. Theodore S. Robbins.

Annual Drive on for Summer Camp at Arden Shore

By Kate Webber.

THE Arden Shore association, of which Mrs. Carl R. Latham of Evanston is the president, will have its annual drive for funds this week, the money received to maintain the summer camp near Lake Bluff.

From June until September every year more than 500 mothers and small children are taken care of at the camp. Each has a fortnight's rest, or longer if the case demands, during which food, shelter, medicine, and recreation are provided.

Unusual efforts are made to find mothers and small children who are in urgent need of these benefits and are unable to pay for them. Various organized and individual investigators locate the persons in the city, and the Arden Shore association takes them to the camp and home again. Thus is aid given where it is badly needed, and the mothers and children are afforded two weeks' respite from the crowded conditions and given proper nourishment to assist them through the summer months.

The layout of the camp is most attractive, located as it is on Sheridan road beyond Lake Bluff in a beautifully wooded tract. There is a group of tents called "Boyville," in charge of two young men who make pals of their small charges and give them lessons in self-reliance and manliness.

There is "Baby Fold," the cottage supervised by a nurse, who teaches the mothers necessary problems of diet and how to dress their babies properly and comfortably. Little convalescents also are given special care, and their gain is watched by health charts, which are explained to them.

The amusement hall is the center of attraction for both the mothers and youngsters. All who so desire are given lessons in folk and gymnastic dancing, and entertainments are planned by self-supporting young women who come out to the camp and give service in return for their vacations. Tired mothers whose backs have long been bent over housework are coaxed into remembering their native dances and executing them for fellow guests. To teach these old young mothers to play again is worth while indeed.

There is the library building, the sewing pavilion equipped with sewing machines and work tables, where past masters give instructions in the art of patching and making material go the farthest possible way in making clothes. Near by is the beach, which gives the most pleasure of any of the several recreations at Arden Shore.

In addition to the summer work the camp is used in winter to build up undernourished boys. Hundreds of boys in Chicago are so physically handicapped that they cannot receive work certificates. Such children last but a few months in industry unless they are restored to a normal condition of health.

The Chicago board of education, through its vocational bureau, does its share of providing schooling and vocational guidance, as well as medical service, for the little chaps who are fitting themselves for the biggest scrap with life. The capacity of the camp last winter allowed but forty boys to be taken care of, but it is hoped to increase the number by next season.

One Chicago firm employs eleven of these boys, each of whom received his course in training for normalcy at Arden Shore. The cost of giving each of these boys his chance to make good with a fair start has proved its infinite value.

MRS. EMORY NONNAST

A card party will be given on Wednesday at 2 o'clock under the auspices of the philanthropic department of Les Matinées Françaises at the residence of Mrs. J. J. Lyons, 5943 Kenmore avenue. The funds will be divided between Chicago charities and the town of Pagny-sur-Moselle in France, which was totally devastated during the war. Mrs. Emory Nonnast is chairman of the committee in charge.

MISS MARY BISSELL

MRS. CARL LATHAM

Mrs. Carl R. Latham of Evanston is president of the Arden Shore association, which will have its annual drive this week to procure funds for the maintenance of the summer camp. In addition to providing recreation for tired mothers and children from the city the association has established a winter course for undernourished boys, who are fitted to enter industry through a rigid and efficient course conducted with the assistance of the board of education.

A dinner will be given on Tuesday evening at the Cordon by the Chicago alumnæ of Mount Holyoke college to celebrate the eighty-third commencement at Mount Holyoke and as a memorial to Mary Lyon, founder of the school. The alumnæ all over the country will give dinners on that evening, when plans will be discussed for raising funds to provide more residence halls, a modern science building to replace one destroyed by fire last year, and to increase the salaries of the faculty. Mrs. Clyde S. Stillwell is chairman of the Chicago district. Miss Mary Bissell is on the committee in charge of the dinner and will be one of the speakers.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

There will be a meeting of the board of directors and chairmen of standing committees of the Woman's City club tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. The food and markets committee will meet at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. On Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock Mrs. E. W. Bemis will outline the summer program to the citizenship class. Jenabe Fazel of Teheran, Persia, will speak on "Racial Antagonism and International Justice." The speech will be interpreted by Mirza Ahmad Sohrab. There also will be a meeting of the housing and zoning committee at 2 o'clock Tuesday. The chairman, Miss Madge Headley, will give an illustrated talk on "Zoning." The Thirty-third ward will meet at 2 o'clock Tuesday, and at 7:30 in the evening the Lincoln Center Woman's club will be addressed by Harry De Joannis. At 12 o'clock Wednesday the central municipal citizenship committee will meet at luncheon. The committee on Cook county affairs will meet at 11:30 Wednesday morning; the clean city committee will meet at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Mrs. Russel H. Opdyke will speak at the meeting of the Park Ridge branch at 2 o'clock Wednesday. There will be an afternoon meeting of the club at 2:30 Wednesday, which will be addressed by Maj. Zinovi Pechkoff of the French army. His subject will be "Lest We Forget." At 7:30 Wednesday evening the education committee will join with the central council of high school teachers in presenting a motion picture program on "Visual Education" in the lounge of the club. The civil service committee will meet at luncheon Thursady at 12 o'clock. There will be a meeting of the child welfare committee at 2:30, and the legislative committee will meet at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon. There will also be a meeting of the public library committee at 4:30, and the Eighteenth ward branch will meet at 8 o'clock Thursday evening. There will be a meeting of the Homewood branch at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. The Second ward branch will also meet at 2 o'clock Friday. The club has arranged a mothers' and daughters' party for Saturday afternoon from 3 until 5 for the daughters of members of the club. Tea will be served.

Le Cercle Francais will hold a members' meeting on Tuesday at 2 o'clock. Henri David will speak at 3 o'clock on French poetry.

ART AND ARCHITECTURE

When Building a Home Plan to Get Best Use of Lot

By Eleanor Jewett.

A POINT which always should be considered in building a home, but a point which too often is not considered, is that of the location of the house on the lot. Given a small lot, it might by thought off hand that you could not go far wrong no matter where you placed the house—and probably it would not be until too late that you discovered how wrong you could go.

The location of the house on the lot decides almost automatically what you can do with the rest of the lot, where you can have a garden, if you can have a garden, where you can have shrubs or a lawn, or where you, because of your thoughtlessness, must have nothing except waste space.

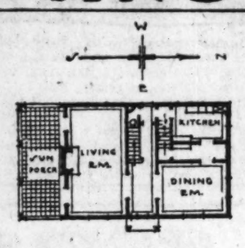
Probably there will be no disagreement with the statement that when possible the living portion of the house, garden and lawn areas, should be to the south, southeast, and southwest, while the kitchen and service portion of the house should be towards the north.

One of the clearest expositions of how this may be managed is found in "Planning the Home Grounds," the second booklet of the Landscape Garden Series, from the Garden Press, Davenport, Ia., to which reference has been made before. It goes something like this:

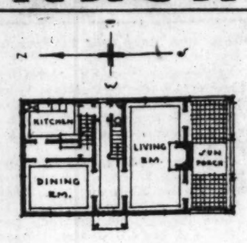
"It has seemed to the writer" (Mr. L. W. Ramsey, B. S.) "that mistakes are made less often, by the home owner, in the selection of a suitable location for the house than in any other phase of home development. When it comes to locating the house on the lot there seems to be an intuition which instinctively draws one to the most acceptable site. It is equally true that often when the opportunity of doing something extremely fine presents itself the opportunity is seldom seized.

"The greatest mistake on the part of the home owner seems to be not so much in locating the house properly, but rather in planning the house with reference to the site, so that the two will bear proper relation to each other; thus affording a congruent and efficient arrangement. The location of the house upon the property is of fundamental importance, for when the house is located the various areas about the house are automatically determined. As it is, the arrangement of the house, as well as its location, that determines these areas, it is equally and fundamentally important to consider the outside arrangement and views in planning the disposal inside of the rooms."

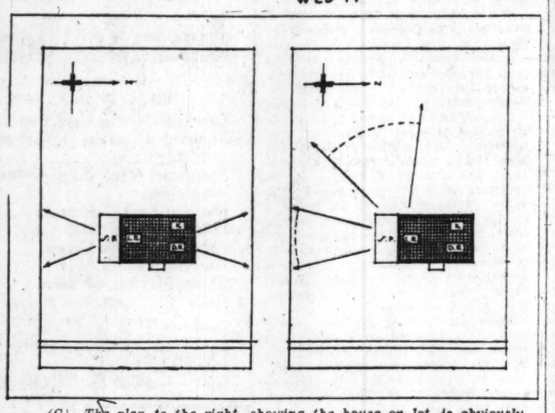
The importance of considering the arrangement of the interior of the house in conjunction with the arrangement of the grounds (no matter how small these last may be) becomes clearly apparent with a few moments' thought. Next follows a study of the points which should influence the course of action of the home builder.



A. PLAN SHOWING ARRANGEMENT OF ROOMS IN HOUSE FACING EAST



B. PLAN SHOWING REARRANGEMENT OF ROOMS FOR SAME HOUSE FACING WEST.



(C)—The plan to the right, showing the house on lot, is obviously more desirable, for there is ample room for a garden and a private lawn area to the south and southwest.

"Suppose our ideal plan (such as plan A) is sketched out, and our lot faces east. The plan is seen to be an ideal one, for we have a southern exposure for sun parlor and living portion of the house, while the kitchen is to the northwest—the least desirable part of our home.

"Let us, in locating our house upon the property, assume that the distance from the street is predetermined—as in many cases with a city lot it is—we then, in this suppositious case, locate our home equidistant from each side of the property, as is often done (C). It can be seen at once that this leaves little space for a garden development in the most desirable place, south of the sun porch, and that there is an equal amount of ground north of the kitchen, where really such ground serves no good purpose at all.

"Obviously, then, a house of this plan would be far better located as close to the property line on the north as is expedient. This arrangement would give us sufficient space for an extension of the sun porch in the form of an attractive out-of-doors living room, as well as ample space for the service portion.

"In contrast to this ideal scheme, let us assume that in working out our house plan we had secured the same arrangement of rooms, but completely reversed, as shown in plan B. Placing this house on the same lot facing east, one can readily see that the scheme would be extremely bad, and that the house, to take the same advantage of the grounds, would have to be placed close to the south of the property rather than to the north, even though such an arrangement would right matters to but a small degree. Thus we see that the plan of the house should be made with the place and the compass in mind, for without such study a desirable solution of the problem of locating the house becomes merely a matter of chance."

In reading over the above it sounds more complicated than it really is. You have two specific things—your lot and the plan of your house. In this case the ground plan of the house consists of a sun parlor which opens into a large living room running the length of the house, then a long hall and across the hall a dining room and a kitchen. Nothing could be less complicated.

To secure the right exposure, plan A could be used on a lot facing north and east, while plan B (to the right above in cut) could be used upon a lot facing south and west. No matter what else you plan on, the living part of the house, the garden, and the lawn areas should be to the south, southeast, and southwest, while the kitchen and service quarters of the house should be towards the north.

If there are attractive views to be secured from your lot, try to plan the location of the house and the arrangement of its interior so as to get the greatest amount of pelasure possible from those views. Windows naturally

LIKE the storm of applause which brings a great artist to the footlights time after time, is the demand for shops that give that little more in value, in style and in service which spells complete satisfaction.

Chicago's Newest Millinery Salon

Foster

obeys that demand and during this, its opening week, bids you welcome and begs the honor of an inspection of its wares.

IT shall be the aim of FOSTER to present Hats of chic individuality and authentic style interpretation at moderate prices—at prices decidedly below those of other exclusive millinery shops.

A Simple Chaplet of Flowers

Once a wreath of flowers was sufficient to express the gladness of feminine hearts—it graced the heads of maidens on festive days, a token that the spirit of joy was the order of the day. It was the simple language of a simpler time.

The Hat—a Modern Growth

Today the Hat for Milady fulfills a complex duty. It must express by its subtle fashioning the spirit of a season, a costume, an event. Its conception has become a work of art, for it is, indeed, an important interpretative item in the modern woman's wardrobe.

ART and ARCHITECTURE

Follow the line of the building or the style of architecture; windows may identify a house to an extraordinary extent or may take from it a great deal of its charm. Be careful of windows, their number and kind.

While it is true that a rise in grade from the street to the house is considered desirable, it is a common fallacy to assume that a house should never be located below the level of the street. This on Mr. Ramsey's authority. Some of the most attractive places have been developed in just such cases of building on lots lower than the street level.

Terraces are always good, or usually good, in an approach to a house located on rising ground. A short flight of steps from the pavement and then a narrow path running to the house are often more charming than a long flight of steps. With steps different effects may be secured by the use of oddly shaped stone, flat slabs, bricks, or even cobble stones.

And with all of this, remember not to crowd your ground too much, not to try to get everything on your place which you may have admired at the homes of various friends. A simple arrangement is better than a complicated one. A garden complex is as unpleasant as a mental complex. Landscaping indigestion is as upsetting as physical indigestion. It is better to keep to the healthy bread-and-butter of trees, open lawn, and a foundation planting of shrubs and vines, than to seek for the French pastry of formal garden and unrelated duck pond or grape arbor.

One of the attractive features in the Chicago architectural exhibit held recently at the Art Institute, was the showing of two panels in a new kind of mosaic which was discovered, or invented one might say, by Prof. Wells of the University of Illinois, and has been developed by Charles Morgan.

Two mosaics were exhibited in the architectural show, each depicting the charm of an English cottage, and neither exemplifying in full the possibilities of the material. These are more forcefully dwelt upon in the portrait of Theodore Roosevelt, which has been placed in the new Roosevelt theater.

This distinct step in advance in the art of interior decorating should be followed by others. Not only is the mosaic decorative, but it is weatherproof and may be used as easily on the outside of a building as on the inside. To test it, Prof. Wells fashioned a mosaic on the wall of his house at the university, and for nine years it remained there, being as perfect and in as excellent condition at the end of that time as when it was first set in place.

For theaters, bank buildings, public institutions, and buildings of all kinds, this American invention in mosaic should be a god-send to the architect or building contractor who wants to make a beautiful building and wonders, perhaps, what, besides plain stone or paint, he could use to best advantage.

How She Deals with a corn

© B & B 1921

Doctors and nurses do not suffer corns.

They do not pare corns, for they know it is dangerous.

They use no treatments harsh and out-of-date.

What they do is this:

At the first sign of a corn they use Blue-jay—the liquid or the plaster.

The corn pain stops. In a little while the whole corn loosens and comes out.

They know that Blue-jay is a scientific treatment. It is gentle, yet sure.

It is made by a surgical dressing house which every doctor knows.

Blue-jay is removing not less than 20 million corns a year.

It is keeping multitudes of people completely free from corns.

The method is right. It is easy. Its results are prompt and pleasant. Watch its action on one corn.

Get it now.

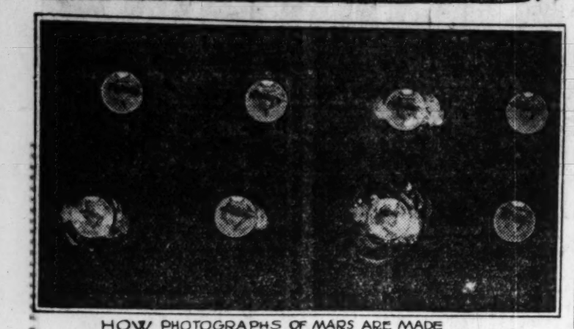
ASTRONOMY



HOW PHOTOGRAPHS OF MARS ARE MADE
A GREAT NUMBER ARE SNAPPED TOGETHER ON ONE PLATE. THE MOST OF THEM WILL BE SPOILED, BUT THERE MAY BE A FEW GOOD ONES LEFT.
BY S. F. MAXWELL

PHOTOGRAPHS OF MARS.

"WHY," a questioner asked me the other day, "is it not practical to take photographs of the canals on Mars, as well as to make drawings of them, and so settle the question of their nature once and for all?"

"I might answer that question," I told him, "by taking you to the big telescope and letting you see for yourself. After what I show you, you will understand why photographs of Mars, while possible, are not so satisfactory as drawings."

Let us enter a huge, black, bare room, surmounted by a great dome, open to the sky. We grope for a moment in the darkness and gradually, by the starlight filtering in through the open shutter, and by tiny electric lamps gleaming on the strategic parts of the mechanism, we see the huge, hulking form of the telescope, standing alone in the center of the room.

An astronomer leads us across the floor and we half grope, half stumble up the high ladder to the observing chair, at the eyepiece. What a surprise it is to see so many wheels, clamps, bolts, and counterweights so entirely subservient to the little eye lens, no larger than one's thumb! But this eye lens is important, its function is to catch the cone of rays gathered by the great object lens in front, and send them in a compact tiny beam into your eye.

We both look in, through the telescope and on to Mars. The planet is a dancing, twisting, glaring dot standing in the darkness, golden yellow in hue, and dazzling in its aspect.

"Is this the famous Mars?" you exclaim. "Is it possible that so many books could be written about so small an object?"

"Yes, but you must have patience. Astronomy is no science for one who lacks the power to take infinite pains. After your eye grows accustomed to the sight, you begin to see details on the tiny ball, the white spot, which is the polar snowcap, appears; then the greenish patches, where plants are growing on the desert, until, after you have watched a long time, you observe such a myriad of detail on that tiny celestial spot that you despair of ever tabulating them all in your mind."

"Why," you ask the astronomer, "does the planet twist and dance and jump so?"

"Oh, that's the air," he says. "We call it the 'seing.' The powerful lenses we are using magnify everything in front of the telescope, Mars, and every puff and tremor of the air between. You have noticed how objects seem to dance over a hot fire. Well, they dance in the telescope for exactly the same reason; the air is disturbing the rays of light. You notice that Mars is never still for more than a fraction of a second at a time, steady, blurred, dancing, steadying, off again, slow now, now steady, blurred once more, in an unending cycle. The air is really very good tonight. At times, when the 'seeing' is bad, Mars resembles nothing so much as an animated fluff of cotton."

"Do you ever photograph Mars?" we ask him.

"Not often. Although such photographs have been made, they are regarded more as scientific curiosities than as useful data. You see, in the first place, the camera plate's grain is much coarser than a human retina. The eye can always see a hundred times as much detail as it is possible to photograph with the same magnification.

"But this is not the worst of the trouble. The eye can piece together the instants of good seeing into a fairly representative memory, made up, perhaps, of thousands of glimpses extending over the whole night, and from this a drawing can be made; but a camera must take the planet as it is the instant the shutter is snapped, and it has no power to separate the good seeing from the bad."

Shoes That Add to Your Vitality

Shoes that bind and distort the feet are a source of constant irritation. They drain your nervous energy, distract your attention, and lessen your ability to concentrate and to work. Such shoes are a drawback to health and success. If you would enjoy the best that life has to offer of buoyant strength and achievement, change to the comfortable, helpful Cantilever Shoe.

It is well built on a last that conforms to the contours of the foot. With the natural inner sole line, the toes point straight ahead and are comfortable; a share of the weight of the body falls easily on the ball of the foot.

The well-set heel encourages good posture, which in turn encourages good health.

The shank of a Cantilever Shoe is drawn up, by lacing the shoe, to fit the instep and provide restful support. And it FLEXES WITH THE FOOT. It does not bind the muscles and impede circulation as a rigid sole does. It strengthens the muscles by allowing them freedom to exercise, thus preventing or correcting weak arches.

Widths from AAAAA to EE.

Send for Cantilever booklet. Mail orders filled.

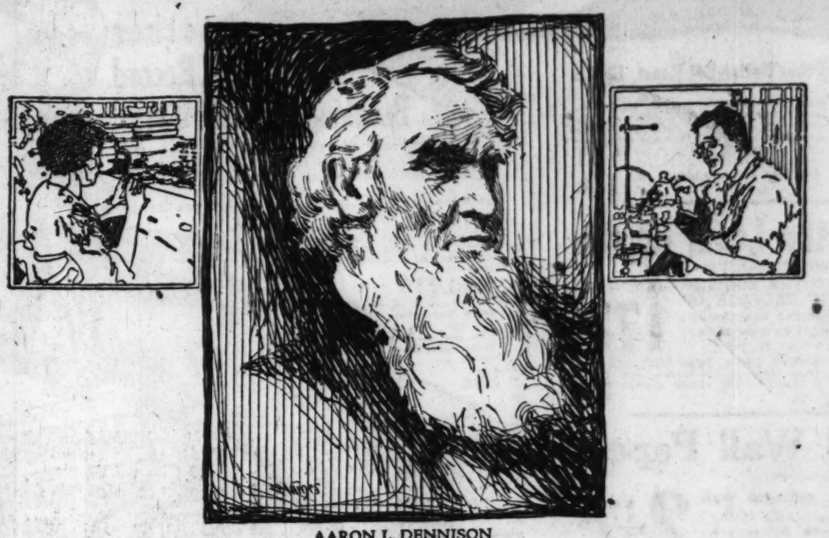
THE SCIENTIFICALLY BUILT WATCH



AARON L. DENNISON

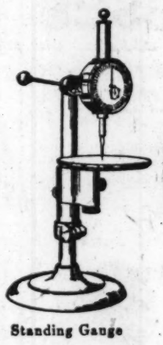
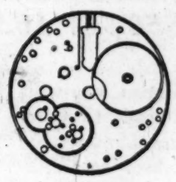
and the Waltham System of Standardization

ACCURACY
The Twelfth Part of a Human Hair as a Standard of Measurement



Standing Gauge



Lower Plate

IMAGINE the twelfth part of a human hair being the difference between Waltham standardized accuracy and the variable guess work in foreign watches.

Waltham produced, by Waltham genius, methods of measurement and gauges to measure so infinitely accurate that the Waltham Watch became and is the most perfectly constructed watch in the world.

If in the lower plate (illustrated) there was a measurable difference between the location of one bearing from another, it would mean irregularity in the time-keeping performance of that watch.

Waltham has so perfected unique gauges and standardized a system of infinitesimal measurement, that such a minute error cannot occur in a Waltham Watch without discovery.

What does this Waltham accuracy and close inspection mean to you?

When you buy a Waltham you possess the world's most accurately made watch. You own a watch that can be readily, and what is most important to you, perfectly and economically repaired — at an upkeep cost at least 50 per cent lower than the repair of foreign made watches whose method of less accurate manufacture has not kept pace with Waltham genius which is American.

That is why we say truthfully — "Waltham placed America first, in watchmaking." This is one more good reason why you should own a Waltham.

Churches Forward National Hospital Day Movement

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

THROUGHOUT the United States the anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale, May 12, is to be celebrated in the 8,000 institutions that care for the sick and injured as National Hospital day, when open house will be kept, and the doctors, superintendents, and nurses will seek to acquaint the general public with the human side of their work.

Because so many of the hospitals in the country were built and are maintained by the churches, it is fitting that Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant hospital executives take a leading part in the supervision of state programs for the observance of National Hospital day and in the organization of the movement as sectional chairmen and members of the national committee.

The idea of a general education program in the hospitals of the Union to be held on May 12, in memory of Florence Nightingale, originated with a Chicagoan, Matthew O. Foley, who from his office at 537 South Dearborn street has directed the organization of National Hospital day in every state. Asa A. Bacon, superintendent of the Presbyterian hospital of Chicago, and Miss Mary C. Wheeler, superintendent of the Illinois Training School for Nurses, are members of the national executive committee, of which Mr. Foley is secretary.

President Harding has written to Mr. Foley: "It is especially a pleasure at this time to express my interest in the work of the National Hospital day, which seeks to arouse the largest possible public interest in the work of the country's hospitals and similar institutions. Just at this time those of us who are concerned in the administration of national affairs are having our attention forced to the great need of expanded hospital facilities by reason of the requirements of disabled soldiers. I can most heartily extend my good wishes for the most useful results from your efforts.

"Very truly yours,
"WARREN G. HARDING."

Surgeon General Cummings of the United States public health service, who has charge of the hospitalization of the 26,000 disabled war veterans, has indorsed the National Hospital day and taken over the suggestions for its observance in the service hospitals all over the country.

The readiness with which the church hospitals have adopted the idea of National Hospital day is having much to do with the anticipated success of this first annual event, which will, no doubt, become a regular day in the national calendar.

One of the traditions of St. Alban's school at Sycamore, Ill., the diocesan school for boys under the patronage of the bishop of Chicago, is the blessing of the farm each year on one of the Rogation days. The service this year will be celebrated on Saturday, May 14. Clergymen and acolytes from Chicago have been invited to attend and take part in the procession. The holy eucharist will be celebrated in the orchard by the headmaster, the Rev. L. B. Hastings, and the sermon will be preached by the Very Rev. Francis S. White, dean of Trinity cathedral, Cleveland, on "The Ministry."

Today at 12:15, Edwin W. Sims, president of the Chicago crime commission, formerly United States district attorney, will address the younger business men's class of Kenwood Evangelical church (interdenominational), 46th street and Greenwood avenue. Mr. Sims will discuss the work of the commission.

The Rev. Charles N. Lathrop, national secretary of the Episcopal church social service commission has received a medal and certificate issued by Le Comité de Secours et d'Alimentation of Belgium for his work as food commissioner of the city of Liége under Herbert C. Hoover, during the German invasion of Belgium. The Rev. Mr. Lathrop was formerly dean of All Saints' Cathedral, Milwaukee, and is a graduate of the Western Theological seminary in Chicago.

The Most Rev. Meletios Metaxakios, metropolitan of Athens and president of the holy synod of the Church of Greece, is celebrating the feast of Easter according to the eastern calendar today with the 30,000 members of the Greek church in Chicago. The archbishop before his election to the metropolitan see of Athens in 1918 was the bishop of Cyprus for eight years, having been elevated to the episcopate from the priesthood in the Jerusalem patriarchate. He is the author of several pamphlets on Christian unity and was editor of the Ecclesiastical Herald in Cyprus and in Athens. Easter services today in the Greek church consist of "matinée and liturgy," celebrated from 12 to 3 o'clock this morning, and "agape" at vespers from 3 to 5 o'clock this afternoon. The archbishop will officiate at St. Constantine's church, 6105 South Michigan avenue, assisted by the pastor, the Rev. Demetry Vainikos. At the other two Greek orthodox churches in Chicago the pastors will celebrate, the Rev. C. H. Demetry at the Church of the Annunciation, 1017 North La Salle street, and the Rev. Leon Pigheas at the Church of the Holy Trinity, 1101 South Peoria street.

The Associated Roman Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Chicago has just finished its third year of efficient service. Organized in March, 1918, to combine all the Roman Catholic charitable activities into one in order that it might be able to render to the poor of the city a higher order of service, it has experienced a remarkable growth in numbers and in achievement. In 1918 the organization had 50,000 subscribers, who contributed a total of $432,266.42; the following year there were 57,000 subscribers with a total subscription of $509,264.54, while last year 62,000 contributors subscribed a total of $517,031.90.

The organization works in two distinct fields of charity: contributing to the support of institutions and doing relief work in homes. The institutions, numbering over twenty-five, which it helps to maintain include infant asylums, orphanages, and training schools, homes for the friendless, refuges, shelters, social centers, homes for the aged, schools for the deaf, boarding homes for girls, maternity hospitals, employment bureaus, child placing agencies, and day nurseries. Last year the charities contributed over $260,000 to the support of these institutions.

In addition to the work done in institutions thousands of poor families are cared for in their homes. Much of this work is done through the volunteer workers of the St. Vincent de Paul society, while some of it is carried on through the Central Charity bureau at 126 North Desplaines street. With the increase in funds and subscribers the organization has enlarged upon the work done in homes each year. In 1918 2,461 families were helped 12,564 times. In 1919 4,314 families were helped 36,374 times. In 1920 4,500 families were helped 12,564 times. A total of $265,000 was devoted to relief work in the homes during the last year.

A survey of the causes of dependency shows the following: Two hundred and ninety-two families, permanent physical disability of one or both parents; 254 families, tuberculosis; 136 families, insufficient earnings; 133 families, old age; 126 families, insanity; 65 families, imprisonment; 36 families, blindness, and 49 families, accidents.

Chicago will be the mecca of the Methodist Episcopal church next week when important administration committees will meet. The administration committee of the committee on conservation and advance will meet tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the headquarters, 740 Rush street. Bishop Thomas Nicholson will preside and Dr. C. E. Guthrie of Chicago is secretary of this committee. Tomorrow evening a meeting pertaining to the program of the committee on conservation and advance will be held at headquarters, at which time the corresponding secretaries of the general boards of the church will be present.

Among the secretaries are Dr. Frank Mason North, New York, board of foreign missions; Dr. D. B. Forsyth, Philadelphia, board of home missions and church extension; Dr. W. S. Bovard, Chicago, board of Sunday schools; the Rev. Clarence True Wilson, Washington, D. C., board of temperance, prohibition, and public morals; Dr. I. Garland Penn, Cincinnati, board of Negro education; the Rev. Daniel W. Howell, Buffalo, general deaconess board; Dr. William I. Haven, New York, American Bible society; Dr. N. E. Davis, board of hospitals and homes; Dr. Charles E. Guthrie, Chicago, Epworth league, and Dr. A. W. Harris, New York, board of education.

This meeting of secretaries is to plan the program for the committee on conservation and advance for the ensuing church year. These secretaries represent practically all the missionary and benevolent interests of the church.

The committee on conservation and advance will convene on Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock in the auditorium of the Methodist Book concern, 740 Rush street, Bishop Thomas Nicholson presiding. Dr. R. J. Wade, corresponding secretary, and Dr. Morris W. Ehnes, treasurer, will make brief addresses. The committee will be in session throughout the day and evening. The Wednesday sessions of the meeting will be held in the auditorium.

Four bishops will take a prominent part in these meetings, including Bishops Thomas Nicholson of Chicago, F. D. Leete of Indianapolis, Homer C. Stuntz of Omaha, and Theodore S. Henderson of Detroit.

"Choose your life task early, wisely, and well," will be the charge of 10,000 Presbyterian pastors to the young people of their congregations today when Vocation day is celebrated in every Presbyterian church.

Opportunities for Christian service in the ministry and in Presbyterian mission fields will be stressed; but the claims of service in professions such as law, teaching, engineering, medicine, transportation and farming will not be underestimated. Each young person will be urged to decide definitely on a life task and train for that task.

Observance of Vocation day has been directed by the Presbyterian general assembly with special instructions that "the Christian principle of life enlistment be emphasized and the call to the ministry, missions, and other forms of Christian service definitely presented both to young people and to their parents."

University of Wisconsin alumni in Chicago will pay tribute to the oldest living graduate of their alma mater, the Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows, D. D., this morning by attending a special service held in his honor at St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal church, Adams and Winchester streets. Bishop Fallows will preach on "Rational Optimism" at 11 o'clock in St. Paul's church, one block east of Robey street, reached either by Adams or Madison street cars. Bishop Fallows is the only living member of the class of 1859, and the oldest alumnus of the 17,000 graduates of the University of Wisconsin, who has approximately 800 alumni in the city of Chicago.

Dr. Theodore G. Soares professor of practical theology at the University of Chicago will give a series of talks at the 7 o'clock meeting of the Sunday Evening club on the general subject, "Why They Told the Bible Stories." His subject tonight will be "The Typical Jew." On the Sundays following he will speak on "The Unseen Providence," "The Founding of the Nation," and "The God of Battles."

Dr. Harry Emmerson Fosdick, professor of practical theology, Union Theological seminary, New York City, since 1915, will speak this evening on "The Interpretation of Life." A year ago Dr. Fosdick was made preacher of a combination of three of the long established Presbyterian churches of New York City, representing the oldest and wealthiest families of Manhattan. He is a speaker of unusual power, and a favorite lecturer at Yale, Cornell, Princeton, and other colleges.

Miss Frances Anne Cook will play the third of a series of organ recitals Tuesday evening at 8:15 o'clock at the Hyde Park Baptist church, assisted by John Patterson, tenor, and the choir of the church, under the direction of Frank Parker. The church is on Woodlawn avenue, at 56th street.

Lena Leonard Fisher, sister of Bishop Leonard, will tell of her six months' tour of the missions of the orient this morning at 10:30 o'clock at the Austin Methodist church, Central and Race avenues. The occasion is the annual thanks offering service of the church, of which the Rev. Dr. J. S. Ladd Thomas is pastor.

FARM AND GARDEN

Amateur Flower Gardener Is Wise to Plant Annuals

By Frank Ridgway.

ANNUAL flowers occupy the center of the floral stage around May the first, the celebrated moving day, with members of that great army of transients who break camp to pitch their tents on new grounds. The annual fits into the schedule of the tenant, who contracts with the rental agency on the yearly basis just as well as it does with the man who owns a cottage in the suburb, because the plants bloom the same year the seeds are sown.

Every family, tribe, club, or clan can grow annuals. You do not need to know the scientific language of the flower to be successful. Beautiful assortments of these flowers may be grown in pots and boxes on the porch and in beds on the lawn or in the garden. Annuals may be attractively blended with the green plants in the vegetable gardens and the shrubbery and perennials on the lawn. Driveways, walks, and lawns may be effectively bordered with these flowers.

Formal space between a drive and groups of trees may be filled with annuals. There is a place for the annual in or around the house of practically every city home from the congested apartment district, where it is often necessary to use small containers in windows and on porch ledges, to the sparsely populated suburb, where there is room for extensive planting.

Simple Designs for Beginner.

The annual is becoming so generally appreciated that it is a strong competitor of the rose, and the carnation, and other cut flowers with reputations established years ago. Some of the most showy flowers are found among the annuals and they are the easiest and cheapest to grow. Many of them are dwarfs while others grow tall, and by taking advantage of the difference in the size of the plants the seed may be planted so that effective gradations may be made. To do this it is necessary to know about how high the plants normally grow.

The size, shape, and color of blossoms are all factors that must be taken into consideration in the selection and arrangement of the different kinds of plants if the handsomest effects are to be produced. The beginner will avoid disappointments by adhering to simple designs regardless of the amount of space that may be available. Avoid complex designs at least for the first year. Study the flowers you grow each year, add a few new varieties from time to time, and where space will permit try out new ways of arranging the plants, taking advantage of the different colors, using the tallest plants to form the background.

Dark Background Best.

Work out combinations that will give contrast. The blossoms always show up best where they are given a dark background. This fact can be often taken advantage of at planting time by using the shrubbery on the lawn with its dark green foliage as a background to make the blossoms stand out like bright spots of light. The ragged edges of a driveway can be tinted with bright colored annuals. This plan is especially effective where the shrubs do not crowd too close to the border.

In back yards and even on the front lawn there are unsightly objects that may be covered up with some of the twining and climbing varieties. Dingy fences may be covered with vines. There is color, form, and foliage to meet every need and desire in both the summer and autumn annuals.

The grower does not need to be familiar with the botanist's technical phrases and clauses of the anthers, pistils, and stamens to be successful in the growing of annual flowers. The best way is to start by using a carefully assorted variety of common annuals that has been thoroughly tested. The old fashioned varieties that have been grown in the community for years give satisfaction to the beginner and encourage him to dig up the flower bed and plant new seed every year.

Facts for the Amateur.

The accompanying table gives a list of the different kinds of flowers that have stood the acid test even in the hands of the unskilled gardeners. If the tabulated facts are followed carefully by the amateur the seed may be planted with some knowledge of what is to be expected at blooming time.

A general idea of the length of the blooming period, the height of the plant, the color of the blossom, and the time of planting has been worked out in this table, which will serve as a guide. The length of the blooming period and the growth of the plant will naturally be affected by the soil, and the attention given in cultivating and watering the plants will have much to do with the quality of the bloom. Under average conditions the flowers listed may be expected to do fairly well where the warm growing season is of reasonable length. Practically all of these flowers are hardy enough to be planted outdoors as soon as the ground is warm enough to plant vegetable garden seed in the open.

ASTER—Tomorrow is the day to plant asters. Sow seed or set out aster plants now and you will have rich blossoms of white or shades of red and purple in August and September after the midsummer blooms are gone.

All of these flowers can be started readily from seed in the spring, and will blossom or give satisfactory foliage within a single season. There are flowers in the long list of annuals that are adapted to all kinds of soils—wet, dry, poor, and rich.

Phlox Are Colorful.

The phlox is an annual that came out of Texas waving all of the colors of the American flag, and if carefully cared for it may be grown in a variety of places. The phlox is sometimes criticized because of its short blooming season, but this can be extended by pinching off the seed clusters when the flowers begin to fade.

The old fashioned four o'clocks have made time count for themselves during the last few years. They have constantly reminded the grower of their presence by holding out their hands to brush boot tops, since the landscape designers discovered that they make ideal low hedges along the walks.

The hieroglyphics of the China aster puzzled green house men for many years when they attempted to grow the plant and have it bloom early or late enough to dodge the beetles that come along every year to devour the flower. They finally solved the mystery, translated the symbols. Now the seed is sown extremely early indoors, plants are transplanted when it gets warm, or the seeding is delayed in order that the blossoms will come out in September and October [thus avoiding the invasion of the beetle army in the summer], which has made the China aster one of the most, if not the most popular hardy annual.

Plenty of Moisture.

There are many good things that old time flower fanciers have to say about every flower listed, and it is for this reason that they were left without a scratch when this list was made up.

Quick growth is the fundamental prerequisite of the annuals because where they are started from seed, the time is comparatively short for them to produce a plant and blossom all in one season. Therefore, good soil, plenty of moisture, light, and air are necessary with most of these plants if they are to produce rich colored blooms.

The experienced flower grower often finds there is a great difference in the requirements of the plants, especially as to the kind of soil, but in general it is safe to use a light, rich, loam garden soil. An application of well rotted manure will always pay where the soil is sandy, because annual flower plants must have an abundance of moisture, though they are particular about having their "feet" too wet. This means that there must be plenty of moisture in a rich soil well drained.

Most Annuals Like Sun.

The best place for such plants as pansies and forget-me-nots is near a fence, shrubs, or under a tree where the bed will be in the shade about one-half of the day. On the other hand, most of the annuals like sunshine throughout the entire day.

Almost every beginner has trouble in getting the plants to grow rapidly where they are planted along the border of the lawn. They find that the plants in the center of the bed thrive and bloom early, while those near the border of the sod become dwarfed. This is due to the fact that the grass roots take up most of the available plant food and moisture. This can be avoided by cutting the grass roots off around the border with a long bladed spade forced straight down to a depth of at least twelve inches when the seeds are sown, and repeated about every two or three weeks.

The simple rule of drilling the seeds in carefully marked miniature furrows in the open ground and covering them with fine dirt to a depth of four times the thickness of the seed is followed by most flower growers. Avoid having the ground too wet at the time of seeding.

To keep the plants blooming do not allow them to go to seed. Frequent cutting of the blossoms of many of the annuals prolongs the blooming season.

WILL RADIUM AT LAST OPEN THE DOOR OF THE GREAT UNKNOWN

If you are sick and want to Get Well and Keep Well, write for literature that tells How and Why this almost unknown and wonderful new element brings relief to so many sufferers from Constipation, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout, Neuritis, Neuralgia, Nervous Prostration, High Blood Pressure and diseases of the Stomach, Heart, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys and other ailments. You wear Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad day and night, receiving the Radio-Active Rays continuously into your system, causing a healthy circulation, overcoming sluggishness, throwing off impurities and restoring the tissues and nerves to a normal condition—and the next thing you know you are getting well.

Sold on a test proposition. You are thoroughly satisfied it is helping you before the appliance is yours. Nothing to do but wear it. No trouble or expense, and the most wonderful fact about the appliance is that it is sold so reasonable that it is within the reach of all, both rich and poor.

No matter how bad your ailment, or how long standing, we will be pleased to have you try it at our risk. For full information write today—not tomorrow. Radium Appliance Co., 150 Bradbury Bldg., Los Angeles, Calif.

"Miss Dutton Invites You" to an Anniversary Week Celebration

Today—May the first—marks the tenth anniversary of Miss Dutton's entry into the cafeteria field, so she has planned the following famous Miss Dutton Specials for every day of the week:

MONDAY

Pot Roast and Noodles, with plenty of rich brown gravy—the kind with the home-made flavor—only thirty cents a portion.

TUESDAY

Fricassee of Chicken, with hot baking powder biscuit and real chicken gravy—the kind you used to have for Sunday dinner when you were a youngster—for thirty-five cents.

WEDNESDAY

Genuine Chop Suey, with steamed rice—made of the freshest and best ingredients—a generous serving for only thirty cents.

THURSDAY

Baked Ham! Swift's Premium—done to a turn—spicy and sugary on the outside—juicy and full of flavor on the inside—only thirty cents for a generous helping.

FRIDAY

is Fish Day. The finest fresh fish obtainable—baked, fried or steamed—twenty-five cents a service. And you know what good Tartare Sauce Miss Dutton makes to go with the fish!

SATURDAY

Last but not least comes Fried Milk-Fed Chicken—cooked as only Miss Dutton knows how—for only forty cents!

And these are only the luncheon and dinner specials. Every day of the week there is Roast Beef—the choicest No. 1 ribs on the market—at thirty cents a cut. Fresh new vegetables—potatoes in many appetizing ways—dozens of delightful salads—desserts to suit every taste—all generous servings at the same moderate rate. And Coffee—famous Savoy Coffee—two large cupfuls, served in a silver pot with two pitchers of real cream—only seven cents!

Serving twenty million people in ten years has taught Miss Dutton what foods most appeal to discriminating people, and she wishes to express her appreciation and gratitude for the patronage of those who have made it possible for her to build her business to its present proportions. Breakfast at Miss Dutton's is always an event—there are just as many delightful specials—and one may always find exactly the food to suit his taste.

Continuous Service—Seven A. M. Until Seven-thirty P. M.

ONTRA CAFETERIA

ONTRA CAFETERIA COMPANY
231 SOUTH WABASH AVENUE
CHICAGO

April 20th, 1921.

Mr. Russell J. Poole,
Secretary of High Cost of Living Committee,
City Hall
Chicago.

Dear Sir:

We are glad to comply with your request, to the restaurant people for a statement of monthly food costs.

In March our food cost was 41.19% of the receipts, or 1.19% lower in gross operating profit than you are asking of restaurants.

The business of the Ontra Cafeteria has been built on the policy of furnishing the very best food at moderate prices. We buy on bargains and use no substitutes.

Our net profit during the past three years as audited, checked and approved by Federal and State was one cent per meal served.

We are taking advantage of every cut in food costs by increasing portions and reducing prices, but our standard of quality will be rigidly maintained.

We heartily commend the good work you are doing and you may count on us to give our full cooperation.

Very truly
ONTRA CAFETERIA.

Miss Mary L. Dutton,
Ontra Cafeteria Company,
231 S. Wabash Av., Chicago.

My dear Miss Dutton:

Your favor of April 13th at hand and note your figures, for which I thank you very kindly.

I thoroughly agree with you in your idea in building the business of the Ontra Cafeterias on the policy of furnishing the very best food at moderate prices, and not buying bargains and using substitutes.

From your figures I am satisfied you are justly entitled to the profit that your books show and I am glad to know, and feel that you are taking advantage of every cut in the food cost that you are asking of restaurants.

I can honestly thank you for co-operating with this Committee, and I want to say that we appreciate it, and am glad I have of the Ontra Cafeteria has convinced us that you are serving the very best of foods in a palatable, clean way, giving fair sized portions and charging fair prices.

Thanking you for your friendly attitude and co-operation, I am

Respectfully,

Russell J. Poole
Secretary.

TO RENT—SUMMER RESORTS.

RESORT TO RENT

A RESORT located on a fine lake in northern Wisconsin is for rent to a reliable party who is capable of catering to the most exclusive. The surroundings appeal to the most particular and the improvements are attractively painted in colorings that blend with beautiful Nature herself. The resort is within a short distance of many other beautiful lakes of exceptionally fine bass fishing. Is within a few minutes' walk of the finest trout streams in the country. Partridge, prairie chickens, and duck abundant. Deer and black bear plentiful. Excellent auto roads and beautiful drives. Is located in one of the most wild berry sections in the state. The main building consists of large, attractive rooms and is beautifully furnished with mahogany furniture, rugs, and lamps. Has large screened porches, including glassed sun porch with fireplace. Can well be called A PALACE IN THE WOODS. Elegant poultry house, chickens, etc. Tennis courts, croquet grounds, bath-ng, and rowboats. Fine cow pasture. Just an overnight run on the C. & N. W. Ice and wood fuel on hand for this season. This is an exceptional opportunity for any one who is a good cook and capable of managing. Will make $ yr. lease to right party. Rental $5000 a year. Occupant must be able to invest $3,000 as security in personal furnishings. Owner will call on other business. Give phone number if any. Don't reply unless you mean business. For further particulars address L J 12, Tribune.

AUTOMOBILES—GASOLINE.

1920 Automobiles Only

The popularity of the ELGIN SIX Sedan and Coupe has caused a large number of ELGIN owners to trade in their 1920 cars for this new closed model. We have a few exceptionally high class Elgin Six cars that have been driven between two and four thousand miles, thoroughly GUARANTEED, and are in every respect equally as good as new cars.

The ELGIN SIX will give you 15 to 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline. They are equipped with that famous valve-in-head motor which has made the ELGIN SIX the sensation of Chicago. They have the ten-inch Borg & Beck clutch that is used only on the higher priced cars. There is no need to mention the qualities of the large size Columbia axles, as they are known the world over.

If you are contemplating investing between $1,200 and $1,400 in a new automobile, we positively know you will make a better purchase by buying one of these GUARANTEED 1920 ELGIN SIXES at a remarkable saving.

Every car has been thoroughly gone over in our shops, refinished, and in such shape that we can safely guarantee and stand back of it.

Following you will find a list of some of these bargains:

1920 Elgin Touring, run less than 2,000 miles. This car is equipped with all good tires and one extra, also a bumper, motometer, full kit of tools, jack, and pump $1,850

1920 Elgin Scout Model. Refinished Packard blue; has three new tires and one extra, disc wheels, motometer, and neuterlock $1,375

1920 Elgin Touring; refinished two color brown; equipped with motometer, neuterlock, spare tire, bumper, and California sides $1,375

1920 Elgin Standard Touring Car. Has all good tires, one extra, and motor has been inclosed; has bullet lights; car painted a beautiful maroon; also equiped with motometer, bumper, and neuterlock $1,425

1920 Elgin Touring, refinished in a beautiful gray; has aluminum floor boards & running boards, inclosed motor, bullet lights, motometer, bumper, new spare tire and tire cover; is impossible to tell this car from a new one $1,450

1920 Four Passenger, Scout Model. Refinished in maroon with black fenders, equipped with bumper, motometer, and spare tire, also has motor enclosed. An exceptionally good buy for.....$1,350

1920 Elgin Sedan, run very little, refinished in a dark maroon, has nickel plated radiator and lamps, equipped with bumper, motometer, four Cord tires and one extra. This is the best looking light six seen in Chicago.....$1,975

We have an easy time payment plan whereby you can purchase one of these cars with a small down payment and the balance monthly; or if you desire you can trade in your used car, which will be considered as cash, and the balance can be paid monthly.

Open all day Sunday, also evenings.

CADILLAC'S 7 BARGAINS

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, SUBURBAN SEDAN. This is the latest and current series. Delivered new today, would cost over $5,700. This car has had but very little mileage and does not look like a used car. Is equipped with a set of Royal cord tires that show practically no wear, one extra, bumper, etc. Upholstered in beautiful velour. This car is guaranteed by us. Here is an opportunity to save some money on a Cadillac car that is nearly new. Special for this sale, $4,750.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, VICTORIA COUPE. This car is upholstered in velour. Equipped with 5 new cord tires and 5 wire wheels. Just been refinished standard Cadillac blue. Has Westinghouse shock absorbers, bumper, clock, and special nickel plated radiator. It is as pretty a one as we have ever offered—and one that you will like. It is a standard make with up to date lines and good appearance. We believe this to be the best value that we have had to offer for some time in a Cadillac Coupe. Special for this sale, $3,000.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, TOURING CAR. This car is painted a dark Cadillac blue and the paint is in excellent condition. Mechanical condition is exceptionally fine and guaranteed. Upholstering and top look like new. Equipped with an excellent set of tires, one extra bumper, etc. The owner of this car has not driven it a great many miles; in fact, it has not had the usual mileage of a car of this series, and to come and see this car he will have the advantage of a carefully driven, well lubricated car with a remarkably low mileage. Surely we have the opportunity to offer such a car. Special for this sale, $2,350.

FRANKLIN TOURING CAR, 1920. This we believe to be the best Franklin touring car we have ever offered. Has an excellent set of Goodyear cord tires, 5 wire wheels and one extra tire. Mechanical condition of this car is excellent and will bear most rigid examination and demonstration. Upholstering is in exceptionally fine shape. Top and paint exceptionally good. The owner of this car has availed himself of the Franklin service and has kept this car in very fine condition. If you are looking for a slightly used automobile that has not been abused and is practically as good as new this car will please you. Price, $2,000.

PAIGE TOURING CAR. This is model 6-42, 1920, 5 passenger touring car. Probably the most popular model ever made by that company because it is equipped with a very economical 6 cylinder motor and small tires, and for that reason the expense of operation is very little. Equipped with a set of Goodrich tires and one extra. Paint and upholstering exceptionally fine. Mechanical condition very good. Original owner has given it good care. Also equipped with a set of winter glass sides. The mileage is very low. Here is a real bargain in a light 5 passenger touring car at $1,500.

NASH SPORT MODEL, 1921. This is a practically new car, in fact you could not tell it from one. Has run less than 400 miles. Painted a special color of green, with not a scratch on it. Equipped with 5 white wire wheels, road scene mirror, 5 excellent cord tires like new, seat covers, wind shield wings, motometer, bumper and gear shift lock. Has special nickel plated lamps and radiator. We will probably never have another opportunity of offering a nearly new car of this popular make at such a low figure. Special for this sale, $2,000.

SCRIPPS-BOOTH TOURING CAR. This 1919 light 6 passenger 6 cylinder touring car will sell quickly because of the fact that the upkeep will be very small and its mechanical condition is exceptionally good. Has a good set of tires, one extra, bumper, and clock. We believe this bargain to be the lowest priced of any high grade touring car offered today. Price, $650.

Used Buicks on Trial

TAKE THEM OUT FOR ONE WEEK, GIVE THEM ANY TEST YOU WISH. IF YOU ARE NOT SATISFIED, COME BACK AND GET YOUR MONEY.

We have sold a great many Buicks in the last month under this guarantee. They have all stayed sold.

It is a safe guarantee on a Buick, because a Buick is built right in the first place.

The whole world knows that a Buick will go out and travel more miles with less attention, and keep running, than almost any car built, regardless of price.

That's why we buy them, trade for them, and sell them to you on trial. We also give a service guarantee same as we give on the new ones.

CLOTHING, FURS, ETC.

Real Facts About Buying Fur Bargains for Cash.

A retail store such as ours, which conducts its business on a cash basis, gives the best values, because of the following facts. Read them over and think about them:

1. The cash store sells for cash, and therefore always has ready money to buy wholesale for cash. In this way the wholesale price paid by the cash store is considerably lower. For example, during the recent money stringency among fur wholesalers in New York the Resale Shop picked up vast amounts of first quality merchandise wholly because we had the ready cash to give for it.

2. The cash store has no heavy bookkeeping charges or credit losses to add to the price of the merchandise.

For the two reasons given above, the Resale Shop buys at a lower wholesale cost and sells with a lower overhead charge. Our overhead is still lower on account of the low rent we pay. All these things are factors entering into the retail price you pay. These are the reasons why the Resale Shop has consistently undersold all other Chicago stores for years. These are the reasons why we have done a larger volume of fur business than any other store of our size in Chicago.

The Resale Shop handles bargains for cash, and bargains in first quality furs in our specialty. We have furs made in our own factory, and a written guarantee goes with every purchase. We do not handle poor quality furs nor furs that have been worn. We resell manufacturers' samples, which are always of the best quality and fully guaranteed.

BOURBON TO BON BONS EASY FOR DAD DEARBORN

He Eats More Sweets and Candy Shops Grow.

BY AL CHASE.

When our late lamented live wire, Dad Barleycorn, was laid away a little more than a year ago, a few wise ones predicted old Dad Dearborn would switch from bourbon to bonbons with such ease that no one would notice it. But hardly any one foresaw what a glutton for sweets the old gentleman would become. Those who knew my his rival in the east, old Father Knickerbocker, hasn't anything on him when it comes to tucking his tummy full of candy.

Anyway, candy shops have multiplied to such an extent in the loop that they're pretty nearly as thick as inns in the days of old. Chain stores especially have developed.

One of the youngest of the new Chicago candy organizations, and one which attracted considerable attention because of its centering the field at prices considerably below its rivals, is the Fannie May Candy shops.

Fannie Makes a Quiet Entrance.

Fannie slid into the loop quietly in March, 1920, and opened a shop at 11 North La Salle street. The modest announcement in the window that all candies were sold at 70 cents a pound attracted the confectionery fans who were then paying from 90 cents to $2 a pound. It also attracted the attention of other loop candy makers and started a price slashing which is still ringing results.

It didn't take the public long to make another Fannie May shop necessary and the store at 32 West Monroe street was leased from D. F. Crilly for ten years at a term rental of $100,000. It was opened in October, 1920.

Yesterday it was announced that increased sales had decided the Fannie May concern that further expansion was necessary, and the shop at 17 East Jackson boulevard, just east of Rothschild's entrance, has been leased through E. F. Keebler & Co., from Rothschild & Co., for five years from today, at a term rental of $37,500. The store is 16x30.

Invades Wilson Avenue District.

At the same time the store at 1004 Wilson avenue, just west of Sheridan road, was leased for the same period at $9,000 for the term. The owner is Frank Cuneo. H. O. Stone & Co. represented him. The shop is 15x60.

The third and largest of the trio of yesterday's deals by Keebler & Co. was the lease for five years from today of the entire five story building at 11 North La Salle street, where the first shop was started on the ground floor, at a term rental of $65,000. E. F. Gorton represented the owner, Howard B. Tuttle. The building is 24x90. It was once the home of Fred Hoffman's bar and political hangout.

"Well, Who Is Fannie?"

And now you'll ask, of course, "who is Fannie May, anyway? Is there any such person?" That's what we asked R. Teller Archibald, reporter for several years on the old Chicago Record, after its Washington correspondent under the late William E. Curtis, and now owner of the Fannie May shops.

"There was an old friend of my mother's who lived during the 70's between Alexandria and Fairfax Courthouse, in Virginia," he said, "who was famous for her home made candies. My brother, C. C. Archibald, decided to use her name when he opened a chain of candy stores in Washington, Baltimore and Frederick, Md. I secured the right to the name for Illinois, when I decided to start here.

Has An Eye on Boul. Mich.

"I've been more than successful in the loop with reasonably priced candies made of the best materials I can buy, and I'm going to try the outlying district with my Wilson avenue shop. If it goes over, I'll probably open other neighborhood stores. I plan several more in the loop, especially one on Michigan avenue."

Part of the La Salle street building not leased already is used for the immaculate Fannie May candy kitchens, and later the entire four upper floors will be devoted to satisfying Dad Dearborn's sweet tooth. And that looks like some job.

May Movings

Lloyd M. Landeker, specialist in chain store leasing, has removed his offices to the Hartford building.

The Lake View Real Estate exchange is now on the fourth floor of the building at the northwest corner of Washington and Dearborn. The firm is a copartnership of James M. Kennedy and Otto von Rautenkranz, established in 1918 at 3206 Sheffield avenue. In 1915 they moved to the Title and Trust building.

I. R. Reninger, manager of the sales department for Whiteside & Wentworth at 1004 Wilson avenue for the last three years, is going in business for himself at 19 South La Salle street. E. C. Stone will succeed him.

Andrew G. Halas, who has been with H. O. Stone & Co. for six years, announces that he has become a partner in the firm of B. E. Halas & Co., 4721 North Racine avenue.

Frank K. Reilly & Co. have moved into their new north side offices at 4835 Broadway.

ARCHITECTS Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton have drawn plans for the new Olivet institute group, to have a frontage on Blackhawk street of 264 feet. Only five of the nine buildings planned will be built at first. When completed the administration department will be in the front one and a half story section and tower. The chapel will be in the center, back of the tower. Vocational training schools will be in the two front wings. A gymnasium, swimming tank, and other recreational features for boys and girls will be in the rear section. There will be banquet halls, etc., back of the chapel.

ARCHITECTS KEEP ON FLOCKING TO UPPER MICHIGAN AVE. ZONE

ARCHITECTS continue deserting the loop with its dirt and din for the calm and cleanliness of the upper Michigan avenue district. Ivar Viehe-Naess announces that he has formed a co-partnership with Walter G. Kohfeldt under the name of Ivar Viehe-Naess & Co., architects, and has moved from the Steinway building, 64 East Van Buren street, to a suite in the new Wrigley building. Their new phone number is Randolph 3228.

Other deserters from the Steinway building are Architect Orlando Van Gunten and Elmer Carlson, interior designer, who are moving to room 300 in the Bush Temple building, Clark and Chicago avenue.

A third firm to announce the near north side as its moving day terminus is Glaver & Dinkelberg, engineers and architects, who have shifted their headquarters from 80 East Jackson boulevard to suite 500-504 Wrigley building. Their new phone is Randolph 3229.

One architectural and engineering firm in the May 1 moving list remains in the loop. Dubin & Eisenberg have moved their offices from the City Hall Square building to larger quarters in the Browning building, 14 West Washington street. Their phone is the same.

John A. Lindstrand and Albert M. Ruttenberg have been admitted to the Illinois Society of Architects.

Thomas Tallmadge of Tallmadge & Watson is touring Spain.

SEEK $100,000 FUND FOR ENTERTAINMENT AT BIG REALTY MEET

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars is the sum named by Ivan O. Ackley, general chairman of the convention committee of the Chicago Real Estate Board, as the amount needed to properly entertain the 10,000 visitors expected to visit the national convention of real estate boards of the United States and Canada at the Auditorium next July.

The local board has selected Charles M. Nichols chairman and John R. Magill vice chairman of a finance committee to raise the necessary funds.

"Chicago realtors for the last fourteen years have been royally entertained at national conventions in other cities," said Mr. Nichols. "Now it's up to Chicago to return these many courtesies extended by sister cities and at the same time show the thousands of property owners and business men from all over North America who will visit us in July what Chicago really is and what it has to offer in both business and pleasure.

"All this, of course, will cost money, but in boosting Chicago before perhaps 10,000 prospective investors, it'll be worth all it costs."

New South Side Business College to Cost $250,000

Work has just started on the first three floors of what ultimately will be a five story building at 735-41 Englewood avenue, just east of Halsted street and a block from Sixty-third street, by the Englewood Business college, now at 6233 South Halsted street. Architects Worthmann & Steinbach have drawn plans for a $250,000 structure. The building will be 80x125. The college will use two floors at present, and the balance of the space will be given over to an auditorium, a café, and offices.

$100,000 Church Planned for Rogers Park District

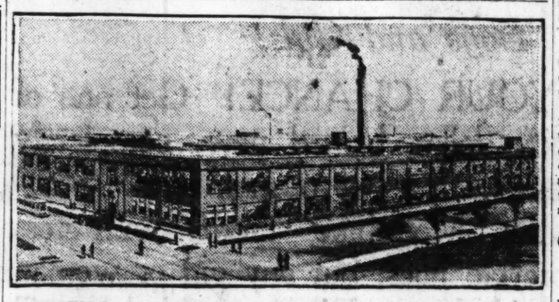
The Catholic bishop of Chicago has bought 400 feet frontage on the north side of Chase avenue, between Barton avenue and Ellwood street, and a depth of 142 feet, from Elsye M. S. Johnson and others for $23,500. A $100,000 church, parish house, and school is planned to care for the newly formed St. Marguerite Mary parish.

80 Acres North of Edison Park to Be Subdivided

Eighty acres just north of Edison Park and east of Park Ridge on the Park Ridge road, west of Harlem avenue, have been bought by Thomas H. Hulbert from Edgar H. Tharp for an indicated $38,250, subject to $24,750. Mr. Hulbert will subdivide as soon as possible.

SWEDISH OLD PEOPLE'S HOME BUYS.

The Swedish Societies' Old People's Home association has added to its holdings at Colfax street and McDaniel avenue, Evanston, with the purchase of 310x150 from Walter M. Mitchell for $14,500. This ultimately will be the site of a large group of buildings.



THIS is one of the two structures mentioned in an adjoining story about fast building. It is the plant of the Floyd Manufacturing company at the northwest corner of Diversey and North Harding avenues, and was entirely completed, with all equipment in, in thirty working days. It is 250x120. It was erected under the supervision of Architect Paul Gerhardt.

Beg Your Pardon

In this department last Sunday in telling about the Mutual Home building corporation's house program it was mentioned that the Madison and Kedzie State bank is guaranteeing both contractor and the tenant that the plan will be carried out as specified. This is incorrect. The building corporation guarantees to place all funds received in a special fund in the bank mentioned to guarantee the builder his money and the tenant his home.

Dorr E. Felt calls attention to the fact that Hall & Ellis did not represent him in the recent E. B. Millar & Co. deal, Roscoe L. Roberts was his attorney.

FINISH HOTEL IN FAST TIME.

It's too bad Andy Gump got that bungalow, for last night his best friend, Sidney Smith, together with M. A. Howell and Harold D. Huszagh, opened the new Ainslie hotel, at Winthrop and Ainslie. According to Mr. Howell, the building was put up in record time—just four months. All of the fifty-seven apartments are rented. The owners and building superintendents celebrated the formal opening with a dinner last night.

$250,000 Artificial Ice Factory for Hyde Park

Work is now under way on a $250,000 artificial ice plant in Lake Park avenue, 146 feet north of 56th street, extending about 250 feet through to Harper avenue, with a frontage on the two streets of 77 feet each. The Hyde Park Ice company, a newly formed concern, has taken title to the site from Frank T. Anderson, its president, for an indicated $30,000 subject to $10,000. Draper & Kramer were brokers.

The plant will be in operation about July 1 and will have a daily capacity of 200 tons. Additional property has been purchased and ultimately an ice cream factory will be built adjoining.

Equipment Corporation Buys 10 Acres in Maywood

Maywood, fast becoming one of Chicago's industrial suburbs, has secured another big industry. The Equipment Corporation of America has bought a ten acre tract northwest of the intersection of the Great Western and Outer Belt tracks. Walter V. Peck was broker. On this a $200,000 plant for the rebuilding of contractors' equipment will be erected. According to President H. M. Capron, the corporation will then have five plants.

ERECT TWO BIG BUILDINGS IN RECORD TIME

One Factory Finished in 30 Working Days.

Has labor efficiency been increasing during the last few months? This question, so often asked, is answered with a spectacular affirmative in the shape of two large buildings erected in record breaking time by two local architectural firms—Paul Gerhardt and Alfred S. Alschuler.

It took just thirty working days for the 250x120 two story plant of the Floyd Manufacturing company at the northwest corner of Diversey and North Harding, to be erected from plans by Architect Gerhardt.

It is of heavy mill construction and the time limit included its complete equipment. The original contracts contemplated seven weeks' time.

"This remarkable speed was made possible by the fact that every one of the workmen put his shoulder to the wheel," said P. M. Leichenko of the Gerhardt office. "Both skilled workmen and laborers, who, by the way, are all union men, have shown remarkable efficiency and have performed more than a good day's work in eight hours."

The second example is the new $1,000,000 postal station at the northeast corner of Jefferson and Quincy streets, designed by Architect Alschuler. It has just been completed in exactly forty-nine working days, which is two to three months less than usually required for such a building. This includes all the mechanical equipment and the extensive system of mail conveyors. The building is four stories and 75x214.

Community House Planned by Glen Ellyn Citizens

With a community club just organized, which ultimately is expected to have every resident of Glen Ellyn on its roster, several civic betterments are planned in the Dupage county town, which should increase property values materially and attract new residents.

The first project contemplated is a nonsectarian community house, with halls for dances, theatricals, and various local entertainments, billiard and pool tables, bowling alleys, and other features. A campaign is planned to bring the attention of rent harassed Chicagoans to the advantages of owning a home in Glen Ellyn.

Temporary officers of the club are W. P. Cooper and Alfred R. Utt. Permanent officers will be chosen at the next meeting. A nominating committee selected comprises Miss Clara Boyle, chairman; J. Grove Butler, superintendent of schools; H. H. Hagen, A. W. Rathbun, and D. D. Robertson.

OLIVET PLANS $600,000 GROUP OF BUILDINGS

Start Depends on Labor Conditions.

If—and of course it's the usual big "if"—labor conditions and material prices adjust themselves to some sort of a sensible level, Chicago's big north side community center, Olivet institute, is going to build a $600,000 group of buildings which will make it one of the finest and most comprehensive social settlements in the world. Work may start around July 1. The necessary funds are now being raised.

Architects Perkins, Fellows and Hamilton have drawn plans for a group of buildings on Blackhawk street, fronting north, extending from Hudson to Cleveland avenue and with a frontage of half a block south on each of those streets.

According to the Rev. Norman B. Barr, superintendent of the institute and pastor of its two churches, Olivet has the same features that Hull house has but in addition looks after the religious welfare of its attendants.

Olivet institute was founded thirty-three years ago and has been a social settlement for twenty years. It caters to boys, girls, men and women of all races and religions. At present it is at 444 Blackhawk street and in addition to maintaining two churches, it has eighteen other buildings, mostly of a temporary character, which will be abandoned when the new institute group is finished. The sub center at Vedder and Penn streets will be continued.

Pays $48,000 for Evanston Residence on Lake Shore

A. M. Kenning of the International Tag company, now living in Winnetka, has bought Fred Ralste's residence at 1040 Lake Shore boulevard, Evanston, lot 75x160, through McGuire & Orr, for a reported $48,000. The residence is stone and has fourteen rooms. The three car garage has an apartment above.

REMODELS RIVER STREET BUILDING.

A. C. Thompson, president of the Great Northern-Majestic Building corporation, has taken over the Santiago office building, at 311-13 River street, from Murray Wolbach, on a long term lease. The building, formerly owned by John Barton Payne, has been vacant for three years. The new lessee will remodel it and open it as the Clayton building.

A Word to Owners of Loop Property

THERE are two obvious phases to a successful realty transaction. The wisdom of the owner in renting his property to a tenant whose occupancy is a boon to the valuation of the premises. And the wisdom of the lessee in selecting a location that holds forth definite possibilities for a flourishing business. When in either case this wisdom is lacking, the transaction is a failure.

In the development of your business property—for the sake of its future valuation—consider your prospective tenant with discretion. Mere consideration of rental without proper heed to the influence that the tenant will have to the property is utter fallacy! You should seriously consider this influence of the prospective tenant to the location and how he will lessen or increase the value of your property. The nature of your tenant's business will establish the character of the immediate locality. Consider the future of the property and how the repute of the tenant will affect the selling price.

A business property specialist! Joseph O. Kaplan has been an analyst of business property for a sufficient number of years to pass knowing judgment on business sites and prospects. He does more than merely bring tenant and owner together. The value of his service is his advice. Advice that an estimable number of Chicago's largest and most active operators in business property heed before they consummate their transactions. Consultation on your particular realty problem will not incur any obligation.

A booklet—"A Brief Study of Business Property"—is now in process of compilation. It will be sent to you gratis, upon request on your letterhead.
